Easter egg hunt

Don't miss the annual Easter Egg Hunt starting at noon, Saturday April 10 at the Deer Hill School Field.

The event, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Department and local civic and business organizations, is geared for children ages three-through-12.

All children receive candy and balloons. There are also about 36 prizes awarded as a result of the hunt.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard a fire truck.

Rain date is Saturday, April 17. To verify hunt status please call 383-6791.

Family literacy program

The Alpha Zeta chapter of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, a sorority for key women educators, invites parents to attend a workshop on family literacy, focusing on the parental role in homework success. There will be teachers presenting information for parents of pre-schoolers through high school age youngsters, tutoring them to be homework helpers.

The workshop will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. April 15, at the Scituate Public Library on Branch Street, adjacent to Central Park and across from the former Dreamwold. The workshop will service parents of children in schools in the South Shore.

Glastonbury Abbey auction

The 10th Annual Auction to benefit the Monks of Glastonbury Abbey will be held at the Hingham High School Gym off Union Street Saturday, April 3.

Many treasures will be available — original art work by local artists as well as large Chinese vases, marble base mantel clocks, many styles of luxurious furnishings, a hand carved bird, a variety of decorative brass objects and many types of antiques will be up for the bidding. You can also bid on Celtics, Red Sox and Bruins tickets, gourmet dinners to be prepared and served in your home, a variety of gift certificates donated by local South Shore Merchants and much, much more.

The preview and afternoon auction start at 1 p.m. evening auction begins at 7 p.m. sharp under the gavel of auctioneer Norm McCullough.

Admission and catalogs are free and refreshments will be available. You may pick up a catalog in advance at the Glastonbury Abbey bookstore.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 90P2100A1
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To the State Treasurer and to all persons interested in the estate of Robert L. Kern late of Cohasset, Norfolk County.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and final accounts of Brian E. Donovan - Public Administrator - (the fiduciary) of said estate have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the fifteenth day of April, 1993 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham this eleventh day of March, 1993.

❒ Chris Ford, president of Hallmark 100 Properties, Ltd., once again recognized Paula Meallo for ending the year as one of the top three producers in the Cohasset office.

Receiving this recognition for three consecutive years, Paula been a multi-million dollar producer for several years.

She attributes her success to her enthusiasm and her understanding of families in transition. She has worked as a relocation specialist for an area hospital during the past five years. Paula and her husband Al have been Cohasset residents for more than 40 years and are the parents of three.

Paula is an active supporter of the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham and assists with its many service activities to the community.

❒ Margy Charles, sales associate, and Judy Parsons, manager of the Cohasset Office of Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker, recently attended the Coldwell Banker 1993 International Business Conference in San Antonio, Texas.

About 6,000 attendees from 2,000 Coldwell Banker offices in North America networked and shred the latest business developments in the industry.

❒ Joann Haag has been named Tops in Listings for January for the Cohasset office of Jack Conway & Company. Ms. Haag works out of the company's Cohasset Office, 861 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. She has consistently been among the company's top producers.

❒ Quincy Hospital announces the appointment of George Louis Herlin, M.D., as its new chief of anesthesia services effective March 1.

He most recently served as chief of anesthesia and chairman of the department of surgery for Presbyterian Healthcare Services, Albuquerque, New Mexico and at the University of Texas Medical Branch.

Dr. Herlin graduated from the University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Texas in 1975. He completed an internship and residency at the Naval Regional Medical Center, San Diego, California between 1975 and 1978. Dr. Herlin is board certified in anesthesia.

Potholes pose problems for spring drivers

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Winter may be on the wane, but the most treacherous driving still lay ahead in many parts of the South Shore.

Potholes have replaced snow as the cause for hazardous road conditions.

"There is so much water, you have to go out every day and patch the same holes," Cohasset Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said.

"We've already brought in our second (truck) load of coal patch. We only went through a couple of buckets last year," he added.

This year's road maintenance budget is $30,000 — the lowest it has been in 10 years, Litchfield said.

However, despite the lack of funding, Cohasset has fared noticeably better than most towns in keeping its 47 miles of roads navigable.

"Nobody's blown any tires or hubcaps that I know of," Litchfield said.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the town has received no complaints about potholes this year.

The same cannot be said of nearby Scituate or Rockland.

Wedding guests, joggers stop to vote in election

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A few joggers and an after-wedding crowd provided a break in what was a very long election day, according to the town clerk's office.

Slightly more than 10 percent or 553 of the town's 5,007 registered voters cast ballots in Saturday's town election.

"It was a long day," recalled Town Clerk Marion Douglas.

Some joggers provided a small voting surge in the early hours. The joggers said they were out anyway so why not vote, the clerk's office said.

Cohasset treasures targeted in tourism brochure

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Tourists may soon view the South Shore as more than the filler between the traditional visitor stops of Quincy and Plymouth.

The Plymouth County Development Council has created the South Shore Heritage Trail for visitors and is targeting the often overlooked coastal communities along the Route 3A corridor.

"The purpose of Heritage Trail, with its Quincy to Plymouth drive-map, is to market those towns in between so they can also get something," explains Brooks Kelly, executive director of the council.

The "something" at stake is substantial. Sarah Graham Mann, the state's director of tourism, says approximately 33 million people visited the Commonwealth last year and contributed $400 million to state and local taxes.

There is a great potential to increase those figures, especially on the South Shore, she says.

"The charm plus the history are a big draw. But it's axiomatic, if you don't invite them, they won't come."

Kelly says Heritage Trail is the council's formal recognition that visitors need a specific invitation to a specific community.

The approach represents a departure from traditional tourism promotions.

"The idea before was if we could get them to stop in

Jones awarded at Boston Garden

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

BOSTON—He has spent his high school years dodging defensive linemen, burying opposing grapplers into the forgiving rubber mats, and soaring through the air before landing in freshly-raked sand for the Cohasset Skippers.

Ray Jones has won a state championship as well as all-scholastic and South Shore League all-star honors too numerous to list. Cohasset's best all-around athlete has been an asset to both the school and town.

But his mother, Aretha Jones, believes her son's selection for the Boston Garden's Good Sport Award, is his biggest achievement of them all.

"This is a big surprise," said Mrs. Jones during last Wednesday's reception in the Boston Garden Tour and History Center for the award winners. "It's a really nice send-off (to college) for him."

Jones was one of 19 Eastern Mass student-athletes to be picked for the award. He received a handsome, framed certificate and a Boston Celtics jacket during halftime of the Celtics/76ers game.

The process of winning the award began early in the school year when CHS physical education teacher Ron Ford approached Jones and asked him if he'd be interested in entering the contest. Jones figured 'why

Library to sell artistic gifts

There is more than books in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Town Meeting March 27 gave library trustees permission to sell the property it has received over the years as gifts.

Among the belongings are five paintings expected to fetch between $16,000 and $29,000 at a May auction held by Skinner Associates.

Another 15 paintings are expected to bring in between $5,000 and $15,000.

The money will be added to the library's endowment.

Salary hikes discouraged

Chances are strong future raises for town employees will not be as generous as they were in the past.

Town Meeting March 27 approved 3.5 percent raises for non-union town hall workers and the firefighters for 1994.

However, advisory committee chairman Nancy A. Roth said the same rate of increases cannot continue.

"We will be settling contracts in 1995 by lower percents, or reducing services," Roth said.

"The police and fire contracts expire in June 1995. At that time the advisory committee will strongly recommend lower numbers."

Good turnout March 27

The warm weather at town meeting March 27 Saturday didn't prevent 279 people from attending Town Meeting March 27 at Cohasset High School.

Quorum of 100 was reached by 10:30 a.m. — 30 minutes after the 10 a.m. start time set.

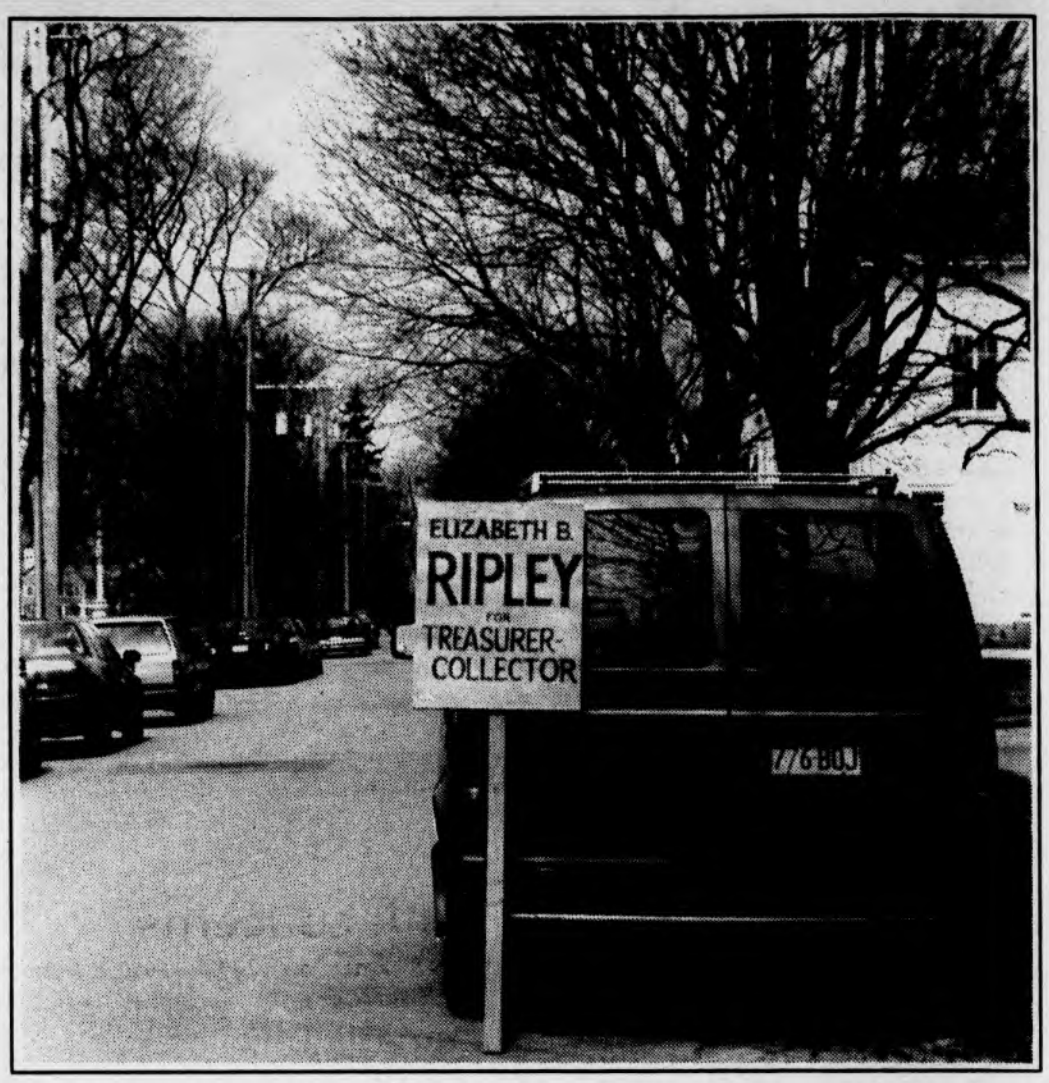
Town clerk Marion Douglas said she was pleased with the amount of people who showed up.

"It was a pretty good turnout for such a beautiful day," Douglas said.

During the six and one-half hours of deliberations, 46 articles were discussed pertaining to the town's $13,600,543 budget.

'Voicemail' sent packing

Town meeting voters squashed a warrant article which would have automated the town hall answering system — and avoided the $11,500 cost to purchase it.



A lonely-looking sign adorns Highland Avenue Saturday during the town election which attracted only 553 of the towns 5,007 registered voters. Elizabeth B. Ripley ran unopposed for Treasurer/Collector gathering 444 votes.

Article 38 asked the town to appropriate $11,500 to buy a "voicemail"/automated attendant answering system.

The measure was soundly trounced by town meeting.

Ball fields off limits

Due to the vast amount of snow this year and the predicted amount of rain in the forecast, it would be appreciated if all groups and individuals would not use the fields until they are ready. There will be a notice to inform you when the fields are ready for use.

Hagerty property update

Selectmen Merle S. Brown and Michael H. Sullivan will follow the Hagerty property purchase through to its completion.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle suggested Brown represent the board because of his environmental expertise.

Sullivan offered to help.

"My feeling is there will be a lot of business and real estate issues. If there's not any problem with two of us getting involved, I'd be willing too," he said.

Town meeting authorized the town to spend up to $470,000 to purchase the harbor-front property.

License change

Selectmen agreed to transfer the liquor license held by Thomas J. Cummings, trustee of Jonathan Livingston Plaza, to David E. Schurga, owner of Joe's Market [illegible] in the plaza which is off Rte. 3A.

But it wasn't before Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle gave Cummings a piece of his mind.

Laugelle accused Cummings of "having no intention of running the store" when he applied for a liquor license last fall.

At that time, Cummings said he planned to open the store and manage it himself.

Cummings said he had "been through a little bit of hell" during the past year following the April 1992 fire at the former Roberts Food Mart which occupied the site.

Selectmen revoked Roberts liquor license in September stating owner William Roberts had abandoned the business. The fire, which was determined to be of suspicious origin, is still under investigation.

Cummings stressed that plans are "to maintain a beer and wine convenience store" at that location.

The board unanimously approved the transfer to Schurga, who also owns stores in Braintree and Quincy.

Schurga said he would be vigilant about not selling liquor to minors.

"I lose money if someone sells to a minor. We have everybody trained," he said.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce President Bob Martin spoke up for Schurga.

"He's an attractive member of the business community," he said.

Step raise approved

Selectmen approved a step-raise Monday for building commissioner Robert Egan from $16.32 to $17.13 an hour effective April 2.

The board tabled taking action on Harbormaster Irving Gadow's step raise from $14.69 to $15.40 per hour until they had time to look over his performance review.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan was miffed that Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon did not have Gadow's review in the selectmen's packet before the meeting.

"I want the reviews in the packet prior to being up for discussion," Sullivan said.

Once granted, Gadow's step increase will take effect April 30.

Gjesteby is chair

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby is the new selectmen chairman taking over from Jane Goedecke. She was the unanimous choice of her fellow board members Monday. The board picked Michael H. Sullivan as vice chairman.

Roadrace was great

Selectman Jane Goedecke congratulated the Rotary Club on the "wonderful roadrace and walking race" last Sunday.

"It was well organized, well run and a lot of fun," she said. (For roadrace coverage please see the Mariner sports section in this edition).

Park concerns

Selectmen decided to send a letter to GID, the developer planning to build a theme park in Hull, with the town's concerns about potential traffic impacts in Cohasset.

The board will send a copy of the letter to the Hull Planning Board.

Hull voters will decide whether to approve zoning changes that will set the stage for the project at their town meeting April 12.

Harborfest is coming

There's lots being planned for Harborfest June 17-20. Organizers Bob Martin and James Lagrotteria gave selectmen an update Monday.

The board approved the Harborfest traffic plan presented for the village.

Commemorative buttons for $10 each — which will serve as admission to the pancake breakfast and chowder fest — will help defray the cost of shuttle buses to and from the Music Circus parking lot and parade costs, Martin said.

Potholes pose problems . . .

Scituate Police also report they have received several pothole complaints.

Rockland Executive Secretary Joseph A. Kellogg said town hall has received 15 to 20 pothole complaints.

"Ninty-five percent have come from Hingham Street," he said.

Mark Webber of Autohaus Inc. Autos on Route 3A in Cohasset said he has seen an increase in business from tire damage caused by potholes.

"There has been more than last year," Webber said. He added that none of his customers told him the damages came from Cohasset roads.

"A lot of commuters have been in and I think they got into trouble on their way to Boston," Webber said.

Blowouts and tire rim damage are the most common casualties of travelling over potholes, he said.

To replace a tire, and provide the necessary alignment can cost from $160 and up, Webber said.

Chris Ketterer of Sullivan Tire at the junction of Routes 53 and 228 said he has not seen any tire damage caused by Cohasset roads, but drivers who use Rockland roads have become the most common customer.

"Seven people came in just last Tuesday with blowouts from Hingham Street in Rockland," Ketterer, a manager of Sullivan Tire, said.

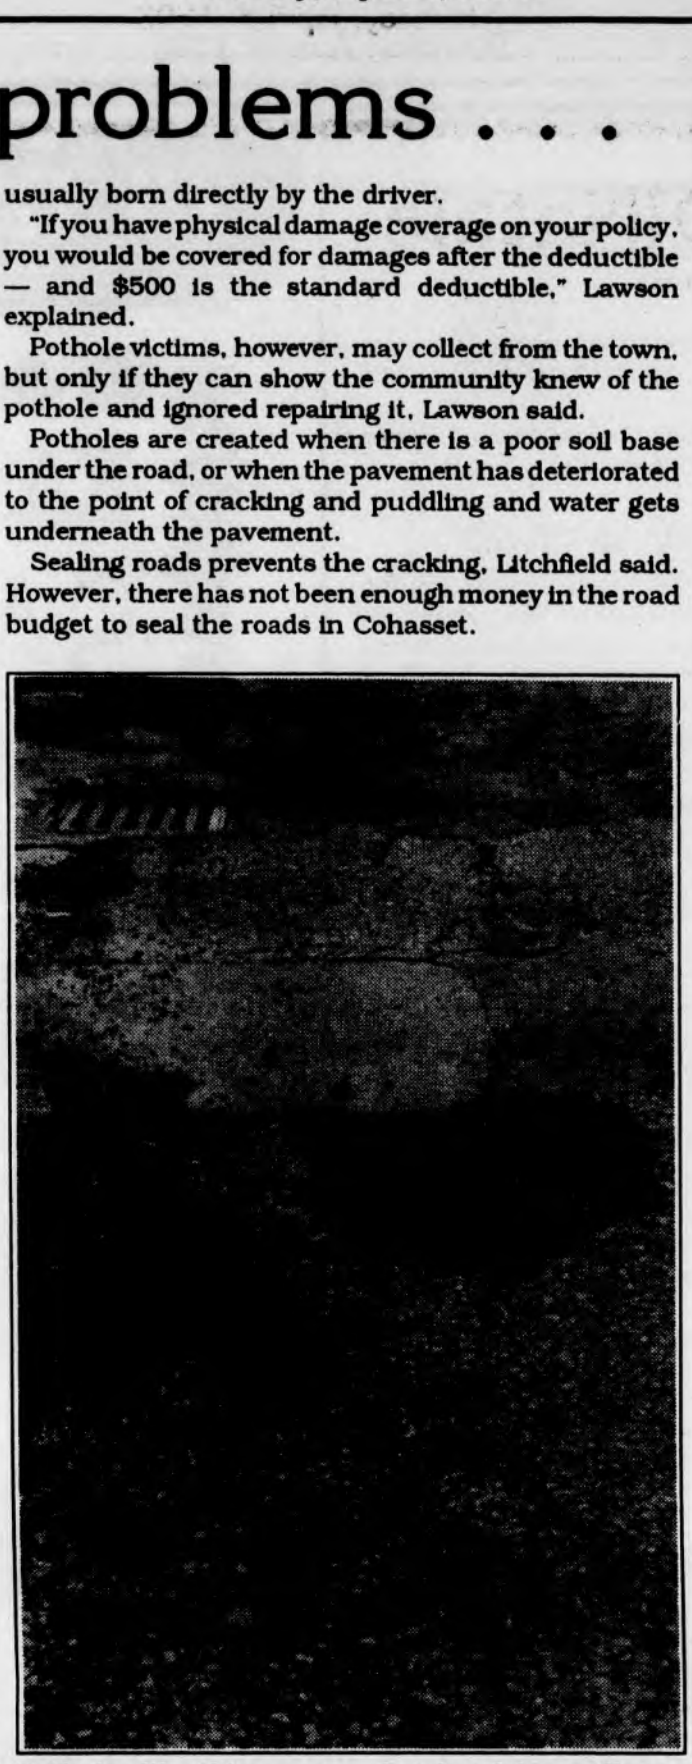
Barbara Lawson, of Burgan Platner & Co., Inc. in Quincy, said most pothole damages are covered by standard insurance policies. However, since most insurance policy-holders have a $500 deductible, and most tire damages don't exceed $500, repair costs are usually born directly by the driver.

"If you have physical damage coverage on your policy, you would be covered for damages after the deductible — and $500 is the standard deductible," Lawson explained.

Pothole victims, however, may collect from the town, but only if they can show the community knew of the pothole and ignored repairing it, Lawson said.

Potholes are created when there is a poor soil base under the road, or when the pavement has deteriorated to the point of cracking and puddling and water gets underneath the pavement.

Sealing roads prevents the cracking, Litchfield said. However, there has not been enough money in the road budget to seal the roads in Cohasset.



Potholes like this one are plaguing drivers all over the South Shore.

Hubcaps resting on the side of the road serve as monuments to the flat tires, bent wheels, and broken suspensions of the cars and trucks that have gone before.

And after an 11 a.m. wedding, the election site at the town hall auditorium experienced another mini-rush with a group of voters dressed in their finest.

Otherwise it was slow, slow, slow.

Of the 19 people running — 18 won.

The only contested race was a four-way contest for three seats on the board of library trustees. Cohasset senior citizen, Ellery Clark, an athlete and scholar, who came away with 225 votes, unsuccessfully challenged three female incumbents.

Receiving write-in votes were Arne Gjesteby (2) and Judith Fitzsimmons (1) for school committee and Raymond Kasperowicz (2), F. Roy Fitzsimmons (2), and Lillian Curley (1) for selectmen.

The candidate with the most votes — 459 — was Harold Litchfield who was running unopposed for highway surveyor.

For full election results, please see page 11.

Anne DiNatale

Name: Anne DiNatale.

Occupation: Owner, Stockade Inc fence store.

Best day of your life: Day we got our shop in Cohasset.

Most embarrassing moment: My husband knows fences because he builds them, but I had to study the different types of fences before we opened so I could answer any question. After all the preparation, the first customer in our shop asked me the simple question 'What kind of fence is that?' I confidently said 'board-on-board.' It was really Chestnut Hill and my husband had to correct me — quietly.

Goal: To expand our business.

Favorite season: Spring.

Best vacation: The cruise we took after our first year of being in business for ourselves.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: When my husband and his partner leave the the workshop door open and sawdust settles in the showroom.

Favorite book: "Gone with the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell.

Favorite movie: "The Sound of Music."

Biggest worry: That people won't need their fences replaced.

Favorite place: Hawaii.

Favorite junk-food: Chocolate.

Person you would most like to meet: President Bill Clinton. As a small business owner, I have a few things I'd like to discuss with him.

Cohasset treasures targeted in tourism brochure

Plymouth, they'd visit the rest of the South Shore," Kelly says.

"They didn't. We have to be more aggressive now with other parts of the South Shore."

Fortunately, the draws to those other parts already exist.

There are five attractions listed for Cohasset in Heritage Trail, including the contemporary South Shore Art Center and the historic Caleb Lothrop House.

In Weymouth, the birthplace of Abigail Smith Adams is noted, as is Hingham's Old Ship Church, built in 1681.

Historic and contemporary sites in Braintree, Hull, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury and Kingston are also included in Heritage Trail — in addition to information on the more well known tourist attractions in Quincy and Plymouth.

"The resources are almost limitless. It's just a question of packaging it for tourists," Kelly says.

"When you travel out West, where if something is two years old they claim it as history, you see the potential here."

The Route 3A corridor promotion may receive an even bigger boost from Scituate, where the groundwork is just starting for the creation of one and perhaps two museums relating to the maritime history of the community.

Scituate Historical Society president Kathleen Laidlaw says maritime history and the tradition of the Irish moss industry in town would be the focus of the two museums. Public money would supplement private donations to establish the museums, she said.

"We already have seven historical sites," Laidlaw boasts. "We are promoting what we have here in Scituate so people don't go from Boston to Quincy right through to Plymouth."

Scituate's activist approach to tourism is the exception among those communities new to the visitor spotlight, Kelly says.

"Why some of these people don't see more potential I don't know.

"There are those who suggest that because we are all old Yankees, and it would require an outlay of money, it must be evil," he adds, only half-kidding.

He says local merchants really need to lead the charge because they would benefit most from the increase in tourists.

"With the exception of the local hotel tax, the money doesn't go directly to a town."

Since 1985, communities have been allowed to levy a local option hotel tax up to a maximum of four percent.

There are five Cohasset attractions listed in South Shore Heritage Trail including the Caleb Lothrup House shown here. (Photo by Mary Ford)

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce president Robert E. Martin says merchants want increased tourism but don't know where to begin.

"There is an established tourism industry in Boston," Martin says. "But when you get up into the hinterland, you are dealing with mom-and-pop operations. I don't think we have a very good handle on tourism or how to attract tourists."

Education is part of the mission of the Plymouth County Development Council, says Kelly.

"There is a greater awareness that tourism could help these communities. We are trying to develop that awareness into a push, into action."

Approximately 100,000 South Shore Heritage Trail booklets will be unveiled in hotels, information centers and travel locations in April.

Some of the booklets also will be distributed to corporations inside the Route 128 belt.

Kelly says studies show that 80 percent of the visitors to Massachusetts come to see a relative. He hopes to get a booklet in the hands of those relatives working in the area.

Dispatch changes bottom line

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

There may be an additional firefighter and police officer manning each shift in the future as centralized dispatch becomes a reality in Cohasset.

At least, that is the recently released recommendation of the committee for the study of the structure of public safety services.

The committee evaluated five public safety alternatives and recommended centralizing dispatch functions between the police and fire departments with civilian dispatchers.

With a five to two vote, the committee also recommended that the current firefighters and police officers who assume those dispatch functions be put on the front lines — effectively increasing personnel performing police and firefighting duties.

"The Cohasset Police duty-supervisor (a sergeant), who is currently tied to the desk, will be able to supervise officers on the streets where he is really needed and where he truly belongs, in addition to providing back-up functions as needed. One firefighter, previously tied to the fire desk, will now be available to complement the firefighting potential summoned by the public. This will bring the number of responding personnel up to a minimum of five, improving overall scene operations and enhancing safety," Peter C. Donovan wrote in the committee report.

Donovan was one of seven voting committee members. Fire Chief John R. Nadeau and Police Chief Brian Noonan were ex-officio members on the committee.

The recommendation, which is expected to cost $172,900, would increase an already disproportionately large fire department budget, the study says.

The committee, which was established by the 1992 town meeting, compared the amount Cohasset spends on its fire department with how much other communities spend.

According to the report, Cohasset spends three times as much per capita on its fire department.

Cohasset spends $144 per person on its fire department, while an average of all town in Massachusetts revealed that they spend $46 per person on their fire departments.

The committee considered and discarded the option of phasing out the firefighter and police officer positions which would be assumed by hiring civilian dispatchers.

The town would save $142,163 if those police and firefighter positions were eliminated as a result of adopting a centralized, civilian-manned dispatch center.

Two other options which received no support from the committee were to create a second fire station with central dispatch functions and change to an all-call fire department.

However, two committee members did vote to decrease the number of permanent fire fighters and increase the number of call firefighters in the department.

Specifically, the option allowed a permanent firefighter and officer to remain at the fire station at all times. Their presence would be supplemented with call firefighters. According to the committee report, in order for a mixed permanent-call firefighting force to be a viable option, the committee states that the call force would have to be increased to 48.

There are currently 39 call firefighters.

The town, however, would gain in the long-run and save $448,022 a year by implementing a mixed call and permanent firefighting force.

Raymond Kasperowicz was one of two committee members who voted for a mixed fire department.

"Based on Department of Revenue data, among 44 comparable communities throughout the commonwealth, Cohasset's fire department is the most expensive," Kasperowicz wrote in the report.

"Many small towns such as Dover, Rockport and Rehoboth have successfully operated full call fire/ambulance services for about $150,000 per year. Cohasset's department will cost over $1,100,000."

The committee was created by town meeting last year and made its report public March 27.

Other committee members are Selectman Merle S. Brown, Clifford Mitman Jr., Dennis L. Roth, Katherine Stanton, and James P. Yess.

Duplicate bridge starts

A new session of duplicate bridge starts at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., Friday morning, April 9, at 10 a.m.

Points and prizes will be given out periodically. Each session will begin with a brief lecture highlighting scoring and duplicate bridge techniques for those who are interested. The mini-lessons will be conducted by Anne Bell.

The fee is $4 which includes the mini-lesson. For more information or to register, call 749-9786. There is also a new class at 7 p.m. Tuesdays.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

WHEN SHOULD I LIST MY HOME?

QUESTION: We would like to sell our home next spring during the peak selling months. When should we list it with a Realtor?

ANSWER: Don't wait for the target months to arrive. Put your house up for sale during February or March — BEFORE the heavy selling. True, more prospects will be looking during the peak months — but, then again, more homeowners will be selling. The shrewd homeowner who wants to sell his home for a summer move, should list it before the influx of the heavy bulk of sellers.

During quieter periods, the Realtor can put more time, effort and advertising into selling your home and there will be less competition.

❑ We give Danny Pompeo a standing ovation this week as he wound up his hockey season at Babson College on an unbelievable note!! Dan was elected to the second string All-American Team, Division II, and was second in the scoring in the country for Division III! With his college hockey behind him, Dan will probably be playing in Europe next year.

Book your flights now!

❑ Speaking of hockey, Gary Smith couldn't be happier! His Alma Mater, University of Maine, won the title this past week, and did it well. Gary is thrilled with the whole thing!

❑ Congratulations go to Joey Laugelle this week! He just completed the courses needed to be a helicopter pilot and we know he'll be a darn good one. Joe (Doc Skinna) and RoseMary Laugelle are bursting with pride at Joey's accomplishment, and we are too!

❑ Here's hoping that Arne Gjesteby is feeling much better as he reads this! With Martha behind him, we are sure that he will.

❑ Stephen Pattison just graduated from Paris Island in South Carolina and is a Marine! Now Stephen is heading to Marine Combat Training in North Carolina, and we know he'll be outstanding!

❑ Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery Ritz who were married last Saturday at the Second Congregational Church. Laura is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roger Pompeo. They wrote their own ceremony and it was an experience loved by everyone there! Laura looked like a beautiful Madame Alexander Doll, and they both made a super couple at the altar. Here's to many years of happiness and health to you both!

❑ Welcome Christopher Brendan Duffey, the brand new son of Katie and Brendan Duffey! Christopher was born April 10 at 10:57 a.m. and weighed in at 8 lbs. 1 oz! Bobbi Cox is the maternal grandmother and Jack and Carmel Duffey are the paternal grandparents.

All of you enjoy Christopher, he'll grow up so fast!

❑ We want to let you know about another baby born too! Peter James McKenna, son of Mary-Kate McKenna and Jim, who was born April 24 at 2:20 a.m. and weighed in at 9 pounds, 9-1/2 ounces! John Patrick, Peter's brother, is thrilled to have a baby brother. They will be raising the dickens together in no time! Arthur P. Gorham, the maternal grandfather, couldn't be more thrilled either!

Have a grand time with Peter, everyone, and love him to pieces!

❑ Hats off to Ray Jones, selected one of the winners of the Good Sport Award, sponsored by New Boston Garden Corp., Hillshire Farm & Kahn's and Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc. A ceremony was held to honor Ray at the Boston Garden March 31, and Ray was awarded a Celtics' jacket, an award certificate, and tickets to the Celtics' game.

Again, congratulations, Ray, on your outstanding good sportsmanship, we are thrilled for you.

❑ Tina Rousseau is proud of herself and with good reason! She was part of the Thayer Winter Sports Awards announcement as a member of the swim team. Tina is part of the Thayer team that is showing much growth and improvement in only its second year, and wound up with a record of 3-4 and was applauded as being a strong swimmer. Thayer and Cohasset are lucky to have you!

❑ On the subject of Thayer Academy, we must mention Robin DeVito and her remarkable job in her performance as part of the cast of "Into The Woods," performed March 5, 6 and 7. A grand time was had by all, and they all earned themselves a standing ovation for their efforts, which we are sure they enjoyed!

Sara Delia Downey

Sara Delia (Cunningham) Downey, 63, of Cohasset, a retired wordsmith, English teacher and editor of legal transcripts, died April 2 at the home of her daughter in Cohasset.

Born in Princeton, Ky., she had lived in Tampa, Fla., before moving to Cohasset more than three years ago.

She graduated from Murray State University in Kentucky and from the University of Tampa in 1960.

Ms. Downey worked for the Vista Volunteer Corps in Florida, where she trained volunteers. She also helped to organize the Florida Migrant Workers and was the Executive Secretary to the Commander of the Salvation Army in Tampa from 1982 to 1989.

After her retirement in 1989, she volunteered at the Cohasset Public library.

She sang with the Sun Coast Opera in Tampa.

She leaves three sons, Randy Hardeman of Reading, Penn., Mark Hardeman of Lafayette, La. and Rick Hardeman of Los Angeles, Calif.; a daughter, Gayl Varallo of Cohasset; a brother, Mark Cunningham Jr. of Orlando, Fla.; four grandchildren and five stepgrandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated April 5 at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the South Shore Visiting Nurse Association, P.O. Box 9060, Braintree 02184, or to the American Cancer Society.

around town

❑ Lots of people remember Dr. Frank Giuliano, Jr. when he was principal of CHS during the '70s. He is now the superintendent of the Milton Public Schools, and can you believe he is going to retire at the end of the school year? There is going to be a testimonial dinner honoring Frank Thursday, May 13, at Lombardo's in Randolph, and we will bet that there will be a banner crowd there!

Best of luck to you in your brand new life; we know that you will enjoy every minute of it!

❑ Congratulations to Christian Ford who won the Good Citizen's Award given by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Christian was chosen by the faculty and his peers, an award that shows dependability, leadership, service and patriotism. Christian also received the Holy Cross Book and is a National Merit Semifinalist! And folks, is planning to go to medical school! Isn't that the type of doctor you would like in the future?

❑ Tons of Marathon (Cohasset By the Sea road race) thanks to Susie Reardon for the water she provided at the top of Red Gate Lane! Also Kristen Reardon and Lisa Parker! Great job!

❑ Don't forget the concert April 14 at the high school at 7:30 p.m. Please check the details within this edition of the Mariner.

User-friendly

Efficient government may be an oxymoron, said Cohasset Chamber of Commerce President Bob Martin.

But efficient business may be as well, he quickly added.

"What it all boils down to is people," Bob told those at the Chamber's second annual "Unity" breakfast Tuesday.

The annual event is all about promoting communication between town government and those it serves.

Bob complimented town officials and board members present on the smooth way town meeting was conducted March 27. He noted "perhaps there's more unity in town than in the past" and said that people were treated with respect at town meeting.

"That's what it's all about making government more user friendly," he said.

At the Cohasset Mariner we believe that the best tax dollar spent is the one closest to home. Local government — although far from perfect — has far less bureaucracy and more accountability than its counterparts at the state or federal level.

And elected town officials are not career politicians. They are your friends and neighbors and apart from elected full-time posts such as the treasurer/collector, highway surveyor, or town clerk — town officials are volunteers.

But being an elected or appointed "volunteer" doesn't absolve anyone from the responsibility of serving you, the public. And that means answering your questions no matter how irrelevant they may seem.

In his own self-effacing way, Bob said "we" meaning the townspeople are "stupid."

"Tell us why, explain it to us. It's unfortunate that you have to do that over and over again. That's your job. But let us down gently," he said.

In light of the recent election in which 14 out of 15 posts went uncontested, it may seem as though there aren't enough people willing to serve in town government in Cohasset.

Don't believe that for a minute.

Cohasset has a wealth of citizenry as evidenced Monday night when six talented people applied for a single vacancy on the board of library trustees. A similar situation occurred recently when three applied for a vacancy on the harbor committee and two for an associate member's position on the conservation commission.

There is no doubt that the town has ready, able, and willing folk anxious to give their time to the place they call home. We hope that those who are not picked for a spot will not get discouraged and try again.

But whether you prefer active involvement like serving in town government or the more passive variety like staying abreast of local happenings by reading the newspaper — both sides must communicate for government to work.

"Talking gets us someplace. Rubbing elbows may cause friction but you get the rough edges off by rubbing elbows," Bob said.

"Things have to be questioned. Someone has to stand up and say this shouldn't happen.

"We should be looking for ways not to fight. We are all blessed so greatly. We should cooperate and work together and make this an easier place to live.

"And remember to smile a lot," he added.

Hat's off to the Chamber of Commerce for organizing a worthwhile event and for the user-friendly reminder that government is all of us.

Sex ed. should focus on abstinence

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Mike Gill, health education director, and a copy was sent to the Cohasset Mariner for publication.)

Dear Mr. Gill,

I am writing in reference to the recent meeting on the proposed AIDS awareness curriculum for Cohasset schools. Although I was not able to attend the meeting, as a parent of three children in all three schools in Cohasset, I am very interested in the content of the material presented to my children concerning AIDS and human sexuality.

My concerns are as follows:

I strongly question whether children as young as nine are ready to deal with issues of promiscuous hetero- or homosexual behavior. I feel we as a country are being brainwashed into believing it is crucial to teach children about AIDS at the youngest possible age. I sincerely doubt that a majority of third-graders in Osgood School are sexually active, and to introduce material based on sexual intercourse at such a young ages will, in my opinion, legitimize such behavior in the children's eyes as they grow older, rather than reduce its occurrence. Thus, I feel third grade is too young to introduce sexuality-based materials to the children and that this material should be introduced at a later age, possibly sixth or seventh grade.

In addition, I feel that once the children are old enough to deal with sexual issues being discussed in the school, abstinence cannot be stressed enough as the only 100 percent effective means to avoid sexually transmitted diseases. Abstinence should not be taught as an afterthought, but as the primary defense. I would hope that any curricula introduced to older children would be focused on abstinence as the first choice for our children to follow.

However, I do recognize that there is a great deal of sexual activity among older students in the Cohasset schools. For this reason, I strongly object to the idea of high school seniors talking to my child about sexual issues, which I understand is one way it is being proposed that the children will be taught about AIDS. These students would be seen as very influential role models by these children. How can you be sure what they will tell the children, or what kind of values they will express? As a parent, this idea disturbs me – that a teenager that I know nothing about, whose values and behavior are unknown to me, would be able to influence my child with the school's blessing and permission.

Contrary to public belief, not all parents are totally uninvolved in teaching their children about sexuality. My children and I have had several discussions about human sexuality, during which we as parents have been able to express to them our values and morals. The schools should not see it as their duty to do this teaching in the parents' place in the cases when parents are actively involved in teaching their children. Although I am aware that the rationale for school-based sexual education is "parents are not teaching their children about sex, so the schools must step in the gap," the evidence of increased teen pregnancies, abortions, and the sky-rocketing birth rate of unwed mothers which the Globe recently covered, is proof to me that school-based teaching on sexuality has failed miserably to combat these problems. In fact, I am coming to the belief that most school sexual education actually exacerbates these problems when done in a value neutral, non abstinence-based way! It is my sincere hope that the Cohasset school system will not fall into this same trap which is ultimately so destructive to our childrens' health and lives.

Bills forced pumper retirement

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Mr. R.M. Campbell, 75 Old Pasture Rd., in response to his letter which appeared in the Mariner last week.)

Dear Mr. Campbell:

Thank you for your recent commentary concerning the "old pumper," Engine 22. Retiring Engine 22 was a decision that I made following estimated repair bills in excess of $4,000, combined with my concern of future probable system malfunctions. Reliance in a 32-year-old vehicle for fire ground support is not a reasonable and prudent practice.

Replacement of this pumper has repeatedly been a part of the department's annual budget request for several years. The postponement of this purchase has resulted in our current dilemma.

Our mechanic continues his attempts to secure replacement parts. Unfortunately, availability is limited and pricing is at a premium for "antique" parts.

We are also exploring the possibility of a short-term rental or lease. Both options to date have been unsuccessful. Should an option present itself, it will be forwarded to selectmen for consideration and funding.

In the meantime, we're doing the best we can to keep our two remaining engines in service, minimizing downtime and increased exposure risk.

Theme park is Trojan Horse

Dear Board Members:

Re: Theme Park At the Hall Estate, Hull

We respectfully request that your Board continue to very closely monitor the above referenced development proposal for obvious reasons (traffic, etc.).

We realize that we are in a minority, but we regard it as a disgrace that our State Government encourages gambling (lottery).

It's obvious that the Theme Park is a Trojan Horse for an eventual gambling casino.

Proposed theme park will turn into Atlantic City

(Editor's note: The following letters were sent to the board of selectmen).

Dear Board Members:

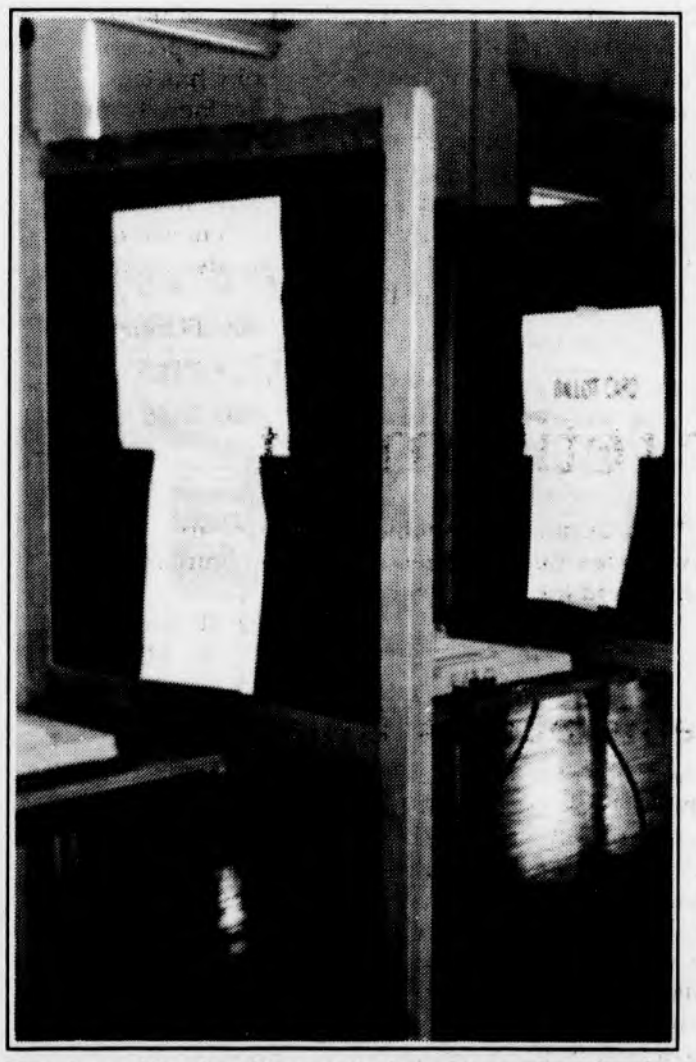
Re: Theme Park, Hall Estate, Hull.

I attended your Board meeting and the Hull Planning Board Meeting recently and listened to the presentation made by Mr. O'Rourke of GID.

We are very much opposed to this proposed theme park, and I have written to the Hull Planning Board (copy enclosed) expressing my objections.

I am wondering if your Board will be pursuing the issue of a traffic impact study regarding Cohasset. We feel the traffic which will be using Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road out to West Corner will have a terrible effect on the town, not to mention a disastrous effect on our property values. I was concerned that no one from our town government was present at the Hull Planning Board meeting. Who is looking out for our interests?

We are strongly against legalized gambling in this state, and feel that this park will turn into another Atlantic City — with all the crime and prostitution and drugs that go along with it.



Empty voting booths made for a long day during Saturday's town election which attracted slightly more than 10 percent of Cohasset's registered voters to the polls. (Staff photo/Laura Gilpatric)

The next meeting of the Hull Planning Board to continue discussion on this matter will be April 6. I will be attending and hope that someone from our town government will also be there to voice objections to this proposed park.

The mere sight of the "balloon" over the Hall Estate condominiums is warning enough for all of us. The balloon represents the height of the roller coaster and ferris wheel; the water slide, etc. will be 75' in height compared to that of 125'. Not only will this be a horrible eyesore, noise pollutant, traffic nightmare — etc., but the element of crime must be considered.

Please represent the people of Cohasset and attend the Planning Board Meeting April 6 and speak out against this park which will be a terrible mistake for this entire area.

Other options for Hull property

Planning Board Members
Town of Hull
Town Hall
Hull, Massachusetts

Dear Board Members:

I am writing to you with reference to the proposed theme park at the Hall Estate in Hull.

I realize that as a resident of Cohasset, my opinion has no bearing on your decision for your town. However, I would respectfully request the opportunity to let you know my feelings on the location of this park.

Before moving to Cohasset, we lived in the western part of the state. I was born in Springfield which is adjacent to Agawam, MA. As probably many of you, I grew up near a large amusement park; that being, Riverside. As a child it was a wonderful place to go with our parents. However, over the last 15 or so years, it has changed. The times and the people have changed, and unfortunately, I do not believe things will ever be the same as they were when we were growing up.

Although when we moved here in 1984, Paragon Park was soon demolished, we have been told by neighbors, that Paragon suffered the same decline as we witnessed at Riverside.

Therefore, I am very much opposed to another park being built in this area. I just do not believe that it will be beneficial to your town or ours. The lights, noise, traffic, etc., I feel, will have a very negative effect on the towns of Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

Unfortunately, it is a sad fact of our times, that wherever young people congregate today, people trafficking in drugs also congregate. Violence also seems a constant companion nowadays to our young people.

I have a 16-year-old, and the last thing I would want is for him to either frequent a park or work at one.

If I may, I would like to make a suggestion through you to Mr. O'Rourke of GID. Last summer my son attended the Nick Bollettieri Tennis Academy in Bradenton, Florida. It was a wonderful experience. He met young people attending (most for six to eight weeks at a time) from all over the world. My son attended for only two weeks because of the expense involved. The Camp had 25 outdoor courts and four indoor; a swimming pool; a game room, dormitories; cafeterias, laundromat; and instruction and dormitory facilities for both adults and children through teenager. Because the attendees lived on the premises, night time activities were planned within the town as well as weekend activities not to mention daily excursions into town for any variety of things needed.

I am also enclosing a brochure on the Adidas Tennis Camp (I tried to locate a brochure for Nick Bollettieri, but was unable to find one).

I would respectfully request that you give other options for this property some consideration.

Something along the lines of this Tennis Camp would be a year-round endeavor and would benefit the entire town not just the park itself.

Thank you for your time and any consideration you will give to this matter.

Virginia A. Ferenz

Trustee vacancy draws a crowd

The town election may have passed Saturday with a great big yawn but the selectmen's meeting created lots of interest Monday.

Six citizens initially threw their hats into the ring to fill a single vacancy on the board of library trustees.

The vacancy was created due to the recent death of library trustee Elizabeth F. Eaton.

At the eleventh hour, candidate Robert Beggan withdrew his name. And it was not clear if candidate Anne Bowdoin received messages the selectmen's office left on her tape.

The combined boards of trustees and selectmen interviewed four for the post.

Patience Towle, 180 Lamberts Lane, who was the boards' eventual choice, was candid when asked why she didn't run in the town election against the incumbents.

"I watch the existing trustees in operation and didn't feel there was a great void that needed to be corrected," she said. "None needed to be knocked off her perch."

Towle, who has been president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library for three years, talked about how the Friends have expanded the volunteer base at the library; increased fund-raising efforts; and designed an new logo which is featured on the library cards, stationary and book bags.

Ellery Clark, 262 Jerusalem Rd., who unsuccessfully tried to unseat one of the incumbents in the town election, praised the library.

"I'm darn proud of all the people and the trustees of course for its excellence," he said.

Lenora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Rd., said she would work for innovative and creative ways to stay within the budget and maintain services. Jenkins said she'd like to see the library share resources with the school libraries.

James Whelan, 136 Atlantic Ave., said he'd like to give something back.

"I've used the library for 40 years," he said. "I have an affection for it and I'd like to pay back the library for enjoyment I've had.

"I'm neither Tory nor Conservative, leftist or rightist. I'm not a revolutionary but if I can help in any way, I'd like to do it," he said.

Clark's name was put in nomination by Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, seconded by Trustee George Haley. The vote for Clark was 4-9.

Trustee Barbara Power placed Towle's name in nomination seconded by Trustee Agnes McCann. The boards voted unanimously to appoint Towle as library trustee.

By statute a vacancy on an elected board can be filled by appointment at a combined meeting between selectmen and board with the vacancy. The combined boards' take a roll call vote on any nominations. The nominee receiving a majority vote fills the position until the next town election.

Snow account melts

Clearing the roads this winter cost the town $85,000 which is $40,000 more than budgeted for.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the town has enough money to cover the deficit but not in "that drawer" (the line-item/snow account).

Veterans' benefits paid

Selectmen approved a transfer of $2,972 to pay for April, May and June veterans' benefits.

Unicorn Singers perform

The spring program offered by the Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Margo Euler, will feature the choral music of Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and Kirke Mechem. Highlights will include the dramatic "In the Beginning" by Copland, which describes in memorable color the story of the Creation; the mezzo solo in this challenging work will be sung by Diane Whiting of Scituate.

Bernstein's choruses from "The Lark" will treat the audience to drum sounds and hand bell accents by the singers, and a solo contribution by Diane Edson of Hingham. In "Dan-u-el," Kirke Mechem describes in an energetic spiritual the story of abolitionist John Brown, with a rhythmically powerful solo sung by Hingham's John Kaloyanides.

There will be two performances of American Kaleidoscope: Saturday, April 24, at 8 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset (on the green) and Sunday, April 25, at 4 p.m. at Brandon Woods, Hingham (110 Charles St.).

Tickets (purchased in advance) are $8 and $6 (seniors, students); they are good for either performance. Tickets are available at Noble's Camera (in Hingham Square), and at First Parish, Cohasset (church office open M-Th 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.), or by mailing a check (to the Unicorn Singers) to 66 Lincoln St. in Hingham. For more information call 749-6561. All tickets will be $10 at the door.

Proposed hockey merger on hold

School Supt. Stephen Hart recommended that the high school maintain its hockey program as it presently exists and not pursue possible plans to form a cooperative team with Hull.

Hart's recommendation was consistent with those of the ad hoc committee formed to investigate the merits of a cooperative team. The committee was made up of Cohasset High School hockey coach Dennis Walsh, students, parents and school committee member Ralph Kidder.

"All of the committee agreed that the primary concern is to do the best for our students," Hart explained.

Issues which the ad hoc committee addressed included the safety of the students and the level of participation in the program.

"Safety had been a concern. Some of the younger players had really been competing against older players," Hart explained. "But I've found that Dennis Walsh has handled this very well through agreements with other coaches to make sure certain lines only play against certain other lines. There haven't been a lot of injuries as compared with other sports."

Hart also reported that a survey shows that there are an increasing number of students participating in the program.

"My recommendation is consistent with that of the ad hoc committee and it is that we maintain our hockey program as it presently exists and continue to look at the possibility of forming a cooperative team at some point in the future," he said.

St. Stephen's Church

The Rt. Rev. David E. Johnson, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, will be the celebrant at the Great Vigil of Easter, at 7 p.m. Saturday, April 10, at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave. There will be Holy Eucharist, baptism, and confirmation, followed by a reception in the Bartow Room of the Parish House.

The Easter Vigil is a candlelight service and announces the resurrection with great beauty. At the conclusion of the service there is a great peal of bells from the church's carillon in celebration of Jesus' new life.

Worship Easter morning will take place at 8 and 10 a.m. with sermon and full choir at each service. In addition, a trumpeter playing a "natural trumpet" will add to the festal music.

A schedule of this worship is as follows:

Maundy Thursday, April 8: Twenty-four hour Prayer Watch begins at 3 p.m. Evensong is sung at 5:30 p.m. The Holy Eucharist for Maundy Thursday is celebrated at 7 p.m. with an Agape meal and the stripping of the altar.

Good Friday, April 9: Good Friday Liturgy begins at noon and continues until 3 p.m., traditionally understood as the time Jesus hung on the cross. Also at 3 p.m. the 24-hour Prayer Watch ends. A children's Good Friday service is held from 2:30 to 3 p.m.

Holy Saturday, April 10: Morning worship at 9 a.m.

The Great Vigil of Easter, April 10: The Lighting of the Paschal Candle and Celebration of Holy Eucharist with baptism and confirmation, Bishop Johnson celebrating, will take place at 7 p.m. A reception will follow in the Bartow Room.

Easter Day, April 11: Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m. with special music at both services including a trumpeter playing an instrument known as a natural trumpet.

Holy Week, St. Anthony's

Masses on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday at 7 a.m.; Mass on Holy Thursday, 7 p.m., Adoration 8-10 p.m.; Good Friday (Fast and Abstinence) 3 p.m., Liturgy, Veneration of the Cross; Holy Saturday 7 p.m., Easter Vigil, Holy Mass; Easter Sunday Masses, 8, 9:30 & 11:30 a.m.

Happy Easter!

Ed Sheehan breaks the tape to win the 17th annual Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea. An original native of the South Shore, it was Sheehan's first victory after three second-place finishes. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Sheehan holds off Curran for win

By Joe Reardon

Ed Sheehan may live in Somerville but he still has a soft spot in his heart for the South Shore.

After all, he grew up in East Weymouth and spent several years running the roads and trails along the South Shore.

He still fits time into his busy schedule to do the same.

Instead of dodging city traffic on his weekend training runs, Sheehan, a graduate and former cross-country coach at Harvard University, heads south and runs through Wampatuck State Park in Hingham and the surrounding towns.

"I love it here," he said. "Cohasset, Weymouth, Hingham and Scituate — they're all home for me."

Sheehan was home again on Sunday — this time in Cohasset — where he held off a charging Steve Curran and a field of 734 runners to take the 17th annual Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea. Sheehan's winning time of 31:47 over the rolling 10K course was eight seconds in front of Curran.

Greg DeMeo finished third (32:02), followed by Ukranian Vladimir Kirvoy (32:15) of Halifax. Weymouth's Robert Chasen continued his consistent showing in the race by finishing fifth (32:28) .

Michelle Bociek of Concord showed she is on track for a strong showing in the April 19, Boston Marathon by slicing a minute off her personal best to easily win the Women's Division in 37:52.

Sheehan was glad to be back racing on the South Shore after missing six weeks with a hamstring injury. He showed that from the start. Sheehan wasted no time in asserting himself when the gun sounded by immediately taking the lead as the pack wound its way past the small shops in Cohasset Village.

He passed the the mile (4:53) and two mile (9:50) alone, before turning onto the winding Jerusalem Ave., section of the course.

While Sheehan ran by himself nearing the three-mile mark, which he went through in 14:50, Curran and DeMeo, former college roommates at Fitchburgh State College, dueled along Jerusalem Ave., jockeying for second place. DeMeo held a slim lead through four miles before Curran made a strong surge at five miles to break away. He then set his sights on Sheehan, 100-yards in the lead.

Curran ran hard enough to slice Sheehan's lead in half with just under one mile to go. But that would be as close as he would come to the three-time runner-up.

"Ed was in a class by himself today," said Curran, who is currently living in Australia. "He's from this area and knows the course pretty well. When he saw the (First Parish) church he put in another burst and I couldn't catch him."

Sheehan, who ran a personal best 2:13:46 in the 1982 Boston Marathon, said he wanted to build a lead before the rolling section of the course. A strong downhill runner, Sheehan admitted he was tentative of pushing the pace on the down slopes because of his hamstring. The scenario he wanted to face was a one-on-one duel with Curran where he would be forced to push the downhill sections of the course.

Sheehan admitted after the race that he was tired from the amount of training he was putting in the eight weeks he has been back training. He was confident, however, the work would pay off during the races he plans to run this summer.

"I'm training quite a bit now," Sheehan said. "I'm running about 130 miles a week. It takes a lot of wind out of my sails but it's getting me back in shape. I'm going to take a break from racing and start up again in May or June."

On the women's side, Bociek ran unchallenged from start to finish. She crossed the line 51 seconds in front of runner-up Kim Ionia (38:43). Hull's Barbara Myers was third in 41:51.

Bociek, who trains from 60-70 miles each week, had no idea how close her competition was to her throughout the race.

"I didn't see any other women," she said. "I don't know who was behind me.

Despite Bociek's easy margin of victory, she said she pushed hard along the course to set a new PR.

"I've trained hard and felt good. I did work it, though. I'll say that."

Bociek, who has run a 3:07 in the Marine Corps Marathon in Washington D.C., and hopes to break the three-hour barrier at Boston, said she looks forward to running the Cohasset race every year.

"It's lovely, just beautiful. That's why I run it."

Sheehan and Bociek weren't the only stars on the day. Eleven-year-old Peter Minnar, a fifth-grader at the Deer Hill School shattered Ned Thompson's nine-year school record of 47:00 with his 46:03. Peter finished second in the Under-14 category and 206th overall. His time marked a huge improvement over last year's 55:32.

"This year he made up his mind he was going to break the record," said Peter's mother, Betsy.

Deer Hill physical education teacher Dennis Kuntz said he encourages his students to participate in the race, but emphasizes to them they have to train for the event.

"Peter took it very serious this year," Kuntz said.

We at the Mariner do not condone sports gambling. We feel it is an evil vice and is something that the leaders of our society should fight.

With that out of the way, let's just say I was very disappointed that Kentucky lost to Michigan Saturday in NCAA basketball action. I was leading both pools I entered and was looking at a nice $300 pay-off. Now I am just another fool whose money is parted. I guess I should have followed the advice of mobster Meyer Lansky who said, "The only one who wins in gambling is the house."

NCAA office pools are held all across America during this time of the year and I have many low friends in high places. But as it always seems, the winner of the pool will be someone who couldn't tell Rick Pitino from Ranger Rick.

I guess I should stick to something I know like "Speed Racer" trivia.

Boston sports buffs who have a day off from work or school and are willing to drive a ways, have to check out one of the best kept secrets in the area.

The Boston Garden Tour and History Center, located in the legendary building, offers a fascinating look at Garden history from the days of Eddie Shore and Bob Cousy, right on up to Reggie Lewis and Cam Neely.

The luxurious center is filled with case-enclosed relics which include the puck Bobby Orr shot to win the 1970 Stanley Cup over the St. Louis Blues, former Boston Bruin Gerry Cheevers' goalie mask, complete with stitches, which, as explained under the display, Cheevers believes he would have accumulated over the years if he hadn't worn the mask.

There are also game jersey's belonging to Orr and Rick Middleton. The attraction here is that the shirts weren't washed and pressed before going into the glass case. They were put in as is. The sweat stains can still be seen on both jerseys, as well as spots of blood on Middleton's game shirt.

A Garden backboard hangs in the center, above a section of the parquet floor. On the wall is a mural of Boston sports celebrities, ranging from four-time Boston Marathon winner Bill Rodgers to Channel 4 Sportscaster Bob Lobel.

The center is a must for sports fans, young and old.

Hospitality, scenery are key to race's success

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Concord's Michelle Bociek is all smiles as she takes the Womens' Division of the Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea with a personal best time of 37:52. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Computerized results of the Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea were being posted outside the community center, minutes after the 17th-annual edition of the race ended Sunday afternoon.

Tired runners, oblivious to the cold breeze, crowded around the list, searching for their name among the field of 734. After finding their times and place the runner move out of the way, allowing a second group to take a peak. In short, it was a very orderly process without a trace of pushing or shoving.

Things didn't go quite as easy during the inaugural race in 1977.

There were no computers spitting out names, age categories and finishing times. Instead, race director Roy Fitzsimmons was armed with only a stopwatch and clipboard, writing out the results by hand.

"After the race I was sitting around my house at the party with papers, trying to figure out the places," said Fitzsimmons with a laugh.

Interestingly enough, a 10K road race was actually the third idea for an annual athletic event in Cohasset. Fitzsimmons originally wanted to stage a bicycle race the previous year as part of the Bicentennial celebration. The logistics for the bike race and a possible 10-mile road race fell through before the idea came up to shorten the distance.

Fitzsimmons believed a loop course, with the start and finish in the same location, would be easier for runners to plan for, rather than having them be forced to find a ride back to the starting line at the end of the race. The current loop proved to be the perfect distance.

What began as a quaint, local road race with less than 200 runners, has evolved over the years into one of the most popular races on the South Shore. Aesthetically, it is THE race to run in New England. New England Runner's Magazine selected the race as the most scenic course in the six states — and for good reason: The course offers quintessential New England all wrapped neatly in a 6.2-mile package.

There's the starting line in Cohasset Village. With its quaint shops, village green and duck ponds, runners have a lot to look at as they warm-up and stretch. From the center of town, the route meanders along winding, tree-lined roads before turning onto Jerusalem Ave. As runners traverse the hills along the most scenic section of the course, they can admire the luxurious homes on the left and the breathtaking view of the Atlantic Ocean on the right.

Fitzsimmons believes it is the combination of a scenic course and an organized event that gives the Cohasset race its drawing power.

"Nature is the only thing that has anything to do with (the beauty of) the course," Fitzsimmons said. "It's a beautiful course, but it's not an easy course. You go up the hills along Jerusalem Ave. and then hit that wall at Forest Ave."

Fitzsimmons believes an additional 200 runners would have entered this year if the weather during the two weeks leading up to the race had been more seasonable.

Fitzsimmons, though, is more concerned with catering to the runners who enter, and making the race part of an enjoyable day for the Cohasset community."

"We try to make it as friendly as possible for the runner," he said. "Every year the business community and the residents support the race."

Preparation for Cohasset's rite os spring starts long before the gun sounds, the first Sunday of April. Permits are secured from the selectmen in December. Entry blanks are then printed in early February and the first of them begin to trickle back before the end of the month.

Fitzsimmons, who commended all the race volunteers that make the race run smoothly, has shyed away from securing one race sponsor, preferring instead the sponsorship of many local businesses.

"We hope it will continue on," he said, "because it is such a plus for the community and the people involved. It has gone through a lot but has lasted 17 years. It's a tribute to the people who've helped."

Jones honored at Boston Garden ceremony

not' and submitted the necessary information to Athletic Director Clark Chatterton.

Jones, who lives in Dorchester and has been part of the METCO program since he first got on the bus to the South Shore in kindergarten, admits he was taken off-guard when he was picked from among a field of 75 students.

"I was totally taken by surprise," said Jones, as he browsed through the center, gazing at the pictures on the wall of of Ray Bourque, Kevin McHale and other Boston sports celebrities.

"I had forgotten about (entering) it because it was so early in the year. I've never been here to see a game, so that's something special. It's exciting."

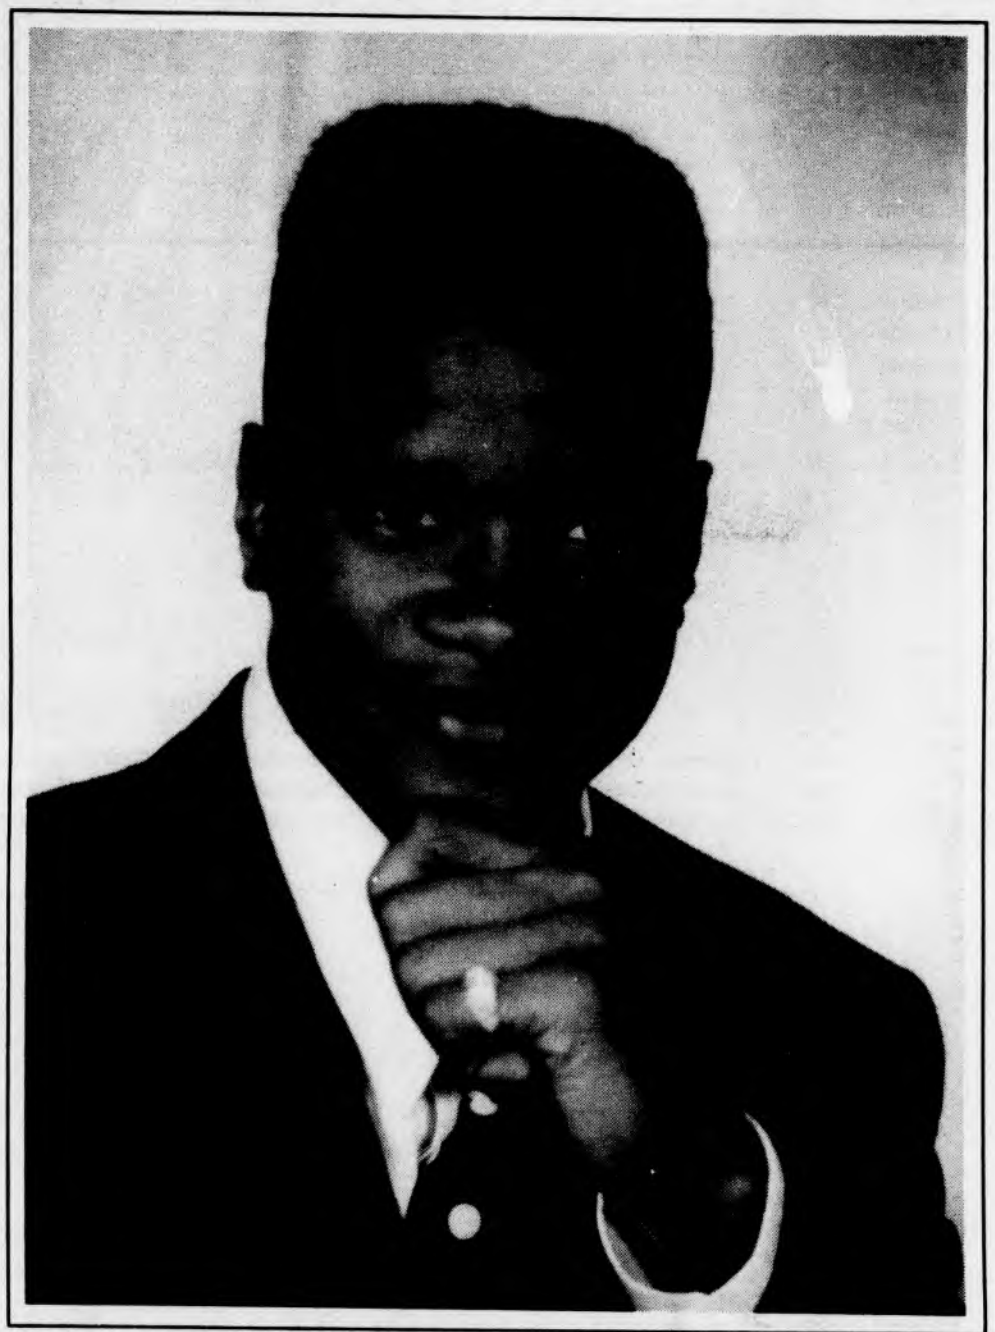
With several qualified candidates from which to choose, picking 19 was not an easy task for the three-person selection committee.

"It is a difficult process," said the President of the Boston Garden, Larry Moulter. "But it's a good problem to have. Let's honor the athletes who serve the community also. That's the whole idea."

Laura Cunningham, the sponsorships and promotions coordinator for the event, reflected Moulter's statement that the program was based on more than the individual's athletic achievement.

"It's not just the jocks and the students," she said. "It's the character of the person, what they're doing in the community. Are they leaders in school?"

Aretha Jones believes her son's involvement METCO has given him a better learning environment, he otherwise wouldn't have received in the inner-city schools. She wasted no time in signing Ray up and has not been disappointed with the results. He has excelled on the playing field, in both the barbershop quartet and chorus and his studies, which he hopes will get him into college.



Three-sport star Ray Jones strikes a pensive pose for his senior class photo. Jones was one of 19 athlete/students in Eastern Mass to be recognized for his contributions on and off the playing field.

Once there, Ray wants to major in chemistry and minor in art.

Ray's success has been almost too much for Mrs. Jones to fathom.

"It's almost like a dream," she said. "We couldn't predict his destiny in Cohasset, but the right people were there to develop his talents. He never let the fact that it was a school outside of Boston affect his ambition. Ray never made a distinction."

Environment aside, Jones' work ethic and positive outlook have been the biggest reasons for his success. An athlete with raw talent is dangerous enough. Give him or her the desire and commitment to succeed and they usually do.

"He's not a quitter," Mrs. Jones said. "He's always positive and makes the best out of the situation."

Ray admits he jumped at the opportunities made available through the Cohasset School system and worked hard to be successful at them.

"I get a chance to do a lot of things they (inner-city students) can't do," he said. "You get a better education. Cohasset has been my life. It's all out there."

Ray and his mother both consider Cohasset 'home' just as much as Dorchester. He admitted he was happy to get away from the violence that has run rampant through parts of his hometown.

"I spend a lot of time in Cohasset," he said. "I've made a lot of friends and I don't have to worry about being an innocent victim."

"He started in Kindergarten," Mrs. Jones said. "therefore his peers have been there from elementary, through middle school, right on up to high school. They've taken on a lot of challenges together."

And Ray is glad his mother made it possible for him to attend school in the suburbs.

"It was a great idea by my mother," he said. "It's (award) dedicated to her."

High school ski team wraps up season

The Cohasset High School ski team wrapped up their 1993 season with an awards banquet on Monday, April 5, at the High School. Coaches Jack Dane and Bob Stansell, and Athletic Director Clark Chatterton were on hand to award varsity letters and re-cap some of the highlights of the year.

The 1993 year saw the men's squad capture second-place in the small schools division and send a five-man squad to the Massachusetts High School Alpine Ski Championships held in March at Berkshire East Ski Basin. The 1992 season was the first that the men qualified for the state meet. Cohasset competes in the Massachusetts Bay East Ski League. The teams which place first and second in each of the two divisions in the league send squads to the state meet. Individuals placing in the top 10 in division qualify as individuals. Qualifying for the second year in a row was one of the key events of the season for the men.

The other season highlight for the men was capturing first-place in division in the third league meet of the season. It was the first time in memory that perennial powerhouse Dover-Sherborn had been displaced from the top spot. Captains Pete Collins and Doug Scultz, along with Sam Goedecke and Bobby Stansell, consistently placed in the top 10 week after week. Mike Equi also contributed solid scoring performances. These five skiers went on to represent Cohasset High School as the five-man team for the state championships.

The competition of the women's team was also highlighted. Through the first four meets it appeared that the women would also qualify as a team for the state championships. Captain Alissa Sexton and Bonnie Krueger made top-10 finishes in every meet. There were also good point contributions by Swedish exchange student Gabriella Davidson, Cara McKenney, and Shelley Vandeweil. In the final meet of the season the Westwood women overtook Cohassset. To do this, Westwood got a personal best from Jean Ladiceux and solid results by the top-six women. Cohasset had to settle on having its top-two skiers qualify to participate in the State Championships as individuals: Alissa Sexton for the third time, and Bonnie Krueger for the second.

Cohasset High School Ski Team varsity letters were awarded to:

Men's Captains: Pete Collins, Doug Scultz.

Women's Captain: Alissa Sexton.

Repeating letter recipients: Matt Banks, Pete Collins, Mike Equi, Bonnie Krueger, Doug Scultz, Alissa Sexton and Bobby Stansell.

First year letter recipients: Penelope Dane, Gabriella Davidson, Cara McKenney, Sam Goedecke and Anthony Green.

Celebrating spring

As always with the coming of spring, Cohasset High School offers the community a marvelous evening of musical entertainment. Wednesday, April 14, talented musicians under the direction of Colleen Wheeler will provide excellent selections by the concert and jazz bands.

Choral director Brian Marks will be leading his various singing groups through a wide range of pieces which will include academy award winning music from Aladdin. There promises to be something to please everyone.

The students and teachers work very hard to provide professional quality entertainment at no cost to the audience. The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. and last for approximately two hours. For those who need it, transportation can be arranged with the senior shuttle.

If you are available, it is a wonderful way to offer encouragement and support to the students. Hope to see you there!

Parenting with humor

Come to the Cohasset PSO annual spring meeting April 28 and hear acclaimed speaker, educator, and well-known wacky person Lorretta La Roche.

Part stand-up comic, part inspirational speaker, La Roche believes that parenting is a very serious job but we can do it and take ourselves lightly. Please note—this April 28 meeting has been changed from May 6 on the school calendar.

Dave Aronson, Brooke Heilener and Holly Brennock tune up their instruments for a gala night of song, dance, comedy and jazz at the annual Cohasset High School Winter Cabaret recently at Kimball's By the Sea. Stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner every week for the latest school news.

SSES managed care in housing program.

What is its purpose? To provide support and services to elders in a managed housing environment to enable them to continue to live safely and independently in the community.

How did it start? In July 1991, State Medicaid Regulations for admission to nursing homes become stricter. Many frail elders who would have been placed in nursing homes were forced to remain living in the community. Faced with a crisis, the State appropriated funds to the Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA). EOEA, in coordination with its network of Home Care Corporations, developed the Managed Care in Housing Program to help "manage the care" of these frail elders.

What does this program provide? Eligible elders can receive assistance with daily personal care services such as bathing, dressing, grooming and eating. They are also eligible to receive a personal emergency response system. A multi-disciplinary team led by an SSES Home Care Case Manager will make sure that the elder's care is well managed and coordinated among the various service providers that are involved. Members of the team also include a nurse and a representative from the housing community's management staff.

How can elder qualify for this program? S.S.E.S. has received funding to provide the managed care program to 38 elders. To qualify for the program, elders must meet all eligibility guidelines to receive state funded Home Care services but cannot be on Medicaid. Elders must live in a supportive housing environment and must be in need of structured and consistent services to help them live safely and independently.

Where is the program taking place now? SSES has entered partnerships with many Housing Communities on the South Shore. Those include Trilling House in Randolph, Highlands Green Congregate and Independence Manor I, II in Braintree, 1000 Southern Artery in Quincy, Thaxter Park in Hingham, Calnan & Harrington Circle in Weymouth and Unquity House and Winter Valley in Milton.

What are the future plans for this program? SSES would like to expand this program to reach eligible elders in its entire 11-town service area. SSES also hopes to be able to provide the Managed Care Program to elders who receive Medicaid through the development of a Group Adult Foster Care Program.

Where can I get more information? Call the SSES Information Services Department at 848-3910.

Come for coffee

There will be an outreach coffee hour at the Senior Center Thursday, April 15, at 10 a.m. The goal is to introduce people who are not familiar with the council to the staff, the center itself, and to inform them about its programs. Refreshments will be served. If you or anyone you know might like to attend, please RSVP by April 12.

Hosts will be Anna Abbruzzese, Betty Grassie, and Susan Connolly.

paul pratt library corner

Cohasset residents interested in serving a a Trustee for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library appeared at the selectmen's meeting this week. Each candidate submitted a resume to the Board of Selectman and the Library Trustees prior to Monday night's meeting.

Appearing individually before the Library Trustees and the Selectmen, the candidates expressed their purpose in applying for the Trustee position and discussed their work experience as related to the library. There were four candidates present.

All expressed a long standing affection for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library while extolling its excellence.

Mr. Ellery Clark spoke of his teaching experience at the Naval War College and suggested an expansion in the military history books at the library written by current scholars.

Patience Towle cited her experience as president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and her skills in fund raising and budget planning to the Board.

Lee Jenkins elaborated on computer networking to expand the accessibility of all the libraries in town, and James Whelan spoke of his respect and admiration for the library staff as well as his business experience.

Mrs Towle was elected by the joint Boards of the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Board of Selectmen. Congratulations Mrs. Towle.

Sheila Evans, president of the Library Trustees, expressed her gratitude to all who had applied for the Trustee position and urged interested candidates to run in the next townwide election.

The executive board of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library meet at the library Thursday, April 15.

Winter library hours

Winter hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.; Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Doctor/patient talk

Do feel like your doctor is sometimes speaking a foreign language? Sometimes talking about your common aches and pains can become a very confusing discussion.

From 7 to 8:30 p.m., Monday, April 12, South Shore Hospital, in conjunction with South Shore Coalition of Independent Therapists, offers a community health discussion on ways to help you and your doctor feel comfortable talking to each other. You will learn new ways to make sure your doctor hears your concerns and understands your worries. You will also learn techniques to help you remember what the doctor says to you, so you don't leave the doctor's office with your questions unanswered.

Dr. Gary Prince, who has a private practice in Hingham and specializes in child, adolescent and adult psychiatry, will lead the discussion. Prince received his B.A in Psychology from Brandeis University and received his medical degree from New York University where he graduated cum laude.

The discussion, which is free and open to the public, will be held in the hospital's private dining room, 55 Fogg Road, in So. Weymouth. Pre-registration, which is encouraged, can be done by calling (617) 340-8350.

Gardeners of Cohasset

The annual meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset is Tuesday, April 20, at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Jean Maganaro.

Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos will assist.

Easter egg hunt

Don't miss the annual Easter Egg Hunt starting at noon, Saturday April 10 at the Deer Hill School Field.

The event, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Department and local civic and business organizations, is geared for children ages three-through-12.

All children receive candy and balloons. There are also about 36 prizes awarded as a result of the hunt.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard a fire truck.

Rain date is Saturday, April 17. To verify hunt status please call 383-6791.

Breakfast, plant sale

Old Ship Church of Hingham holds its annual May Breakfast and Plant Sale May 1.

Breakfast will be served from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the Parish House at 107 Main Street. The price for breakfast is $5 for adults and $3 for children. The menu includes eggs or griddle cakes with all the fixings. All types of plants including perennials, annuals, shrubs, and ground covers will be for sale.

Family literacy program

The Alpha Zeta chapter of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, a sorority for key women educators, invites parents to attend a workshop on family literacy, focusing on the parental role in homework success. There will be teachers presenting information for parents of pre-schoolers through high school age youngsters, tutoring them to be homework helpers.

The workshop will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. April 15, at the Scituate Public Library on Branch Street, adjacent to Central Park and across from the former Dreamwold. The workshop will service parents of children in schools in the South Shore.

'Congo Capers' coming

A lively variety show featuring 55 singers, dancers, thespians and spear-holders is in busy rehearsal routine these evenings as members and friends of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church prepare to stage "Congo Capers of '93" at Cohasset High School Saturday evening, May 22.

"Congo Capers of '93" is the latest of a line of shows offered publicly by the parishoners of Second Congregational. For several years in the '70's, church members, under the leadership of the then Music Director, Ellen Fryling, presented Gilbert & Sullivan shows on the Town Hall stage.

The show will open with a World War II routine featuring 25 singers and dancers, bringing back memories with such songs as "Juke Box Saturday Night", "Apple Blossom Time", "Tangerine", "I'll Be Seeing You", "Green Eyes", and " As Time Goes By". As if that were not enough to generate reminiscences, other numbers later in the program will offer a "Camelot" Medley", a kick-line in "Le Jazz Hot", and a "Fugue of Tin Horns."

Tickets will be available from cast members and backstage crew or from the church office, 383-0345.

Spring vacation fun

The Cohasset Recreation Department hosts a five-day (April 19-23) school vacation program at the Deer Hill School.

The program, which runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., is geared for ages five through 12. There are daily rates and special rates for families and five-day registrations.

Call 383-6791 for details. Or you may register at Deer Hill during program hours.

'Music man' to open

Mary Greykin and Laurie Nigro of Cohasset will become Maude Dunlap and Ethel Tofflemeir, respectively, as residents of River City, Iowa in Hingham Civic Music Theatre's production of "The Music Man."

Scott Wahle, WBZ-TV Eyewitness News sportscaster will be the music man himself, that fast-talking musical instrument salesman/conman, Professor Harold Hill.

"The Music Man" marches into Hingham High School April 24, 30 and May 1. For advance sale tickets, $8 to April 21, or group rates call 617-749-0857. All tickets are $10 at the door.

MBTA: rail realistic in five years

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The only sure thing about the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad is that Cohasseters will be at least five years older if it comes.

Joseph Connor, project manager with the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA), didn't shed any new light on the project at the selectmen's meeting Monday.

But he did say that "realistically" the South Shore might see rail service in 1998.

He said the MBTA hopes to have a public hearing this time next year on the Supplemental Draft Impact Report/Statement (SDEIR/S).

Then the Federal Transit Administration (FTA) will take three-to-six months to make a decision. If Greenbush restoration gets the go ahead, the design stage would take another 12-to-18 months followed by 24-to-36 months for construction, Connor explained.

The SDEIR/S will build on the framework of the previous Old Colony Draft EIR/S and will evaluate all significant environmental impacts of project alternatives.

Alternatives that will be evaluated are; (1) no build, (2) at-grade diesel-powered commuter rail service to

Classy crossings cause headache

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's new state-of-the-art, aesthetically pleasing crosswalk signs could meet an untimely end.

The two-piece upright signs, held together with pins, are turning into a big headache for the highway department.

When motorists hit the signs, which are designed to topple over, the pins break.

"We lost five (signs) the other day," says highway superintendent Harold Litchfield. "We can't keep pins in them."

At the moment, the highway department only has two signs in working order.

Litchfield says it isn't so much the time involved as the hassle.

He explained the highway department puts the signs out at about 7:15 a.m. and takes them in at 3:15 p.m. — too early to be of value to kids after school.

And according to Litchfield, the signs aren't out at all on the weekends.

Stormy seas claimed first Minot's Light in 1851

By David H. Wadsworth
Mariner correspondent

The destruction of the iron lighthouse at Minot's Ledge on the night of April 16-17, 1851 has been described as "the worst engineering disaster suffered by the U.S. Lighthouse Establishment since its beginning."

That first ill-fated lighthouse was of a design called "iron-pile" construction, having nine wrought iron legs set into the ledge at the bottom, with its Keepers' dwelling house and lantern at the top. The legs, some 35 feet in height, formed an octagon 25 feet in diameter, with an additional pile in the center. Above the piles the storage room, Keepers' house and lantern room extended some 30 feet higher, giving a structure some 65 feet in total height.

A type of construction used successfully in shallow waters having sandy bottom, the iron pile structure at Minot's represented a unique adaptation of the design for use on a granite ledge.

Under construction during 1848 and 49, with ironwork by Cyrus Alger & Co., the lighthouse began operating on January 1, 1850. Isaac Dunham, formerly Head Keeper at Pemaquid Light on the Maine coast, was the first Head Lighthouse Keeper at the new Minot's.

Some 15 months later, during a fierce ocean storm now called the "Lighthouse Gale" the nine "piles" supporting the light broke apart, plunging the entire structure into the storm-wracked ocean. Its two Assistant Keepers, Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson, on the light, attempted to swim ashore but before reaching the shore perished in icy seas.

History records that the architect of the first Minot's was Capt. William H. Swift of the U.S. Army Topographical Engineers.

Capt. Swift, ironically known mainly for his ill-fated Cohasset lighthouse, actually was a highly successful Officer in the Army Corps of Engineers, who in later years distinguished himself as an able engineer and administrator in the canal and railroad industries.

Cohasset's week

Notice to taxpayers

Listed below are the due dates for various tax bills mailed recently from the Treasurer-Collector's office:

Fourth Quarter Real Estate Tax Bills due Monday, May 3, 1993, 4:30 p.m.

Fourth Quarter Personal Property Tax Bills due Monday, May 3, 4:30 p.m.

Fiscal 1993 Boat Excise bills due Tuesday, June 1, 4:30 p.m.

Payments must be received in the treasurer/collector's office by the close of business on each due date. Postmark dates will not be accepted. NO EXCEPTIONS.

Mailing address for tax payments is: Treasurer-Collector's Office, P. 0. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025. For those taxpayers who wish to pay their taxes in person, office hours are: Monday and Tuesday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Wednesday (April 28 only) 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A number of bills have been returned to the office due to improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, extension 113.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

The following volunteers from the Senior Center came to the Town Hall during the past month and stuffed, sealed and counted 3,000 real estate tax bills, over 5,000 motor vehicle excise bills, and over 500 personal property and boat excise bills: Pauline Keating; Olga Sawchuck; Jacqueline Moores; Mary Andracchio; Mary Volpe; Virginia Anderson; Mary Migliaccio; Dorothea Bjorkgren; Jo Irwin; Tillie Carey; Tilly Nardy; Margaret Taylor; Elizabeth Abell; Irene Porter; Gerard Keating; Sheila Kelly; Peg Doyle; Jeanne Sullivan; Pat Hanlon; and Margaret Bates.

This is the fourth year that the volunteers have helped out. Their spirit and sense of dedication to their community is appreciated, Elizabeth B. Ripley, treasurer-collector said.

Bills are paid up

Selectmen authorized payment of the following bills:

- $3,910 for legal services provided the town by town counsel Richard A. Henderson for the month of March.
- $4,803.64 to Warner & Stackpole, special counsel to the board of health for professional services from Jan. 1 through Feb. 28.
- $900 to Civil Designs Inc. for engineering related to beach and highway repairs.
- $22,247.28 to J. B. D'Allessandro Corp. for work on the Doane St. bridge.

cohasset's week

DARE on agenda

Members of the Drug and Alcohol Committee will discuss DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) with the school committee at 8 p.m. tonight at Cohasset High School.

Eleanor Waal, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, said DARE is not a new discussion for that group, but members said it's time to take another look at the national program.

This was prompted partially by the results of a health survey conducted at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High, in which 48 percent of students in grades seven and eight said they'd used alcohol in the past year and 17 percent said they'd been drunk in the same period, Waal said.

The survey was administered by health education coordinator Mike Gill in January 1992.

Waal said many individuals ask why Cohasset doesn't have DARE when the town is recognized as a leader in substance abuse education. Cohasset was one of the first South Shore communities to start a Safe Homes program and the drug and alcohol committee coordinates a drug-free weekend every year.

"Other towns look to us for advice and suggestions," she said.

Police Officer Domenic D'Arcangelo, who is Scituate's DARE officer, will make the presentation to the school board, Waal said. The meeting is open to the public.

The Masons will also hold a public forum about DARE at 7:45 p.m. May 7 at the Masonic Hall on Brook St.

"This issue is being talked about enough that we have to bring it out in the open," Waal said. "We're happy people are paying attention."

Town hall over budget

Unanticipated costs including $36,269 in bills for lead dust clean up and testing; $870 in electrical storm alarm damage; and higher than expected fuel costs have put the town hall budget over the top.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon asked selectmen Monday to authorize a transfer of $6,220 from free cash to cover the deficit. Last fall the board authorized a transfer of $25,000 to pay for lead-dust clean up.

A lower-than-budgeted paint contract bid helped offset some of the deficit. The board budgeted about $17,000 and the bid came in at $11,500.

Painting the exterior of town hall should resume soon, Doyon said.

"It's too wet right now," he said.

Ice sled received

Thanks to the Cohasset Firemen's Benefit Association, the town has a new "ice rescue sled" which can be used on frozen ponds.

Bruce Pratt, president of the association, said in the past the group's gifts to the town have included survival suits and the Jaws of Life.

Pratt said association members were impressed with the sled after seeing a video about it.

The sled can float if the ice breaks and it comes complete with a rope line which can be attached from land.

Pratt said the sled could be used for rescues in areas like Lily Pond and Little Harbor.

Storage tanks okay'ed

Selectmen gave the go ahead for George Roukounakis to expand underground storage facilities at Olympic Texaco pending necessary approvals from various town boards and departments.

Roukounakis said the capacity of the new storage tanks would not exceed 24,000 gallons. The old tanks hold 16,000 gallons.

The new tanks would be double-barreled and made of fiberglass and steel.

"In reality, we're getting something better," Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle noted. "Plus we're digging up the ground and if there's anything there we'll know."

Gadow gets a raise

Selectmen approved a step-raise increase for Harbormaster Irving Gadow from $14.69 to $15.40 per hour, effective April 30.

The board tabled action on the increase last week until members had time to peruse Gadow's performance review.

First Minot's Light felled in 1851 'lighthouse gale'

In 1853 Capt. Swift was awarded an M.A. degree by Harvard University. He served as President of the Boston and Albany Railroad, and was instrumental in the running of several Midwest railroad lines. William H. Swift was born in Taunton, Mass. in 1800, was educated in New Hampshire, and entered the U.S. Military Academy in West Point at the age of 13, in the summer of 1813. His first major assignment was to accompany an early U.S. Army exploration mission into the Rocky Mountains as surveyor.

Following graduation he was assigned to the Topographical Engineers, and spent some 15 years, from 1820 to about 1835 as surveyor of U.S. military installations, waterways, harbors and railroads. During that time he also compiled the first comprehensive map of Postal Routes throughout the nation.

In the latter 1840's Capt. Swift undertook the designing of the lighthouse at Outer Minot's Ledge, having studied examples of "iron pile" lighthouses in Europe. For the lighthouse at Minot's Ledge the government had appropriated $39,000, or about 1/8 the construction cost of a solid stone tower. It was this cost constraint that made necessary the skeletal frame of the iron pile tower. As events were to show, it was not enough.

During the time the first Minot's Ledge Light was under construction or operating, Capt. Swift carried on correspondence by letter with Capt. John Wilson of Cohasset.

Several of these letters clearly indicate that the architect himself was worried about the strength of the new tower, for in an early letter discussing the lighthouse he asks; "How is it, has there been any injury to the structure during the Winter, or is there any prospect that it will not weather the storms?"

Later, on January 11, 1851, just three months before the lighthouse fell, Capt. Swift asks, "I would like to know, also, what is really the condition of the Light, is it up, or is it down?"

He is known to have thought that the diameter of the octagonal base was not large enough to support the structure in bad weather; instead of being 25' across it should have been 40', and the height of the tower 100'. The small surface area of the ledge itself had forced a more slender design than was desired.

During the gale of April 16, 1851, ocean waves carried away a heavy storage platform built below the storage room and Keepers' House. The platform drifted ashore several hours before the structure itself collapsed. It is believed the breaking seas then crashed upwards against the floor of the Keepers' House itself.

In this way the entire structure was caused to "shake two feet each way, now" as recorded in the note placed in a bottle, written by the trapped Assistant Keepers. The note was recovered the following day by a Gloucester fisherman, hours after the tower itself had fallen. Sometime after midnight the 640-pound fog bell of Minot's Ledge Light was heard onshore to be clanging frantically, followed by silence.

The worst fears of its designer were realized on that stormy night, and four years later the newly organized U.S. Board of Lighthouse Engineers decided to spend $300,000 to construct a 114-foot-high granite lighthouse that still stands at Outer Minot's Ledge.

That first ill-fated lighthouse was of a design called "iron pile" construction having wrought iron legs set into the ledge at the bottom with its Keepers' dwelling house and lantern at the top.

Crosswalks. . .

Highway employees work a 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. shift. It takes about 15 minutes in the morning and 15 minutes in the afternoon to drop off and pick up the signs.

Litchfield says in most locations the highway department could install pressure-treated posts and mount permanent signs like the one at Depot Court.

He explained that the road through Hingham Square—where orange barrels are used to alert motorists to pedestrians — is much wider than typical roads in Cohasset.

Cohasset voters appropriated $1,500 at the special town meeting last fall to repaint the crosswalks and buy the signs. There was considerable discussion at the time about obtaining signs that are more aesthetically pleasing than the barrels used in Hingham.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle brought up the signs Monday during a discussion on parking in the village.

He wondered if the town should continue buying pins and maintaining the signs.

Selectman Merle S. Brown said he'd like to see the signs continue in the village but perhaps eliminate them in the "outskirts."

Rail realistic in five years

Scituate; (3) diesel-powered commuter rail to Scituate with a tunnel under Hingham Square; (4) commuter boat with expanded Hingham terminal and new terminals at Nantasket and/or Quincy and feeder bus service; (6) explained bus service and park/ride lots.

The Citizens Advisory Committee, which includes three Cohasset citizens, is assisting in the preparation of the SDEIR/S.

Although the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs has targeted the six alternatives as the focus of the report, more were in the offing Monday.

Monorail service and ending the train line at the old ammunition depot across from the South Shore Country Club in Hingham and running shuttle buses up and down Rte. 3A to that location—were two suggestions raised by selectmen.

Connor explained that studies show the Greenbush Line would attract 3,300-3,500 riders each way. Five or six trains would make the run giving the line a capacity of 4,500-5,400. The trip length from Greenbush to Boston would be 58 minutes, he said.

"We'd have room for growth with the existing service for the next 20 years," he said.

Selectman Merle S. Brown raised the monorail alternative.

"Go back and look at monorail," he said. Brown said the rail crossings would present a safety hazard.

Connor said most monorails are three miles long.

"The problem with monorail it's elevated," he said. "And this would be 17 miles form Greenbush to Braintree."

Selectman Jane Goedecke asked what steps should be taken to get a "whistle stop" in Cohasset village.

Connor said the MBTA is "wary" of more stops because of time added to the trip and a stop during peak hours might cause problems by blocking crossings in the village due to the train's 720-foot length.

He said the monorail would create right-of-way problems. The Greenbush Line, if built, is along an existing right of way.

Cohasset Chamber of Commerce President Robert Martin pointed out that the Greenbush right-of-way goes in a circle, while those for the Middleborough and Plymouth lines are straight.

"We're not claiming this is high speed rail," Connor countered. "This is commuter rail."

Connor added that the South Shore is the only area without commuter rail.

"And it has the highest percentage of commuters with downtown orientation," he said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle suggested the 'T' end the train at the old ammunition depot in Hingham and bus people from surrounding communities to the stop.

Laugelle said a stop there might alleviate concerns about a train running through Hingham's historic district.

Connor noted that traffic impacts are as significant as those created by the train.

He said the MBTA is committed to the project.

"We don't believe the project should be abandoned only because there are all these issues to deal with," he said.

Robert V. Davenport, 135 Sohier St, said the commute to Boston has gotten worse over the years.

"Ten years ago, you could leave at 7:30 a.m. and get to Neponset before it backed up. Five years ago, you had to leave by 6:30 a.m.

"Now it's backed up at the Mr. Donut in Weymouth and Hingham Police station until 9 a.m.

"...There will be lines out there in Cohasset in a couple of years," he said.

Books for Russia campaign needs a boost

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Til Muzzi has a stack of 1,000 books on her floor.

And the Hingham woman hopes through this article an organization will come forward to help pay to send the books where they are sorely needed: overseas.

It all started last fall when Muzzi went to Russia, Latvia, and Estonia on a trade mission through People to People International, a private non-profit organization dedicated to increasing international awareness.

Employed with Northrop Corp. in Belmont, Muzzi heard about the People-to-People program through a letter she received as a member of an inventory control organization.

And although she went over as a delegate with expertise in purchasing and management, it was a visit to a university that gave Muzzi an idea.

"During a trip to a university in Latvia, I became interested in the needs of students for all kinds of books," Muzzi recalls. "So another delegate and I decided to get a project going when we returned." She explains that the students need books written in English.

Once back on American soil, Muzzi thought that local school kids could do something about the book shortage.

As it turned out she had to go no further than a single phone call. Muzzi contacted Derby Academy where her project meshed perfectly with the school's World Awareness program.

"I called and they were so interested, I decided we'd go for a month to gather books," she recalls.

Til Muzzi and Derby Academy students enthusiastically kick off a book drive to aid Russian students. The students collected more than 1,000 books.

A few of the books collected by Derby Academy students. Muzzi hopes to find an organization willing to help pay for the postage to send the books to needy university students in Russia and Latvia.

And to Muzzi's surprise students in the program collected hundreds of books ranging from novels to textbooks to books on bringing up children.

"I expected to get 50 books or so," she says about the four-foot high stack.

But now Muzzi is faced with the daunting prospect of mailing the books 6,000 miles. Originally, the plan was to send the books to her fellow delegate in Colorado — but there's too many for that, she says.

Recently laid off from her job of ten years, Muzzi can't afford to send the books herself. She hopes that a local organization will come forward with an offer to help.

She contacted People-to-People which is based in Spokane, Washington hoping for funds, but they don't have any. Citizen ambassadors must even pay for their own travel expenses.

Muzzi found out from the post office that it will cost about $65 to send approximately 200 lbs.

"I have well over 200 lbs.," says Muzzi who's in the process of calling different express agencies to find out what they charge.

Although she describes the outpouring of books a "mixed blessing," Muzzi says the experience is entirely positive.

"I think it's great to promote education for a country we thought so long was our enemy.

"And getting school children to help was a wonderful way to do it."

If you can help, please call Muzzi at 749-5986.

❑ Gerard Keating has great news this week, he just became a grandfather for the 20th time. Stephen and Cynthia Keating live in Maine, and April 4, Hanna Marie Keating joined them!

Gerard is a great-grandfather also, and he loves everyone to pieces. Just one more reason to walk around looking proud and handsome! Lets hope the whole family takes after Gerard (and Margaret of course) in his thoughtful ways and hardworking efforts.

❑ Sydney Johnston is a teen-ager!! And thrilled about it! Sydney celebrated her 13th last week. Here's to your life as a teenager, may it be a long and happy one, full of great things.

❑ We sure hope that Lillian Lincoln keeps up her super recovery after her recent accident, we understand that she will be home this week! Now we'll bet you'll get tons of visitors! Feel better fast, spring is here!

❑ On the subject of patients, Hope Seeley is reported to be doing ever-so-much better. With the love that surrounds her, we know that Hope will be up and about in no time, and here's to a speedy recovery.

❑ Are you on the Wall? The Plankowners Wall? The O'Connells are Plankowners — Mike, Rosemary, Greg, Matt and Kristen. Mike, Rosemary and the kids have watched the transformation of the Lightkeepers Residence and are enthusiastic supporters of the projects.

Why not join them an the support the Cohasset Lightkeepers need, a wonderful way to watch "your money grow!" Call Bob Martin if you can own a plank, he'll let you know what to do next.

Or, write the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, P.O. Box 514, Cohasset 02025.

❑ Everyone is pulling for Arne Gjesteby after his latest illness, we hope that he will be on the mend very soon and know that Martha will take good care of him in the meantime...we wish you well.

❑ Don't forget that you do have a place that you may leave your children with complete confidence over the Spring vacation...the Cohasset Recreation Department will hold a five-day (April 19 to 23) school vacation program! It will be held at Deer Hill School, with hours from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is for ages five to 12. They will have both daily rates and special rates for families and five-day registrations.

Call 383-6791 for more details.

❑ Two Cohasset stars are about to shine.. April 24, 30 and May first, Hingham Civic Music Theatre's production of the Music Man will be held at Hingham High School, and Mary Grekin and Laurie Nigro will be there! Mary will play Maude Dunlap, and Laurie will play Ethel Toffilemeir, residents of "River City". If you wish your tickets in advance ($8) call 749-0857. They will be $10 at the door.

❑ A lot of people will miss seeing Gertrude Parsons "around town," and our sympathies go to her family. Just let us tell you she was a lovely lady, loved by all that knew her.

❑ Speaking of lovely ladies, I had a chance to speak to Barbara Elliot last week. What a happy young lady!! Her Tammy and Jeff are both doing extremely well, and Barbara is going to college and taking exercise classes (which she says are fabulous!).. She is as happy as can be, perhaps she can give lessons on how to do what she does in such grand style!!!

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Tommy Colburn, son of Tom and Jeannine. Tommy will be two years old April 18, and we hope that you have the best day yet, Tommy. Maybe you will get a bunny!!!

❑ We also salute Peter Capozzoli, son of Peter and Betty Capozzoli of Chief Justice Cushing Way, for making the dean's list at Tufts University for the fall 1992 semester. Peter is a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering and a graduate of Thayer Academy in Braintree.

❑ Speaking of animals, does anyone have a kitten? Or expecting one? I know a young man (we all know him) who would love the company of one, and knows how to take great care of it. If you just give me a call, I'll take care of the rest!! (Sallyann, 383-0560). Thank you!!

❑ That's pretty much the news for this week, PLEASE call with your spring news!

What's the big deal?

You are! When you decide to have your baby at Quincy Hospital, you receive the special attention you deserve.

Right from the start, we can help you select one of our fine, private obstetricians. And we also have the largest nurse midwife group in this area.

You'll have a private room during labor, and after your baby is born. Relaxing decor. A private bath with a tub. A partner's chair that converts to a sleeper. All the comforts of home during your labor, in the security of the hospital. And later, having your own room gives you the space and freedom to get comfortable with your new arrival without a lot of unnecessary interruptions.

Your family and friends will appreciate the free parking and the fact that Quincy Hospital is only minutes from Routes 128, 3 and 93.

After you go home, what you'll remember most is the nurses. Their personal attention and individualized teaching help make your experience unique. In fact, the nurses give you a phone number when you leave so you can call them 24 hours a day if you have any questions.

But seeing is believing. So call Quincy Hospital's Public Relations Department at (617) 773- 6100 ext. 4016 or send in the coupon to receive a free seven minute videotape about Quincy Hospital's maternity service.

Because the big deal at Quincy Hospital is great care!

Carlson/Maurillo

Paul A. Carlson of Ft. Lauderdale and formerly of Cohasset announces the engagement of his daughter, Janet Martin Carlson to Christopher Hilary Maurillo.

He is the son of Dr. Alexander E. Maurillo and Eleanor C. Maurillo of Brooklyn Heights, New York.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School and William Smith College in Geneva, New York. She is employed as an assistant manager of special markets at Little, Brown & Co., New York, N.Y.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Fordham Prep in New York and Hobart College. He is employed as an accountant at May Merchandising Company.

A September wedding is planned.

Mrs. Geoffrey Morris

Morris/Evans

Martha Cunningham Evans, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Evans of Cohasset, was married February 6 to Geoffrey James Morris, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Morris of Mantoloking, N.J.

The Rev. John J. Keohane performed the ceremony at St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church. A reception followed at the Chilton Club in Boston.

Dr. Elizabeth E. Bodner was her sister's matron of honor and John Henry Morris served as best man for his brother.

Mrs. Morris, 26, is the assistant to the director of marketing for The Library of America, a nonprofit publisher of American classics. She is a graduate of Brooks School in North Andover. Both she and her husband graduated from Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

Mr. Morris, 27, is the executive editor of National Review, the magazine. After a wedding trip to Barbados, the couple are now living in New York City.

Max Maire

Max S. Maire, 62, of Cohasset, an industrial engineer and past president of the Roit Company in Cohasset, died of cancer April 6 in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Mr. Maire was president and principal consultant at Roit for 28 years until 1992, and in the last several years was a partner in The Tinkers and editor of the New England Farm Bulletin and Garden Gazette, all in Cohasset.

He was born in San Diego and lived in Cohasset since 1965.

Mr. Maire received a bachelor's degree in engineering from the Coast Guard Academy in 1953 and served on the USCG Klamath for three years. He was executive officer for the Bering Sea Patrol in 1955.

Mr. Maire was an industrial engineer for Alcoa in Bridgeport for three years and chief industrial engineer and vice president of Howes Leather Co. in Boston in the 1960s.

He was former director of industrial engineering at the Plympton Press in Norwood and the superintendent of industrial engineering for the Dole Co. in Wahiawa, Hawaii. He was a member of the American Leather Chemists Association.

He leaves his wife, Valerie A. (Shaw) Lipsett Maire; five children; Stephen T. Maire of Hong Kong, Koren A. Holland of Thurmont, Md., Brian G. Lipsett of Pennsylvania, Katherine E. Blackadar of Hanover and Jennifer C. Hagemann of Marion; and five grandchildren.

A memorial service was conducted in First Parish Church.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

Paul W. Robey Jr.

Paul W. Robey Jr. of Cohasset, formerly of Needham, a manufacturer's representative for the New England shoe industry for 45 years, died April 12 in Massachusetts General Hospital.

Mr. Robey leaves his wife, Dorsey (Keegan) Hines Robey; two sons, Paul W. Robey III and Phillip V. Robey, both of Needham; four daughters, Trish Cruickshank and Sue Ann Blasizzo, both of Needham, Faith Benson of San Jose, Calif., and Marti Mahoney of Billerica; his step-children, Gail H. Claypool of Marshfield, Stephen Hines of Rye, N.Y., Brian Hines of Manchester-by-the-Sea, Barry Hines of Milton, John Hines of South Boston and Laura Hines of Charlestown; a sister, Betty Ann Robey of Newton Center; 24 grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and two nephews and nieces.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. April 16 in St. Anthony Church. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701, or the Jimmy Fund, 44 Binney St., Boston, 02115.

A line in the sand

As this week's edition goes to press, the nation's cities gird for a possible descent into anarchy. As the Rodney King jury deliberates, the routine tide of urban bloodshed threatens to coalesce into a wave of barbarism.

But inner-city problems are often ignored or dismissed from the safe sanctity of the suburbs, which makes an incident like the tragedy at Dartmouth High School Monday perhaps more alarming. While the proliferation of weapons and their infiltration into the schools is cause for concern, gun control, as the Dartmouth stabbing demonstrates, merely treats one symptom of the illness. America is drunk on violence, and only a fool or a knave would argue that its constant graphic depiction on television and in motion pictures does not have a desensitizing effect on our citizens.

Leafing through the pages of this newspaper, one encounters copious evidence that those oft-mocked "traditional values" maintain a steady hold on our communities – most visibly in the form of church functions, school activities, senior citizens' groups, booster clubs, and active civic and fraternal organizations and the charitable activities they sponsor. That values such as family, school, church and community maintain their influence despite a half-century of social engineers' attempts to destroy them and transfer their functions to the Smother State – the government that takes too much from us in order to do too much for us – is a testament to these traditional values' enduring allure.

Too often, the institutions which most profoundly influence our nation – the media elites, the Hollywood elite and government bureaucrats – no longer share the values of average citizens. Educational bureaucrats would have us teach everything in our schools except that which schools ought to teach: how to read and write.

Former U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett said it best:

> "In 'The Abolition of Man,' C.S. Lewis says, 'We laugh at honor, and are shocked to find traitors in our midst.' There are all sorts of analogies to this on the cultural level. For the last 20 years, lots of people have been having a field day making fun of 'Ozzie and Harriet' and scoffing at the nuclear family. As a result, 50 percent of marriages in our country end in divorce. We have scoffed about the idea of self-discipline, the idea expressed so well in the old hymn, words that say 'confirm thy soul in self-control.' As a result, we have two million hard-core drug addicts in the United States of America. We have scoffed at the idea of law and order, and so we see a more than 600 percent increase in violent crime since 1960. And we see that three out of four people convicted of violent crimes do not go to prison."

And we treat violent criminals not as bad people who have committed evil acts and deserve to be punished, but as "victims of their society" who are entitled to countless attempts at rehabilitation – and are shocked when our children are slain in their classrooms.

Those of us who cherish traditional values must strongly avow our dedication to them – without fear of being accused of being "intolerant" or "judgmental." If this is seen as a "backlash," then a backlash against decades of campaigns to destroy our society's oldest, best values is one in which any moral person should feel honored to participate.

America today is tolerant of anything – save intolerance. But intolerance is indeed an appropriate response to behaviors and attitudes which harm our quality of life and erode the integrity of our character. The real lesson of Los Angeles, and of Dartmouth, is that we are not nearly intolerant enough.

Kids need accurate information

letters

(This letter was written in response to the letter published last week by Debbie Flanagan to Mike Gill, director of health ed.)

Dear Mrs. Flanagan:

As a member of the Community Health Education Advisory Committee, I was disturbed by your public letter to Mike Cahill, health education director, and the method you chose to express personal concerns about the Cohasset health education curriculum. I wonder why, since you have these serious questions, you didn't take them directly to Dr. Gill to discuss. Why haven't you carefully read the approved health ed. curriculum and proposed AIDS education material?

Your concerns are based on misinformation and an ignorance of the intent and content of this curriculum. The goal of the material presented by the school is to give our children accurate information that is appropriate to their age. Its premise is that education is the basis for safe, responsible behavior. A clear understanding of facts will help allay the fears that children have about issues like AIDS, which is — and will continue to be — a reality in all of our lives.

The school health ed. program is designed to support parents and reinforce their effort to teach their children about these complex issues. Positive values and behaviors (including abstinence) are emphasized as an essential ingredient — not as an afterthought. The material in the health ed. curriculum was thoroughly reviewed by the Health Ed. Advisory Committee, which is composed of a broad spectrum of community members: parents, teachers, and health professionals. At the present time, an AIDS education curriculum for the elementary level is being developed, and parents and teachers of elementary school-age children have been asked to review proposed material and suggest changes. Now is the time for you to express to Dr. Gill your views about specific points.

In response to your concern that high school students will be talking to your children about sexual issues, I assume you are referring to the K.O.P.E. program. Through KOPE (Kids Organized to Promote Education), about 25 high school students are trained to speak to younger children about drugs, alcohol, and other health ed. topics, including AIDS. These young people have a sincere desire to help other kids learn about the facts and dangers of these serious health issues. In promoting making healthy choices, they assure younger children that to choose to stay away from alcohol and drugs is not only wise but also very acceptable.

With two teenagers involved in this program, I take exception to your insinuation that these students might have objectionable values and would be negative role models for younger children. Children do listen to and learn from their peers; it is important that the information they get is accurate. Rather than suspecting the motives and values of these "peer educators," we should respect them and support their efforts to have a beneficial impact on younger children.

Because you have these concerns, I urge you to educate yourself and read the health ed. curriculum, grade by grade. Talk to the people who can answer your questions knowledgeably. Keep in mind that a solid base of understanding, gained through accurate information, will help our children behave safely and responsibly. Ignorance is not only dangerous but also can be fatal.

Library linked thanks to cable TV

To the Editor:

As many of you may know the Cohasset High School Library and the Paul Pratt Library are now linked in a library network which stretches far beyond the borders of the town of Cohasset. This database of over 2 million books and other materials reflects the holdings of 21 area public libraries stretching from Walpole in the west to the town of Plymouth in the south.

What you may not be aware of is the fact that our high school library was connected to the Old Colony Library Network (OCLN) thanks to the generosity of Continental Cablevision, which cabled the high school and public library early last fall at no cost to either institution. In addition, they have lent the H.S. library a modem and have continued to be on call whenever we have a problem.

We are very grateful to Continental Cable, as well as to Public Library director Dick Hayes, who not only worked tirelessly to make our dream a reality, but also lent us a terminal for this pilot program (so far our high school is the first on the South Shore to be connected to OCLN).

At a time when we rarely read good things about cable television companies, I felt it important to let the Cohasset community know that Continental Cable in this town has stretched "community service" far beyond what I would have expected, and done so with a fine spirit of cooperation. They deserve a Golden Apple Award and a great big "thank you" from all of us.

Support for race appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Rotary Club of Cohasset, I wish to express our most sincere gratitude to all the residents of Town for their support and warm welcome of the 17th Cohasset Roadrace. Special thanks to the Police, Fire and Park Departments and especially the Highway Department for providing a level of safety unsurpassed.

My sincere appreciation to everyone who worked to make the Annual Ritual of Spring the success it was. Our deepest appreciation to Don Harold, Andy Hailer, Sharpless Jones, The Mariner, The Teen Center and Curtis Liquors for their endless contributions.

I also wish to thank Normandie Nighe and Bob Devin for their efforts and organization of the Road Walk.

Again, thank you for making the day the success it was and Cohasset the special place it is.

Girl Scouts appreciate coverage by Mariner

To the Editor:

Mary McElroy, the Cohasset Girl Scout Public Relations manager, together with Rebecca Bates-MacArthur, the Cohasset Girl Scout Coordinator, recently nominated the Cohasset Mariner for the annual Girl Scout Media Support Award. While the award this year is being presented to Beacon Communications Group, I did want you to know how very much everyone connected with Girl Scouting (a community of approximately 50,000 in the Greater Boston area) appreciates the increased coverage the Mariner has been giving Girl Scouting.

As research continues to confirm the importance of single-sex activities for young and adolescent girls, it is important for the community to understand that Girl Scouting can offer an environment which works to help girls achieve their full potential. Work done by such centers as the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women and the work of Radcliffe researchers on how girls are shortchanged in schools underscores the importance of Girl Scouting in the community. Our program is designed specifically to meet girls' needs and interests. We provide a place where girls are encouraged to try new things and experiment with new ideas. We give girls an environment in which they are expected to be decision-makers and leaders, where they can take risks and learn from their own mistakes without the social pressures to conform to stereotyped expectations.

Media coverage is extremely important to us in getting our "message" out, and we appreciate immensely the Cohasset Mariner's support and coverage.

MS walk raises $15K

(The following letter from the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Mass. Chapter was sent to selectmen.)

Dear Board Members:

We would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your support of "Cohasset by the Sea" a Super Cities Walk for multiple sclerosis. This year close to 200 participants walked 1,158 miles throughout Cohasset and pledged $15,000 to the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. There is new progress being made every day into the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis and it is support such as yours that pushes us one step ahead in the fight against MS. We look forward to working with you next year! Thank You!!

Breakfast profit goes to Tee & Park

(The following letter from the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce was sent to Peter Laugelle, Supt. of the Tree & Park Dept.)

Dear Peter,

The Chamber of Commerce held a Breakfast Meeting in Feb. on the topic of Tourism and how the Towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate might combine forces to tap into this market.

The Breakfast was a success and generated a profit of $140.

The Board of Directors has voted to offer this $140 to the Tree and Park Department for the purchase of grass seed, fertilizer and material used for the upkeep of the Town Common and the various Parks and Fields.

Our compliments to you and the Department Employees on the appearance of the Town Common which is such a landmark for visitors and for the condition of the various fields which offers so much pleasure to Cohasset residents.

We would ask that the bills for your supplies be sent to the Chamber for direct payment and we trust that this will not be in violation of any rules or regulations.

Cable rate regulation is on horizon

(The following letter was sent to the board of selectmen.)

Dear Madame Chairman and Members of the Board:

On April 1, the FCC voted to adopt rate regulation rules and to freeze current prices for 120 days starting April 5. The actual regulations will not be released for at least 30 days, 80 a number of facts are unclear, but the following highlights are taken from the FCC's press release.

• All prices for cable service and equipment are frozen for 120 days. Premium services such as HBO and Showtime and Pay-Per-View are not regulated or subject to the freeze.

• The rates for broadcast basic service and tiers of satellite services will be regulated based on benchmarks on a per channel basis. The benchmarks may vary based on the number of satellite services, channels and subscribers. No information about the benchmarks is available yet.

• Communities will be able to regulate rates once they are certified. The FCC will provide simple certification forms and certification will be almost automatic 30 days after the form is filed. The forms are not yet available.

• A system whose rates as of September 30, 1992 were above the benchmarks will be required to roll back the rates to the benchmark or by 10 percent, whichever is less punitive.

• No rollbacks or refunds of broadcast basic rates may be ordered ~ rules are published and become effective, (2) forms on which communities may certify regulatory authority are approved by the Office of Management & Budget, (3) the FCC certifies regulatory authority (30 days after the forms are submitted), (4) the cable operator submits its rates for examination 30 days after the certified franchising authority requests them, and (5) a ruling is made that the rates are unreasonable (within 30 days thereafter). The FCC estimates that this will not occur until September.

• The FCC regulates the rate for tiers of service. The FCC will not order reductions of tier rates until after (1) publications and effectiveness of the rules, (2) approval of complaint forms by the Office of Management & Budget, and (3) submission and review of the complaint by the Commission.

• Equipment charges for converters, remotes, additional outlets and home wiring must be based on cost, using standards developed by the Commission. Those standards are not yet available.

Given last week's announcements in the press and media, I wanted to provide information that might prove helpful in understanding the issue of rate regulation. As more information becomes available I will provide it. In the meantime, should you have any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Plankowners wall a family affair at Govenment Island

Tuesday was a beautiful day to stroll Government Island and that's exactly what Mike, Rosemary, Kristen, 10, Greg, 8, and Matthew, 5, O'Connell did.

Mike says that the short walk from their Border Street home to the Island has been terrific therapy when the daily pace get's a little too hectic.

As a Boston Bruins hockey star and as a coach, Mike certainly is familiar with the demanding side of life. Cohasset natives Mike, Rosemary, and the youngsters love to walk the Island and climb Beacon Rock to view the Ocean to Minot Light and beyond.

However, Tuesday was a particularly special day because Mike and Rosemary enrolled the entire O'Connell family on the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Plankowners Wall. Mike had seen the work progressing and contacted Bob Martin to offer his help.

Mike and Rosemary were especially enthusiastic about the fact that such an enormous project is being done by volunteers.

The O'Connell's said that they've seen the tremendous positive affect created by community meeting places elsewhere. The concept of a self-sustaining public meeting places which preserves an important aspect of Cohasset's seafaring history while offering an unparalleled location and view were enough to convince the O'Connells that this was a project worth supporting by including their family on "The Wall" for posterity.

Call Bob Martin, 383-0787 for details.

Bob Martin, plankowner coordinator, poses with Mike and Rosemary O'Connell and their kids Matthew, 5, Kristen, 10, and Greg, 8, and Lia Stoughton, lightkeeper's on-site coordinator, to promote the Plankowner's Wall, a fund-raiser for the lightkeepers' residence restoration project.

Great American adventure at Deer Hill

Deer Hill students in the sixth grade team, under the guidance of Mr. Becker, Mrs. Magnussen and Mrs. Cicneros have had the privilege of participating in a dynamic education program that linked learning to a live American adventure: Ocean Challenge.

The students followed Skipper Rich Wilson and Bill Biewenga tackle the record aboard the 53-foot trimaran Great American II.

At Deer Hill School, the children received a weekly copy of the local newspaper which carried a special Update Series on Ocean Challenge. The children worked on the Series and on projects related to the voyage at school and at home.

Periodically, children called 1-900-820-BOAT to hear a daily report radioed directly from the GREAT AMERICAN II. The cost of the call and proceeds helped support GREAT AMERICAN II, the Ocean Challenge education program, and the American Lung Association (which Rich Wilson, the Skipper has had severe asthma since childhood). Addition coverage of the voyage and a daily log entry of data was available on PRODIGY, which was made available to the children at school.

The sixth grade team shared in the excitement of an ongoing adventure far offshore, and learned about a variety of subjects, developed new skills and began to see how to reach for his or her own dreams. Parents at home were encouraged to add to their child's enthusiasm for learning by taking an active interest in the Ocean Challenge program.

On April 7, Rich Wilson and Bill Biewenga sailed into Boston Harbor from San Francisco and around Cape Horn to break the record set in 1853 by the clipper Northern Light. The 15,000 mile passage in their 53-foot high-tech trimaran Great American II took 69 days, 19 hours and 44 minutes, more than six days faster than Northern Light.

Among the spectators at the New England Aquarium were Ronnie Nicynski and Tony Bramblett, students in the sixth grade team, who have been actively following the voyage, and Joseph and Krista Nicynski, who not only got to talk with Rich Wilson about his voyage, but got to get on board the Great American II, a moment they will remember for the rest of their lives!

Parenting with humor

Come to the Cohasset PSO annual spring meeting April 28 and hear acclaimed speaker, educator, and well-known wacky person Lorretta La Roche.

Part stand-up comic, part inspirational speaker, La Roche believes that parenting is a very serious job but we can do it and take ourselves lightly. Please note—this April 28 meeting has been changed from May 6 on the school calendar.

Health education group

Any Cohasset resident interested in serving on the Health Education Advisory Committee should attend the meeting scheduled for Tuesday, April 27 at 8 p.m. at the high school. The Committee meets from time to time during the school year to plan health education programs for students in grades K-12.

If you are interested in promoting comprehensive school health education in the Cohasset schools please make an effort to attend.

Agenda includes:

- Review, modify and finalize the elementary school AIDS education needs assessment instrument;
- Update on Project K.O.P.E. (Kids Organized to Promote Education). Cohasset High School peer educators to be trained to promote healthy choices in younger students by presenting classroom learning experiences in various health education topics;
- Discuss the application for Health Protection Grant for Comprehensive School Health in the Cohasset Schools for the amount of $48,766.

Trackster plans to Menis the competition

Record holder moves up ranks

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

As an eighth grader, Faye Menis was far and away the Skippers' leading scorer with 125 points. The impressive total was more than twice that of any other athlete on the girls' varsity track team.

And all the while she compiled an array of impressive performances that are good bets to remain in the junior high record books for some time.

In two seasons, she established new standards in the triple jump (31' 6"), long jump (15' 8"), 100 meters (13.3), 400 meters (65.8), low hurdles (52.8) and the 440-yard run (67.6).

Menis's long jump record came in the Small Schools Division of the South Shore League meet in '91 when she was just a seventh grader. Her leap was good enough to capture first place. Coaches from around the SSL were wondering who the youngster from Cohasset was who had suddenly burst on the track scene.

She had fun trying to improve her personal best times, pushed by older, more experienced track athletes.

But now, two years later, Menis is one of those experienced track athletes. She can no longer run with a care-free attitude. Menis knows she is in the position where strong performances in every meet are a pre-requisite if Cohasset is to break out of its 0-2 start.

She is the integral part of the Skippers' squad.

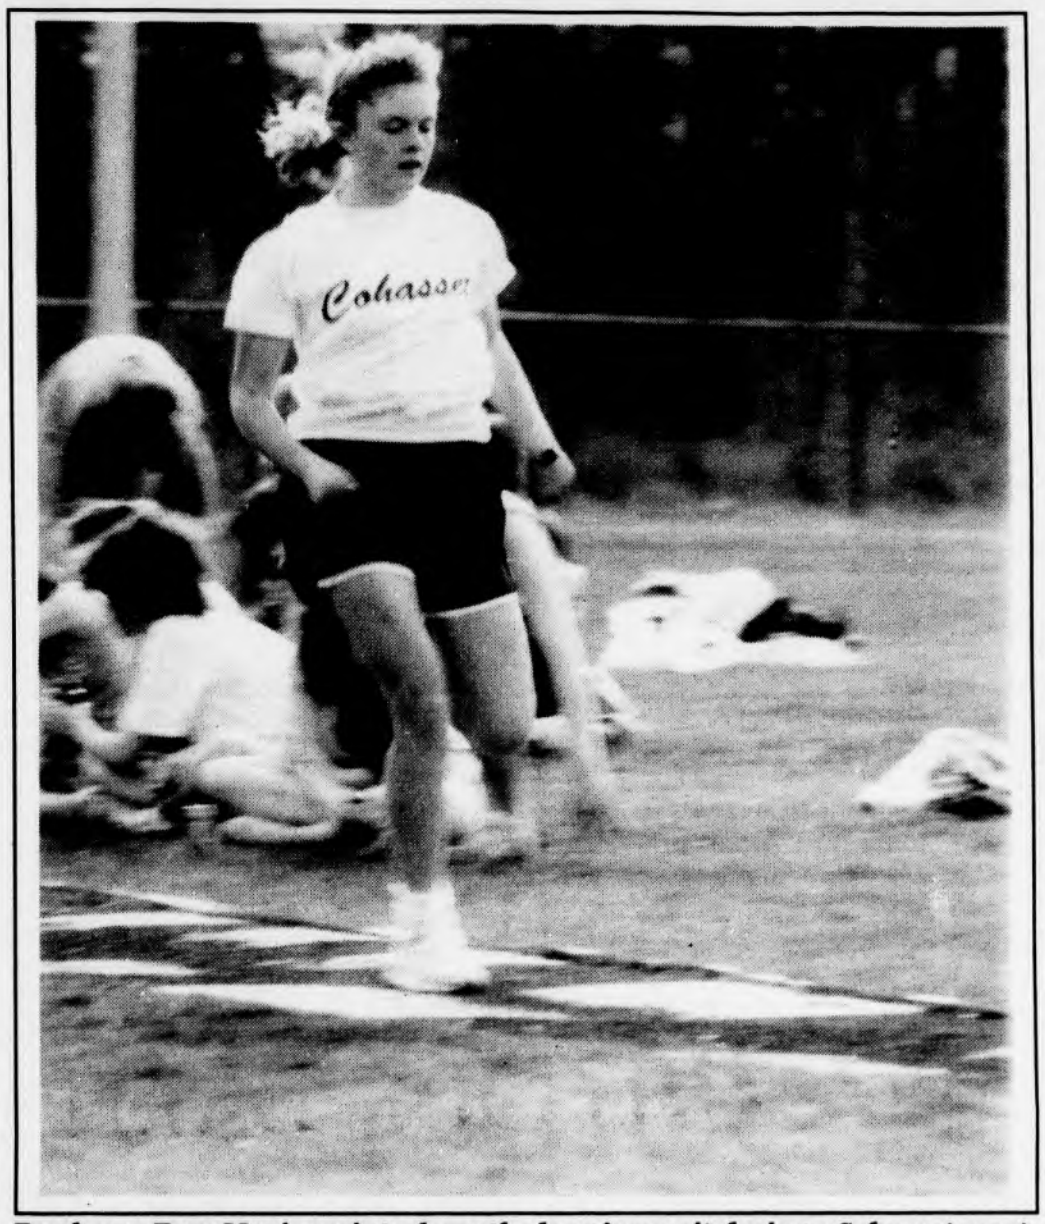
"Before, when I was in seventh and eighth grade," Menis said, "I'd just try to do my best because I was competing against high school kids. It wasn't as though I had to get a certain time.

"Now that I'm in high school, I have to do well. There's more pressure."

Menis is off to a good, but not what she would call a great, start for Cohasset. She says her 70 second, 400-meter victory against East Bridgewater has been her best performance to date, despite the fact it is nearly five seconds off her junior high school record.

"I did decent, but I'd like to do better," she said. "I have a pretty competitive personality. I like to do well."



Freshman Faye Menis sprints down the long jump pit during a Cohasset meet. Menis is the the driving force behind the Skippers' squad this season after setting five junior high records in two years.

One has to remember the season is in its infant stage, following a preseason where training in all sports was pushed back because of the dismal weather conditions. Menis knows, though, that once the weather becomes warmer — and stays that way — her times will begin to drop. She is looking forward to improving her times. More importantly, Menis has the confidence she can see her goals through.

She credits head coach Ron Emmons for providing added motivation to her as an athlete after a sub-par race or a sluggish practice.

"He gives me support and confidence when I get down on myself," Menis said.

She went out for track because it seemed liked the thing to do at the time. Menis moved to Cohasset from Freemont, California — a community 40 minutes from San Francisco — in the Spring of '91. Track was just about to start so Menis decided to give it a try.

"It was track season so I did track," she said, matter-of-factly. "I don't know, I got pretty good."

Menis opened eyes with her seventh-grade varsity total of 60 points. She improved even more the following year with the 125 scintillating points on a team that needed them desperately.

Obviously, many of the points came from the combination of motivation and hard work. But Menis is nothing if not a competitor. She likes to compete in four events because it challenges her both physically and mentally. The 400 is her favorite event for that exact reason.

Though many athletes approach the race as a fast-paced, strategic event, which takes shape in the second 200 meters, Menis looks at it in a different way.

"I like the challenge because it's an all-out sprint," Menis said. "You work hard and have to be in shape."

Despite her success since coming to Cohasset, Menis knows there are areas in certain events she still must work on to reach the goals she has set for herself. She'll be the first one to tell you her start out of the blocks in the 200 — the event Menis considers her weakest of the fours — needs more attention during workouts.

"It's alright," she said of her first few steps at the gun. "I probably have to get on that."

Although track is the sport where she has found the most success, Menis by no means limits herself to getting into racing shape year-round. During the summer she races her 15-foot Lazer sailboat in a series of races and regattas in and around Massachusetts Bay and New England.

During the winter Menis played on the Skippers' girls basketball team. The constant running and sprinting downcourt through the course of games and practices, complemented the anaerobic workouts she now does during the spring.

As for the team itself, Menis believes it will take time for the young athletes to develop enough for the squad to move up against the likes of Norwell and Scituate.

"We have a lot of younger competitors," she said. "We probably won't win many (meets) but we go into each meet positive."

Younger competitors. Sounds a lot like a junior high schooler who blitzed the league in her first two seasons. The best is still yet to come.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

An 11-year-old boy in the fifth grade broke his school's nine-year record in last week's Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea by nearly a minute, clocking in at 46:03 for the 10K (6.2 miles) distance.

While I am genuinely impressed by the boy's performance, I question the wisdom in an elementary school student running, let alone racing in, a 10K race.

Running is an excellent activity for the cardiovascular system. Individuals burn calories for up to three hours following a run. It has been proven that the sport relieves stress and suppresses one's appetite. It is, however, rough on the muscles and bones in the legs. Experienced road runners at all levels sustain injuries at some point in their career, no matter how minor. Achilles and hamstring injuries ended 1982 Boston Marathon winner Alberto Salazar's career, while several other promising athletes have given up the sport because of frustrating injuries.

And the odds of an 11 year old becoming injured is much higher. Kids at that young an age are still growing and their bones and muscles are years away from being developed enough for the kind of training needed to race in a 10K. Several athletes who have had illustrious careers in high school and college started out, not by racing or training, but by playing youth soccer, baseball and basketball. Only when they were older did they decide that running was the sport they wished to pursue seriously.

If young kids want to race, there are weekend runs at D.W. Field Park in Brockton. The distance is a more reasonable 2.2 miles and the kids are awarded with medals and ribbons, running against others in their own age groups. The series is not only safer from an injury standpoint, but it also serves as a great motivator to excel at the shorter distances before moving up at a later age.

Summer track meets with events ranging from 100-yard sprints to the mile are also held in several communities, the most popular being the Hershey Track Meet in July.

I learned from my high school coach, Ernie Butler of Norwell, that a runner must first build a base of long, slow distance running (LSD) before beginning more strenuous workouts. He always referred to the base as "miles in the bank." Without those miles to strengthen the runner's heart, lungs and muscles, he may not as well run in the race.

My advice to the obviously talented 11 year old: take a break from the 10K and try your hand at the shorter distances. Judging from your excellent time, you should enjoy success in those races as well. And you'll be saving yourself from possible injury. And remember, 1984 Olympic Marathon champion Carlos Lopes of Portugal was 38 years old when he defeated the field in Los Angeles. You have nothing but time in a sport that you can enjoy for many years to come.

Whitman-Hanson high jumpers Mandy Petty and Sarah Murray both made the most of their performances in the Panthers' opening-meet victory over Duxbury last Thursday. Petty and Murray became the first two females in W-H history to clear 5 feet in the high jump in the same meet.

Petty, the school record-holder at 5 feet 2 inches, won the high hurdles and triple jump, while finishing second to Murray in the 330 hurdles. Murray was runner-up to Petty in the high hurdles.

The Bridgewater-Raynham girls softball team looked liked the Doctor Jekyl and Mr. Hyde squad of the Old Colony League during its opening week of action.

The Trojans were beset by nine errors during their 8-7 loss to non-league opponent Brockton after leading 7-1 going into the bottom half of the last inning.

B-R showed a different face in its next game as they pounded Quincy pitching for 15 runs on 12 hits. The big inning was the fifth when the Trojans put seven runs across the plate.

Experience, balance to fuel lacrosse squad

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset's lacrosse tri-captain Charlie Endris is the epitome of how the Skippers' program has developed since its inception, five years ago.

Endris, the team's leading goal-scorer in '92 with 33 tallies, joined the squad as a seventh-grader and has developed ever since.

"He's not a big kid," said head coach Ken Ekberg, who played and coached lacrosse at UMass-Amherst, as well as Tufts and Brandeis.

"When he started as a seventh-grader Charlie couldn't have been 100 pounds soaking wet. He stayed with the program and worked with it. He's got good stick skills, mobility, reaction and vision."

Endris isn't the only player to improve his game since taking up the sport. Ekberg sees a well-balanced squad on both offense and defense.

"What has really helped us a lot is that several of the kids on the team have played the game three, four and five years," he said. "Our stick-handling skills have improved over the course of the five years. And given the fact they've been with the team, they have become good athletes."

Cohasset is already 2-0 this season after defeating Xaverian (13-3) last Tuesday and Salem (13-2) two days later.

Offensively, both attackmen Chris Goodman and Chris Adams, who played indoors and during the winter, struck for hat tricks in the first game and a goal in the second. Adams also added four assists against Salem.

Ekberg is especially high on Goodman having a monster season.

"He potentially could be a big goal-scorer this year," Ekberg said.

The Skippers have allowed only five goals in their pair of games, but equally impressive has been the job they've done in killing eight of nine penalties assessed against them so far.

With the team off to a strong start, Ekberg has the confidence the players on the '93 team are up to the task of tackling what he calls an "ambitious (18-game) schedule", which includes games against Falmouth, Boston College High and Austin Prep.

Senior tri-captain Doug Ellinger, a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic last year, leads a midfield which includes Willie Adams and Eric Drysdale. The second midfield is comprised of Charlie Smith, Mark Mercurio and freshman Chris McKenna.

Defensive players Mike Connor and Ben Chittick are the top-two play-man-down athletes on the field and were a big reason for the Skippers' success when short-handed. George Seccen will also be used during penalties.

Junior goaltender Brandon Devoe has been sharp in the net after two games, while defensive players Max Neveox, Dave Leahy, Peter Collins and attackman Ben Redfield are also expected to contribute.

Extra points . . .

It should be interesting to see which squad shows up on game-day for the rest of the season. Either way, B-R should be an exciting team to watch.

Congratulations to Scituate's Walter Brown for his well-deserved selection to the Boston Globe all-scholastic basketball team.

Brown is not only a talented player but a class act.

After his team was eliminated by Jeremiah Burke in overtime in the state tourney, Brown patiently answered every question offered by the press, despite being obviously upset about his high school career ending.

At the end of the questioning Brown even thanked members of the press for their coverage during the season. Imagine Roger Clemens doing that.

Watch for Silver Lake's Amy King over the next year.

King, only a junior, made the Boston Globe all-scholastic second team in girls' basketball and is entering the softball season as a returning all-star.

Next year she has a solid chance at making all-state in basketball and possibly softball. In addition, she owns a 4.0 grade point average.

Baseball camp

The Community Center will offer Early Bird Baseball Camp with Steve Ferroli during the school vacation, April 19-23. Sharpen your pitch, improve your defense, learn how to run the bases in special lessons. Techniques in sacrifice bunting, ground ball play, fly ball play, cut-off positioning, and cut-off execution will be covered. Children ages 7 to 12 can join in on the fun Monday to Friday, from 3 to 5 p.m. The cost is $50. Please call the center at 383-0088 to register.

Golf tourney set

Join Honorary Chairmen John Dennis, Sean McDonough, Will McDonough, and Glenn Ordway when the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will be fighting cancer from the fairways by hosting its First Annual Golf Tournament Monday, May 17 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The tournament will be a four-person scramble format, and both individual and foursome entries are welcome. Tee-off time is 12:30 p.m.

The entry fee of $150 per player includes a box lunch, greens fees, cart, prime rib or swordfish dinner, gifts and prizes. A Chevrolet S10 Blazer sponsored by Best Chevrolet will be awarded to anyone who gets a hole in one on the designated par 3 hole. Other prizes will include closest to the pin, longest drive and teams with lowest (net) scores. All proceeds from the tournament will go directly to the American Cancer Society.

The Committee Co-chairmen for this event are Julie Lacy, James Cox, M.D. and Barbara Nermoe. Committee members include Cheryl Barnes, Marianne Glassanos, Osborne Ingram, Fran Matthews, Justine Palmieri and Jane Strone. For further information, please call Julie Lacy at 749-9175 or Barbara Nermoe at 749-6439.

Adventure course

Come join the exciting challenges encountered on the Cohasset High Ropes Course.

Participants learn safe and proper use of equipment, creation and employment of climbing knots and skills in belaying and rappelling. In addition to technical skills, climbers will engage in problem solving, team building play, receive and provide catalytical support, increase self-confidence and group trust that allows one to meet the challenges all the while having fun.

The course is offered:

Young Adults (ages 14-18): Advanced Assistant Training Course for those interested in seeking employment as assistant staff on the ropes course. Four consecutive weeks, 7 to 10 p.m., beginning May 8.

The Bread Shop

FRESH BREAD BAKED THROUGHOUT THE DAY

If you've been wondering where that fresh baked bread scent has been coming from in Hingham square --it's The Bread Shop -- the hottest new bakery in town.

"We bake bread on a rotating basis throughout the day; that way you know it's always fresh out of the oven," says Jephson Hilary, owner of the bakery. "We carry French bread, seven grain, sour dough -- many others -- and we'll special order any kind of bread or a specific bread shape for a holiday or special occasion."

The Bread Shop also carries a wide selection of muffins -- raspberry, cranberry orange, lemon - poppyseed to name a few, as well as authentic French croissants and brioches.

Open Tuesday to Sunday from 7:00 am until the bread is gone.
The Bread Shop is located at 107 South Street, Hingham

Brewed Awakenings

ESPRESSO, CAPPUCINO -- AND A VIEW!

Next time you're in Hingham square, stop at Brewed Awakenings for a cup of specialty coffee -- and a relaxing view. Open since February, the shop offers a variety of coffee drinks from the classic espresso to the more exotic mochaccino -- a blend of hot chocolate and espresso.

"Our espresso drinks have been most popular," says Barb St. Onge, co-owner of the shop. "We also have flavored coffees and a wide selection of teas." Brewed Awakenings gets its coffee from Indigo Coffee Roasters, located in the Berkshires.

"Indigo specializes in small-batch roasting -- that way we have more control over the evenness of the roast, get a higher quality bean -- and better coffee," says St. Onge.

St. Onge knows her coffee; she can tell you about the degrees of roasting and how the sugar in the beans caramelizes, giving the coffee a mellow flavor. Brewed Awakenings carries 30 varieties of coffee from all over the world. They also sell Braun coffee equipment, mugs, tea-pots and coffee theme t-shirts.

While you're sipping that mochaccino, try a home-baked muffin, cookie or sweet roll -- or the international desserts like Amaretto mocha torte or Tirami-su.

Iced coffee and espresso drinks -- all made to order -- are now available for spring and summer.

Store hours are: Monday - Friday 7 am - 6 pm:
Saturdays 8 am - 6 pm: & Sundays 8 am - 4 pm
Located at: 19 Main Street, Hingham

Girls afternoon out

The Community Center, under the direction of Ruthann Sargent and staff, will be offering a girl's afternoon out Tuesday, April 20 from noon to 2 p.m. Girls ages five - 11 are welcome to participate with friends for an afternoon of fun. Pre-registration is required.

Please call the center at 383-0088.

Nature camps

Outdoor nature camps at the Community Center are most popular for preschoolers ages three, four and five during the month of June. The center is presently registering children for the morning and afternoon classes. Children will enjoy a great deal of outdoor fun including exploring nature, water play, art projects, and much more!

Plan ahead and call the center at 383-0088 to insure a spot for your preschooler.

Perennials is topic

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting April 27 at Walton Rogers Hall, St. Stephens Church. Joseph Hudak, author and lecturer, will treat us with his vast knowledge of gardening. The subject will be "Gardening with Perennials Month to Month." Coffee is served at 9 a.m.

Come and get some great ideas for your garden.

Decorative art workshops

Before you start any re-decorating this spring, take advantage of the South Shore Art Center's many decorative art workshops. The one-day workshops meet at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, Saturdays from 10 a.m to 4 p.m. with a 45-minute lunch break. Pre-registration is required; call (617) 383-9548.

Learn how to make a color wheel and custom mix paints in Jane Viator's Practical Color for Decorating and Design, April 17 ($60 members/$75 nonmembers). Helen Babis-Licare shows how to create 2-D and 3-D projects in Colored Clay, May 1 ($35 members/$45 nonmembers with $25 firing fee).

Decorative Stencilling for the Home, offered May 8 with Judith Guilkie, helps you create a coordinated decorator look ($60 members/$75 nonmembers). On May 15, follow Helen Babis-Licare's instruction on designing and creating Floor Cloths ($55 members/$70 nonmembers). Jane Viator shows how to utilize graining and marbleizing in Painted Finishes with Acrylics May 29 ($60 members/$75 nonmembers).

For more information, please call (617) 383-9548.

PSSB walk slated

A stroll along Wollaston Beach will be a part of the 19th annual Walk-For-PSSB Sunday, April 25. The Protestant Social Service Bureau, 776 Hancock St.,

Registration is at 1 p.m. at the Bethany Congregational Church, Coddington St. at Spear St. (behind the library) and the Walk starts at 1:30 p.m.

senior scene

AARP to meet

The next meeting of the South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will be Thursday, April 22 at 1:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A Hingham.

After a short business meeting, Mat Brown, cartoonist, will describe the "World of Building #19." Refreshments will be served.

Any member of the National AARP or ARTA may join a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Museum trip slated

Cohasset Council on Aging is taking phone registrations for the upcoming trip to the Danforth Museum of Art with lunch to follow at the Longfellow's Wayside Inn. Date April 30. Cost, $24.95.

Please call 383-9112 for more information. Make checks payable to Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging.

paul pratt library corner

Patience Towle

Those who think 'library trustee' is synonymous with quiet, conventional, and perhaps even a little stuffy need to take another look.

Cohasset's newest library trustee is anything but a stereotypical book worm.

Not only does Patience Towle have style but she's blessed with an infectious sense of humor.

special friends

And the oomph she brought the the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library is bound to transfer over to her new role as trustee.

"They were a very quiet group," Patience recalls about the 'Friends' in the mid-80s when she first became involved.

At that time Patience's son, Garrick, was entering the first grade.

"It was safe to stay home then," she says with a laugh.

So she put her career as a para-legal with a Boston law firm on hold and brought her talents to a place she has always loved — the library.

"I was an only child and my parents were both only children. So we read all the time," she recalls. "I learned the library is a refuge for almost anything you need — entertainment, distraction, information, self-help."

In Patience's five years (three years as president) with the 'Friends', the quiet group has become loud advocates for the library.

But the new, more aggressive role of the Friends came reluctantly.

"At that time (1986) the needs of the library beyond the volunteer staff were not that great," Patience says. It took a while to feel the cuts to be in the bone (as a result of Prop. 2-1/2)."

"In 1989 the library started not to have money to meet the minimum standards and not qualify for grants (funded) with public money."

When awarding grants, the state requires libraries be opened with a staff librarian 53 hours and that the budget be a certain percentage more than the previous year, among other conditions.

"So the trustees came to us for money for operating expenses," she says. "It caught us by surprise. We complied but felt sandbagged — wrongly."

Patience says the two groups held a joint meeting to iron out differences.

"We let it all hang out. We expressed our feelings about public vs. private money; the autonomy of the Friends and the ways of doing things.

"We've made a quantum leap," she says.

Now both the trustees and Friends send representatives to each other's meetings. And the trustees were involved from the beginning with the new library logo and book bags.

Patience sees her role as trustee focusing less on fund-raising and more on public awareness.

"I want to keep the library in the townspeople's eye. It's a public library and I don't want to see it become a private library run by an elite."

She explains that taxpayer money is not solely responsible for keeping the doors open.

Out of the $275,000 annual budget, the Friends provide $5,000, the endowment about $12,000, and some comes from public grants. And not even included is the value of volunteers who provide an estimated $40,000 worth of service annually to the library.

"Times are tough, but every dollar lost on an annual basis — it takes two years to recoup from maintenance to books," Patience notes.

She says the library is a more important resource than ever.

"There is so much information now. The library can organize it and get it to you in a form you can handle. It can help with overload."

Patience's favorite reading is science fiction by Isaac Asimov and mysteries by Margery Allingham.

She finds time in her busy schedule to read, by reading fast.

"I read very fast. I took speed reading," she recalls.

"I read a book every day or two for entertainment or information. I love to read fast because the plot develops quickly."

Patience lives on Lamberts Lane with her husband Richard W. Towle, Jr. and son Garrick, who's in the seventh grade at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High.

Regionalizing school curriculum is an option

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset School Committee, at its meeting Thursday, April 1, received recommendations from the Regional School District Planning Committee regarding the feasibility of creating a regional school district with Hingham. Jim Kirk, a representative of the planning committee which is comprised of representatives from the two towns, gave an in depth presentation to the school committee regarding the possibility of a regionalization with Hingham.

"The representatives from Cohasset met with representatives from Hingham on five different occasions to discuss the possibility of regionalization. We set out to investigate full regionalization and we attempted to keep an open mind about the fact that we might encounter ideas that fall short of full regionalization," Kirk stated.

The Regional School District Planning Committee recognized that doing a full cost out budget for the proposed regionalization would involve tremendous amounts of time and money. As a result, the committee decided to attempt a rough budget or a variance budget in order to determine if projected savings would warrant an initial outlay of significant money in order to develop a full budget.

The committee considered a Cohasset/Hingham regionalization whereby the present Hingham High School would serve as a regional high school, the present Cohasset High School would serve as a regional junior high school. In addition, the plan called for the integration of the two school departments' salary structures and the closing of one school in Hingham.

With this plan in mind, the committee identified potential savings as a result of closing the school in Hingham and as a result of the pooling of administrative and clerical functions. The committee, through the assistance of School Superintendent Stephen Hart, set an arbitrary percentage of savings associated with cuts in administrative costs at 40 percent. Admittedly, the 40 percent was considered a very aggressive estimate by the committee.

The costs identified by the committee included the construction of some additional space at Hingham High School, added transportation expenses and expenditures associated with fully integrating the two departments' salary structures.

The findings of the Regional School District Planning Committee were presented to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in March of this year. The committee anticipated that if the state provided the regionalization incentive money that it offers to towns that undertake regionalization, the savings would amount to 1-1/2 percent of the two towns' annual school budgets. Because of the relative sizes of the two towns, Cohasset would recognize about 1/3 of the total savings and Hingham the other 2/3 of the savings. Without the incentives, the plan would actually cost the towns an additional 1-1/2 percent of their combined annual school budgets.

Based on these projected numbers, the Regional School District Planning Committee recommended to the Cohasset School Committee that the town not pursue full regionalization at this time. The projected savings were not enough to warrant the expenditure of additional funds in order to do a full cost out.

The committee did recommend to the school committee that the town consider the possibility of a regionalized curriculum with Hingham and Hull. What this could involve would be shared classes between the towns through cable television, fiber optics and technology. This type of regionalized curriculum would increase class choices and electives for area students. The school committee fully supported the planning committee's plan to further develop this concept.

TRIP TO SPAIN

In other business, the school committee received a presentation from foreign language teacher James Federico regarding a recent trip involving Cohasset and Scituate students to Spain. The trip ran from February 6-22, 1993 and was part of an exchange program with the city of Getxo in Spain. The students spent time in Madrid, Brussels and various other Spanish locations. Students were hosted by Spanish families which, according to Federico, helped the students to learn a great deal about the Spanish language.

Federico, along with Emily Greene, a teacher from the Scituate schools, organized and chaperoned the trip.

"This trip was a tremendous success. The administrators and the families were totally receptive," Federico explained.

The students were able to observe the educational system in Spain and to take various field trips to museums, sporting events, monasteries, cathedrals and the sites of medieval villages.

Police say false alarm calls prove costly

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset police plan to get tough about the false alarms that come into the station.

Starting May 1, police will charge a fine for individuals or businesses who rack up more than three false alarms in a calendar year.

Last year 667 alarms came into the station and 99 percent were false, Chief Brian W. Noonan said. One business alone had 33 false alarms.

"To me every time an alarm comes in there's a great potential for danger," he said.

"We send one or sometimes two officers to respond to alarms."

Noonan said the cruiser travels "at a quicker rate than normal" so the potential for accidents is greater.

And there's also a chance for officers to get injured needlessly.

In a recent incident in Marshfield, a patrolman slipped on ice and broke a leg while answering a false burglary alarm. He'll be out of work for at least four months.

Under the town by-law, which has been in force since 1989, police can charge fines of $25 for each false alarm in excess of three occurring within a calendar year.

The police must notify the alarm user by certified mail or service in hand by a police officer of the violation. The user must submit payment within 30 days to the treasurer/collector for deposit into

Specter of rabies on the horizon

Raccoons and skunks and other local wildlife are on the move again, so now is the time to critter-proof your home, notes Animal Control Officer William Quigley.

Rabies is making its way to the South Shore and experts expect cases to be reported this summer.

"For every call for a sick animal or one who is acting strangely, I meet a police officer (at the scene) and we evaluate the animal," he says.

"Every animal that is destroyed has to be send to the state lab for rabies testing."

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik takes the animal's head into the state lab.

Quigley explains that calls "come in spurts." Recently he had five calls about wild animals that were suspect in one week.

Once two cases of rabies are found — rabies will be viewed as having arrived and "everything will be considered to be rabid," he says. There have been no cases reported on the South Shore yet — but rabies has turned up in Belmont,

School board considers benefits of DARE program

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee addressed the school committee last Thursday in an effort to familiarize the committee with the well-known Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) Program which is part of the curriculum of many local school systems. The Drug and Alcohol Committee hopes to get D.A.R.E. implemented by the Cohasset school system but this will require the approval of the school committee.

"We have a very young committee and we are still defining our role in the community. We see our role as informational and educational. We have talked about D.A.R.E. for about four years and Mike Gill, the health education coordinator, was not overly enthusiastic about it. But based upon the results of the drug survey which Mike conducted last year and based upon some incidents involving some junior high school students last year, we were frightened and decided that D.A.R.E. was worth a second look," explained Drug and Alcohol Committee member Ellie Waal at the recent school committee meeting.

"As a committee, we wonder if we can do more. We wonder if D.A.R.E. is appropriate at this time," Waal stated.

"This has become a very emotional issue. People are becoming divided over this. That is not what we want. We think that this is a decision to be made by the school committee and the health coordinator," she added.

At the request of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, Officer Dominic D'Arcangelo of the Scituate Police Department addressed the Cohasset School Committee in an attempt to familiarize them with the D.A.R.E. program which he administers in Scituate.

"I am not here to sell the program to you. In fact, my being here tonight is a little bit like the peer pressure that we teach kids to reject. But the difference is that

Wanted: people for town boards

Members of town's "Troika" committee is going to reach out and touch someone, they hope.

The committee which consists of Town Moderator George Marlette, Advisory Committee Chairman Nan Roth, and Selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby plan to be more 'pro-active' in attracting talented folk to the town boards.

The Troika met last week to identify vacancies on the boards for which it is the appointing authority.

Marlette, who was recently elected to a three-year term, said the 'new' Troika will work well together.

"The three of us agreed that we need to be open about the process and need to go out and actively solicit talent (to serve)," he said.

"We want to open it (government) up and encourage participation."

"There are a lot of talented people in town," Marlette added.

Cohasset residents interested in the following positions should notify the Troika by May 15: advisory committee (one position open); capital budget committee (one); drainage advisory committee (one); government structure committee (one) and personnel committee (two).

"Every interested Cohasset citizen will be given consideration," Marlette said. "To all who have been involved in the past, I encourage you to continue your service. Newcomers and other with time and talent to spare are urged to come forward."

Appointments to the various positions will be made by Troika on or after its next regularly scheduled meeting May 25. Applicants can leave their name at the town clerk's office or send a letter of interest to the Town Moderator, P.O. Box 203, Cohasset 02025.

Notice to taxpayers

Listed below are the due dates for various tax bills mailed recently from the Treasurer-Collector's office;

Fourth Quarter Real Estate Tax Bills due Monday, May 3, 1993, 4:30 p.m.

Fourth Quarter Personal Property Tax Bills due Monday, May 3, 4:30 p.m.

Fiscal 1993 Boat Excise bills due Tuesday, June 1, 4:30 p.m.

Payments must be received in the treasurer/collector's office by the close of business on each due date. Postmark dates will not be accepted. NO EXCEPTIONS.

Mailing address for tax payments is: Treasurer-Collector's Office, P. 0. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025. For those taxpayers who wish to pay their taxes in person, office hours are: Monday and Tuesday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Wednesday (April 28 only) 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A number of bills have been returned to the office due to improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, extension 113.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

Big borrowing delayed

As a cost saving measure, the town will use available funds to purchase a $90,000 ambulance authorized through a debt-exclusion override last spring.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained that state law permits towns to use available funds as an interim measure to avoid the costs of temporary borrowing.

He said the town likes to lump together various purchases and projects for long-term borrowing to save in legal costs and paper work.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a former United States Marine, was honored this past March 16 by the Massachusetts Veterans Service Agents Association in a ceremony at the State House in the Great Hall. State Veterans' Service Agents Assoc. President John D. Sullivan, at left, and City of Boston Deputy Commissioner Thomas Lyons, at right, presented the Agent's Distinguished Service Award to the Honorable Mary Jeanette Murray, Third Plymouth District.

Student art contest sketched out

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Freshman State Senator Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth) is etching out a constituency among area artists.

McDonald has joined forces with the South Shore Arts Center of Cohasset to host an art competition for high school students in his district.

"Anything you can do to promote an awareness and focus on art is important," McDonald said.

Students from Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth are eligible. Artwork may be painted or drawn, but must depict South Shore landscapes.

McDonald said he got the idea for the competition when he was a guest speaker at the South Shore Art Center several weeks ago. During his visit, artists from the center expressed their concern about the lack of funding for the arts and a decline in artistic resources in schools.

McDonald said he hopes the competition will encourage high school students to appreciate art more.

This latest team-up for art's sake is one of several focused attempts by the South Shore Arts Center to promote art in the schools, according to Joan Wright.

Wright, the center's public relations director, said last year the center offered two new programs to area schools.

"We are taking new directions to meet these kids," Wright said.

Artists in Residence is an outreach program the center sponsored for Hull's elementary school. Through the program, artists from the center donated their time to the schools and taught art throughout the year.

Arts to Go is another successful program the center sponsors.

"It brings people to the schools to lecture about art history," Wright said. Artists associated with the center lend their time and expertise to the project and conduct the lectures for all grade levels.

Arts to Go visited schools in Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Duxbury and Pembroke. Wright said the center is having trouble keeping up with demand for the program.

A grant from the Brooks Foundation purchased the slides and materials the artists use during their presentations.

McDonald said budget cuts have drastically reduced the art departments in many schools, and praised the South Shore Arts Center for taking steps to rectify the imbalance.

He said he developed an appreciation of art in college.

"I took an ancient art history class," he said.

He added that art and artists enhance a community's character and value.

"It's very important to recognize the role artists can play in a community," McDonald said. "It plays a role in how people choose where they want to live."

A work from each town will be selected by a panel of artists associated with the center and be exhibited in McDonald's office at the State House.

McDonald has offered $50 awards for the best work selected from each town.

Entries must be framed and wire for hanging and brought to the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset April 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or May 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Winners will be announced May 7.

All entries will be hung at the Art Center May 4 through May 20. For more information call 383-9548.

NO-NOTICE APPOINTMENTS

QUESTION: My Realtor has been showing my home with little advance notice, stating that the prospect is from out-of-town with little time to look for a house. Is this to my disadvantage?

ANSWER: To the contrary, the busy, out-of-town prospect is your best prospect. Never get annoyed by a last-minute appointment. These out-of-town transferees don't have the luxury of time. They need a house now — not a year from now. They're more apt to make a bonafide, immediate offer than one who has all the time in the world. Don't treat it as an inconvenience, but rather as an opportunity to accomplish what you wanted in the first place — sell your home!

High fashion shopping with at-home touch

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

If you're a woman of the 90s, finding the time to shop may be very difficult.

"They have no time to go to Boston or Chestnut Hill and chances are they're doing a lot of catalog shopping as do I," notes Lynn Palmiter.

So the Border Street resident has an answer for the local woman who wants to have great clothes without the hassle.

As a new consultant with Carlisle, Palmiter provides in home shopping with the personal touch.

Employed full-time in the banking industry, Palmiter was looking for a fun sideline.

"I read in a Junior League magazine that Carlisle was looking for consultants. So I chatted with the regional manager over the phone; went to Pittsburgh for training — and here I am," she says enthusiastically.

Carlisle fashions, which are all separates, are made of natural materials like silk, cotton, linen, wool and leather and have the fine fabrics and workmanship of the higher-priced designer clothes.

Four times a year (Spring, Summer, Fall and Holiday) Palmiter shows the Carlisle collection in her home. She is developing a mailing list and and will notify those on the list of an upcoming show by invitation.

And although individual appointments are set up for an hour each, those who come should not feel obligated to stay the full hour, she explains.

"If you have a special event coming up like a wedding or if you have a really handsome jacket and want to find a smashing skirt — you can come and poke around and look for something really great," Palmiter says.

Sizes run from two-to-14 and as with other higher quality fashions, the sizes are generous. If you normally wear a '10', you may find you're an '8' in a Carlisle, Palmiter says.

And because the clothes are separates, available in a range of fabrics, the combinations are endless. The average price of a separate is $200. Jackets range from $95 to $325 for example.

The belts have "big important buckles," Palmiter explains, and the buttons — which are made in Italy — "are like pieces of jewelry and can always be replaced through Carlisle."

Carlisle, which is based in New York, is very popular in the west and Midwest. Ann Richards, the governor of Texas, was wearing Carlisle fashions in a recent photograph with President Bill Clinton in the New York Times magazine.

The company's advertisements recently appeared in Vogue, Town & Country, and Harper's Bazaar magazines.

Palmiter says the personal, one-on-one approach is part of Carlisle's attraction.

"I am familiar with the entire line and can show possibilities that may not occur to some gals."

Palmiter adds that she keeps records of her clients' interests and purchases so "if two pals are going to the same wedding, I don't sell them the same outfit."

She says those who know Carlisle clothes are thrilled they're available again on the South Shore. There was a Carlisle consultant in Hingham in the mid-80s, Palmiter explains.

"But those who have never heard of Carlisle, I hope they'll take a look," she says.

Palmiter thinks the fashions appeal to a range of women's ages.

"Why wouldn't someone want to look as pretty at 70 as someone does at 30? I see no reason why not," she says.

Although being a Carlisle consultant requires a lot of work and planning and the shows in her home will eat up some of her vacation time, Palmiter has no complaints.

"I like pretty clothes and doing it out of my house gave it appeal," she recalls. "And I can work it around other things on the evenings, weekends and holidays."

And there's an extra benefit.

"It's fun," she says. "And I get a kick out of meeting new people."

If you would like to be on Palmiter's mailing list, her phone number is 383-1454. She will show the Carlisle summer collection May 1-6. Appointments can be

Some tips on how to critter-proof your home

Wild animals are an important part of our world — but they are usually unwelcome as guests in our homes. The recent spread of rabies into New England makes it especially important to prevent contact between wildlife and people or pets.

Raccoons

Raccoons are as intelligent as dogs and cats, and they possess far greater manual dexterity. They prefer a woodland habitat but have proven to be very adaptable to urban and suburban environments.

They make their nests almost anywhere — in tree cavities, brush piles, abandoned burrows, chimneys, attics, crawl spaces, storm sewers, haystacks and barn lofts. They usually have more than one denning site available for use at any one time.

Most active at night, raccoons sometimes also forage for food by day. Their diet includes fruits, vegetables, nuts and insects, as well as small animals. The following precautions will help you keep raccoons out of your house and yard:

• Make sure your chimneys are securely capped with hardware cloth. Raccoons have little hands that can easily dislodge loose screens or covers. They are agile climbers, and females like to use the flue or smoke shelf as a den. If your chimney is not capped, ask your local chimney sweep or roofing company to do it.

• If a raccoon is already living in your chimney, do not try to smoke it out! Lighting a fire in your fireplace may overcome the animal and cause it to drop into the fire. Instead, place a radio tuned to a loud music station or talk show in your fireplace. The noise will frighten most wild animals away.

If that approach doesn't work, try placing a small dish of household ammonia or pine oil cleaning liquid in your fireplace and open the damper slightly. Raccoons do not tolerate strong odors and the fumes will probably force the occupants of your chimney to leave.

Because these fumes can be toxic, do not leave the dish there for more than eight hours at a time. In any case, be sure the mother has removed her young before sealing your chimney.

Check vents, gables, and eaves to be sure screens have not been torn away from your attic. To repair holes in walls or torn screens, use mortar or metal hardware cloth at least 26-gauge in thickness. Tack down hardware cloth securely.

• If a raccoon is already living in your attic, you can encourage it to leave by turning the lights on, leaving a radio tuned to a loud music station there, and increasing your activity in that part of the house.

Once the animal and its young are gone, repair the opening through which they entered your home and trim away all nearby tree limbs to prevent their return. Tacking sheet metal down around areas where animals tend to climb also will prevent them from getting the footing they need to go up walls and trees.

• An electrified fence can be the perfect solution for serious gardeners experiencing problems with wildlife. String two strands of ordinary 2mm galvanized wire along insulator posts around the perimeter of the garden four and twelve inches from the ground.

Connect the wire to a 110-volt commercial fence charger with alternating current. The amperage is so low that no physical harm is done to any animal that comes into contact with the wire, but the shock is enough to prevent return raids on your vegetables.

Be sure to keep plants from touching the wire to avoid grounding the battery. To keep woodchucks and other burrowers out of the garden, a barrier fence also must be buried at least one foot deep in the ground.

• A less expensive approach is to sprinkle your plants with epsom salts, which raccoons and woodchucks find very distasteful. It also adds magnesium to the soil and will make your plants greener. This treatment must be repeated after every rain.

You can also try placing rags soaked in ammonia on posts placed at intervals around the perimeter of the garden. The odor is enough to deter most unwanted visitors. The rags must be re-soaked when the smell of ammonia fades.

• If a raccoon or opossum enters your house, close the doors between the animal and the rest of the house, then open doors and windows to the outside. Let the animal escape on its own. Leave the capture and handling of wildlife to the experts.

Skunks

Skunks are beneficial, omnivorous creatures with a unique system of self-defense. They eat mostly insects, but they will also eat eggs, mice and other small animals and fruits. They are primarily nocturnal animals.

Skunks have adapted well to human environments and live happily under porches, patios, stoops, sheds and decks, as well as in hollow logs, abandoned burrows and wood or rock piles. There will be no doubt in your mind if a skunk is living near your house! To discourage skunks from moving in with you:

• Block or screen entry points to the spaces under your home and other buildings. Be sure the boards or screening extend 8-10" underground, as skunks are good burrowers. Fill openings under concrete structures with dirt, and remove all brush piles from your property.

• Secure chicken houses to prevent skunks and foxes from raiding the eggs and young chicks.

• If a skunk has already taken up residence in or near your home, cover the entrance to its home with a one-way door. This can be made by securing a double layer of hardware cloth to a hinge on the top of a wood frame large enough to accommodate the skunk.

In April, May, or June, when there may be babies in the den, a better approach is to simply make it inconvenient for the female to stay by covering her entrance hole repeatedly with loose piles of dirt.

She will still be able to dig through to enter and exit the den, but the harassment should convince her to move her young elsewhere. Do not seal the opening until the dirt remains undisturbed for several nights.

• If a skunk is caught in a window well, carefully and quietly place a rough board in the well so the animal can climb out. Avoid frightening the skunk, or you will regret the consequences.

Foxes

Both grey and red foxes inhabit New England's hardwood forests, farmlands and suburban areas. They are active mainly at night, but they may hunt mice and other small prey at dawn and dusk and occasionally during the day. They are rarely dangerous to humans.

To prevent contact between foxes and people or pets:

• Keep your cats indoors, especially at night. Foxes will sometimes prey on domestic cats.

• Build strong pens and fencing around rabbits and chickens, and keep the enclosures in good repair to prevent midnight raids.

• Try banging on a pot with a spoon or making other loud noises to frighten away any foxes that have become so accustomed to humans that they do not run off when you appear.

Rabies on horizon

Brookline, and Lexington, he says.

This time of year, animals are getting ready to bear their young.

Quigley warns that feral (wild) cats can also provide the link between humans and rabies. There are lots of feral cats in the area, if you should find one has taken up residence in your barn, yard, or under your house — call the Animal Rescue League in Boston which takes them, he says.

Quigley stresses that feral cats are wild and residents should not try to domesticate them. And children should be warned to stay away.

"Once wild, they're so unpredictable," he explains. "You can get a nasty bite from a cat."

Quigley can be reached at 383-0037. He checks his messages about 6 p.m. and will get back to you. For an emergency call the Cohasset police who will contact Quigley through his pager.

School board considers DARE program. . .

this program represents progress. D.A.R.E. is like teaching an AIDS curriculum. We are not the cure-all but we are part of a larger network of teachers and parents who are attempting to tackle this problem," D'Arcangelo said.

According to D'Arcangelo, D.A.R.E. developed ten years ago in Los Angeles when then Police Commissioner Darryl Gates assessed the drug education programs in the Los Angeles Unified School System and found them to be miserable. Gates, who left the Los Angeles Police Department following the Rodney King incident, enjoys a great deal of respect among veteran law enforcement officials as a result of his insightful educational programs.

D.A.R.E. provides a 17-week drug education curriculum to fifth- and sixth- grade students and is taught by a veteran police officer who has undergone 80 hours of in-service training on the subject of drug education. Much of the program's success, according to supporters, is due to the compelling presentation that a veteran police officer can make based upon his own experiences in dealing with the effects of drug and alcohol abuse.

"In order for the program to be effective, it has to grab them. I can talk about the fatal car accidents and the horrible effects of drugs which I have seen during my career and it has a strong effect on the kids," D'Arcangelo explained.

The officers who teach the D.A.R.E. Program are full-time members of the school faculty in many cases. According to D'Arcangelo, he handles cafeteria duty and roams the halls between periods just like the other teachers. D'Arcangelo cites this day-to-day involvement with the students as one of the reasons that he believes the program is successful. He believes that students see the officer in a positive light and are more likely to open up a dialogue with the officer than they would be under normal circumstances.

The D.A.R.E. curriculum has been researched and developed by renowned educators and law enforcement officials. Historically, the L.A. Police Department sponsored the 80-hour in-service training programs. Presently, the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council has taken over the training in Massachusetts. In addition to the in-service training, D.A.R.E. officers are constantly reviewed by program mentors.

The D.A.R.E. program addresses issues involving alcohol, marijuana and tobacco. These drugs are focused on because experts view these as the gateway drugs which lead to the use of more advanced and more serious drugs.

"We give the students the tools to say no. We do this by teaching self-esteem, confidence, assertiveness, stress-reduction techniques and methods for dealing with pressures exerted by peers, family and the media," D'Arcangelo explained.

According to D'Arcangelo, the D.A.R.E. Program teaches transferable skills which will help the children function in all areas of life. He also pointed out that D.A.R.E. has a Kindergarten through grade 12 curriculum which addresses other areas such as bus evacuation and the dangers of strangers.

The D.A.R.E. curriculum culminates in a graduation day celebration for the students. On that day, the students celebrate a new respect for themselves and for the law.

D.A.R.E. is presently the only drug education program which is fully sanctioned by the Massachusetts Department of Education. At this time, the state employs a full-time D.A.R.E. coordinator who oversees the programs taught throughout the state.

D'Arcangelo reported to the committee that in Scituate, he is paid by the police department because the police chief determined that this was a very important part of what the department should do. In various other towns, the programs are run on private gifts or funding from civic groups like the Rotary Club. D'Arcangelo also said that some federal grants and funding through the local District Attorney's office are available.

School committee members asked D'Arcangelo if there was any way to quantify the effect that the program has had in Scituate. D'Arcangelo responded by pointing out that much of the effect is intangible. He did report that an informal survey of eighth-graders which he conducted last year indicated that Scituate students were well below the national average for drug use.

School Committee member Ralph Kidder said that he had a very good feeling about the program but was concerned about the lack of research evidence as to the program's effectiveness.

Waal explained that she believes that it takes quite some time to actually see the effectiveness of such a program.

D'Arcangelo did point out that the Scituate Police Department has recognized a dramatic decrease in the number of young teen arrests over the past year.

Cohasset student Mike Connor, who lived in Syracuse, New York, prior to coming to Cohasset, expressed his support for the program.

"They had a D.A.R.E.-type program in New York where I lived before and it did a lot to get kids to think about the problem and reconsider their actions. It got kids to talk to police officers. D.A.R.E. brought the shine of the badge down so that kids could talk to the police officers. It was a very good thing," Connor explained.

If the program were to be implemented in Cohasset, the town would either use a Cohasset Police Officer or a Norfolk County Sheriff according to Cohasset Police Sergeant Bob Jackson. There are also presently 12 State Police Officers training in the D.A.R.E. Program in order to help towns with insufficient personnel to implement the program.

According to Jackson and Waal, Cohasset would not have any problems funding the program through private funding by civic groups like the Rotary and through grant money. The program would not require any school budget funding.

Nancy Sandell, the newly appointed chairwoman of the school committee, stressed the need for the committee to scrutinize the program before reaching any decision on whether to approve its implementation.

"Whenever we bring something in to educate our children, we need to look at it very carefully," Sandell said.

Following the presentation by Waal and D'Arcangelo, the school committee voted to take the issue under advisement until mid-May when it will make a definitive decision on whether to implement the program.

❑ Applause goes to Jean Salvador this week; she really knows what the Easter Bunny is all about! Jean went to the Shriners' Burns Institute in Boston to cheer up the children who are in there...of course she goes with Easter candy, and Hugh Morgan driving her, and she would like to thank Hugh and all of the people who donate candy and money for gifts.

The Easter Bunny also went to see Tom Snow, a Scituate fireman who broke his back and is in a wheelchair.

Glen Pratt drove his fire truck to Tom's house where his family and grandchildren were waiting. (Can you imagine an antique fire truck complete with Easter Bunny coming to your house? Wouldn't everyone be thrilled?) Tom received candy and a large fruit basket made up by Jean through funds donated by the Cohasset Firefighters. Linda Pattison was the bunny.

Jean visits as many shut-ins as she can. She is one of the most thoughtful people we know and a wonderful person and friend. She is also the Easter Bunny for the recreation department...and a "May Day Queen," delivering May Day goodies! She is special!

P.S. Happy anniversary to Jean and Manuele; they celebrated their 40th recently.

❑ Two Cohasset residents have recently been named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester. Among the students recognized for this honor are two of Cohasset's own...hats off to Douglas W. Moe and Tara P. Volungis!!

We are happy to see that all of your hard work has paid off and hope to read about you again for the spring semester!

❑ Jennifer C. Martin of 45 North Main Street is participating in an internship this semester with Seaway Industries, a firm which provides employment for disabled persons in Canton, New York.

Jennifer is a senior at St. Lawrence University in Canton. She will earn course credit in sociology through the internship experience.

Jennifer is a 1989 graduate of Cohasset High School and studied in France during her junior year, through St. Lawrence's International Education Program.

Second honors went to students who earned a B average or better, and once again Cohasset students shine...Tom Anderson, Torrey Androski, Catherine Fallon, Tobey Horn, Theodore Noon, Ian Simons, Ryan Stasko and Wiley Wakeman all make this list. Be proud of yourselves and your efforts; we are!

❑ After this vacation is over, everyone will need it...Cohasset PSO annual spring meeting that is! April 28 acclaimed speaker, educator and well known "wacky" person Loretta LaRoche will be at the meeting and it will be worth the trip. LaRoche is part stand-up comedian, part inspirational speaker who believes that parenting is a very serious job that everyone can do while taking themselves 'lightly'...guaranteed to be worth the time you spend listening.

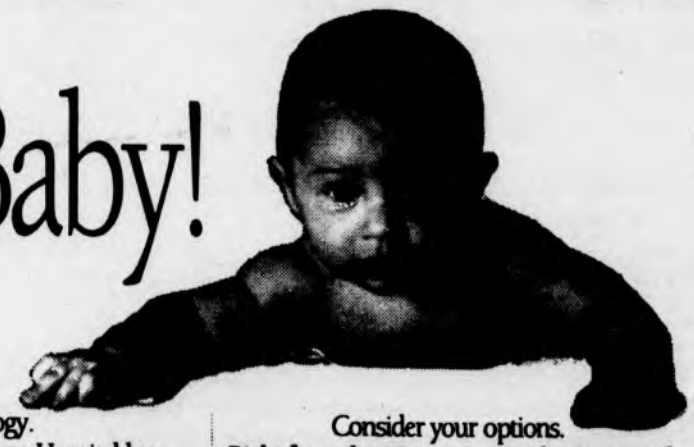
Oh Baby!



Just look at these features. Plush interior. Latest technology. Incredible service. Quincy Hospital has just what you're looking for when you're choosing where to have your baby.

You'll have a private room during labor, and after your baby is born. It's perfect for you and your new arrival to get comfortable without a lot of unnecessary interruptions. And your partner can stay with you, even sleep on a chair in your room that converts to a sleeper.

Tucked away, but immediately accessible is state-of-the-art technology. In fact, the new C-section rooms are just down the hall but completely out of view. All this so you have the comforts of home, in the security of a hospital.

And you'll enjoy excellent service. Our nurses provide personal attention and individualized teaching to help make your experience unique. In fact, we go the extra mile. You'll be given a phone number when you leave so you can call our nurses 24 hours a day if you have any questions.

Consider your options. Right from the start, you may choose one of our fine, private obstetricians or nurse midwives. During your stay with us, you may choose to remain in the same room or move to your own postpartum room after your baby is born. You can even choose the type of dessert you want from the dessert cart that comes to your room after dinner.

All this is available to you only minutes from Routes 128, 3 and 93. To see it for yourself, call (617) 773-6100, ext. 4016. Whether you need a tour, an obstetrician, a birthing class or a class to help your other children prepare for the birth of your new baby, Quincy Hospital can help you.

Because what's really being delivered at Quincy Hospital is great care!

Parenting with humor

Come to the Cohasset PSO's annual spring meeting April 28 at the Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. and hear acclaimed speaker, educator and well-known wacky person Loretta LaRoche.

Part stand-up comic, part inspirational speaker, LaRoche believes that parenting is a very serious job but we can do it and take ourselves lightly. Please note, this April 28 meeting has been changed from May 6 on the school calendar.

Health education group

Any Cohasset resident interested in serving on the Health Education Advisory Committee should attend the meeting scheduled for Tuesday, April 27 at 8 p.m. at the high school. The Committee meets from time to time during the school year to plan health education programs for students in grades K-12.

If you are interested in promoting comprehensive school health education in the Cohasset schools please make an effort to attend.

Agenda includes:

• Review, modify and finalize the elementary school AIDS education needs assessment instrument;

• Update on Project K.O.P.E. (Kids Organized to Promote Education). Cohasset High School peer educators to be trained to promote healthy choices in younger students by presenting classroom learning experiences in various health education topics;

• Discuss the application for Health Protection Grant for Comprehensive School Health in the Cohasset Schools for the amount of $48,766.

Volunteering

This week thanks to a suggestion from a local resident, the Cohasset Mariner kicks off a volunteer column on the editorial page.

We can't promise to run the column every week, but will try to provide Cohasseters with a 'central dispatch' for volunteer opportunities in the area on a regular basis.

So if your organization would like to be listed, please let us know by writing to us at 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050 or P.O. Box 71, Cohasset 02025.

Your time and individual talent — whether typing, filing, serving on a town committee, or visiting with someone in need of some TLC — are truly gifts worth giving.

Here at the Mariner, we hope to provide both the volunteer and the organization or group in need of volunteer hours with space to find each other.

And please note, we do listen to suggestions from our readers. When possible, we try to incorporate your ideas into the paper — because when the Cohasset Mariner is not only where you get your information, but how you communicate with one another — we know we are doing our job as your local paper.

So keep those ideas and thoughts coming!

Cheese!

We try to accommodate all requests for photographers.

But unfortunately our resources are limited and our talented staff photographers are not always available to cover an event.

So photographs (color is fine) taken by our readers can be a nice way to fill in the gaps.

But to ensure that your photograph can be published, it is important that people in the photograph are identified and that their faces are clearly shown. When lining people up make sure they are not in front of a window or are "back lighted". If they are, their faces will be in the shadows. (When outside, the sun should be at your back not theirs).

And if you are trying to photograph a school event, sometimes it's easier to wait until the end of the program and ask some students/and or guests to pose for you. It's important to get close to the subject of the photograph, so they don't appear too far away to be clear to the person reading the paper.

Please remember, to request a Mariner photographer for your event, we need as much notice as possible. We can accept assignments up to 24-hours in advance, but the sooner the better and we'll try to get back to you if a staff photographer is unavailable. You can call us at 1-800-649-6661.

Community Lights

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers needed to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• There's a vacancy on the Cohasset 911 committee. Anyone interested should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Traffic concerns to be discussed April 29

The special village meeting regarding traffic, parking, and truck deliveries with participation from the police and fire chiefs has been rescheduled to 8:30 a.m., Thursday, April 29 at the Red Lion Inn.

All village businesses that are concerned with traffic control issues should attend. If you know of trucking companies that should also be represented, please encourage them to be there as well.

Local Roads Fund is supported

letters

(The following letter was sent to selectmen.)

Dear Board Members:

I always voted for more local aid and have consistently filed a bill requiring 50 percent of Lottery Revenues be returned to municipalities. Communities are mandated to spend a great deal of money for programs which were forced on us prior to the passage of Proposition 2 1/2.

I am a strong supporter of H1567 and S1409 which call for the establishment of a Local Roads Fund. I opposed the former Governor's decision to use gas tax money for other purposes than roads and was just as adamantly opposed when the present Governor did the same thing!

My votes have always and shall continue to be cast in favor of any and all monies for my towns.

Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

Center says thanks to supporters

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Community Center, "Lunch with the Easter Bunny Fundraiser," which was successfully held Saturday, April 3, we wish to thank the following Cohasset businesses for their support and generous raffle contributions: Bergson's Ice Cream; Buttonwood Books; The Chart House Restaurant; The Children's Exchange; Flowers by the Sea; French Memories Bakery; the Log 'n Line Restaurant; Papa Gino's; Party, Etc.; The Red Lion Inn; Sea 'n Cheese; Strawberry Parfait and The Village Gourmet.

SS NOW to meet

South Shore Chapter, National Organization for Women (NOW), will meet May 9, 2 to 4 p.m., at New North Church, Lincoln St., Hingham. Call Suzanne, 749-3342 or Jeannette, 337-6725 for more information.

Monthly meetings are usually held on the second Sunday of the month at 2 p.m. at New North Church, Lincoln Street, Hingham.

Rescheduled due to blizzard — Patricia Ireland, NOW President, and the NOW Action Team will be coming to the South Shore May 22. Details to follow or call for more information.

American Kaleidoscope

The Unicorn Singers, the Hingham-based chamber chorus directed by Margo Euler, will present a concert this weekend highlighting the varied compositions of three American composers. Aaron Copland, a true giant of twentieth century American music, is known to all for his famous orchestral suite, "Appalachian Spring."

The Singers will perform Copland's "In the Beginning," which describes the Creation in the words of Genesis. This piece is a challenge for any chorus, since it lasts approximately 15 minutes, and is totally a cappella.

Two other Copland pieces, "The Promise of Living" and "Stomp Your Foot" will be accompanied by pianists Lydia Madrick and Dawn MacGarvey.

Also on the program are Leonard Bernstein's choruses written for the Lillian Hellman adaptation of the Joan of Arc play by Anouilh called "The Lark," in which various percussive effects are employed by the singers, including handbells.

The concert will end with several entertaining pieces composed by Kirke Mechem, a well-known composer living in San Francisco, whose music is especially satisfying for both chorus and audience.

There are two performances of American Kaleidoscope: Saturday, April 24 at 8 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset (on the green); and Sunday, April 25 at 4 p.m. at Brandon Woods of Hingham (110 Charles St.).

Tickets (purchased in advance) are $8 ($6 for seniors, students); they are good for either performance. Tickets are available at Noble's Camera (in Hingham Square), and at First Parish, Cohasset (church office open Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.); or bay mailing a check (to the Unicorn Singers) to 66 Lincoln St. in Hingham. For more information call 749-6561. All tickets will be $10 at the door.

Junior League meets

Anyone interested in joining the Junior League of Boston for the 1993-94 year is invited to attend a fun informational meeting for prospective members on Tuesday evening, April 27, at Wendy Ellison's home in Hingham. Please call Debbie Hoffman at 749-7973 for details.

The Junior League of Boston, Inc. is an organization of women committed to strengthening the community through the effective action and leadership of trained volunteers. The Junior League reaches out to women of all races, religions and national origins who demonstrate an interest in and commitment to voluntarism. Its purpose is exclusively educational and charitable.

Update on 'Congo Capers'

A corps of seasoned veterans of similar productions over the years has been assembled by director and choreographer Joann Fichtner to carry out the essential "behind-the-scenes" assignments for "Congo Capers of '93," the musical-dance-variety show being staged by parishioners of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset in the Cohasset High School auditorium Saturday evening, May 22.

From ticket sales to make-up, from costumes to cueing, the necessary slots have been filled and persons in place to back up the 55 stage performers.

Fichtner has chosen Lisa Pratt as her co-director, and Amy Hyde as both assistant to the director and stage assistant. Bob Leavitt, minister of music at the church and a music teacher in Hull schools, is musical director of the show, and Herm Fichtner is production manager.

Preparation and assembling of the costumes, some of which will feature decades in the past, will be handled by a group made up of Grace Wilkin, Georgine Butman, Joan Cameron and Muriel Wheelwright.

Margaret Bates heads up ticket sales as chair of a group that includes Dot Parmenter and Lot Bates. General admission to the show will be $4, with children and senior citizens admitted for $2. Tickets will be available from members of the cast and the congregation.

Other key "backstage" roles will be filled by Murray Campbell as stage director; Georgine Butman, make-up; Clark Young, lighting; and Wilma Vanderlugt, finances.

The show will open with a World War II number featuring some cast members in their original service uniforms, and will continue through a series of musical flash-backs, stirring nostalgia for the melodies and dances of the past.

Magic class

Do you believe in magic? Would you like to be able to do magic? The Cohasset Community Center is offering a magic class beginning May 1 for children ages eight to 16. Children will experiment with all types of magic and will learn five or six tricks by the end of the five-week session. Call the Center at 383-0088 to register or for more information.

Ropes course

The ropes course with Jack Buckley at the CHS site is more than an ordinary adventure. Offered for teens and adults, students will enjoy this new sport while learning safe and proper use of equipment, climbing knots and techniques, and how to repel. Join in on the fun. Call the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088 to register.

Women's health issues

The Social Service League of Cohasset presents a program on Women's Health Issues featuring Dr. Alice Rothchild, OB/GYN, Wednesday, April 28, at 7:30 p.m.

Do you have questions regarding hormone replacement and other issues regarding menopause?

Dr. Rothchild's program will be "Menopause — Discoveries and Controversies and How to Make a Healthy Choice." Dr. Rothchild is an obstetrician/gynecologist at Harvard Community Health Plan and Beth Israel Hospital. She will be speaking at Walton Rodgers' Hall at St. Stephen's Church. There will be no charge for this program. All women are invited to attend.

Singles dances set

South Shore Singles, a non-profit social and support group sponsored by the First Parish Unitarian Church in Norwell, will host two smoke-free dances in May, at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St. in Hingham.

The first dance will be Friday, May 14, and the second dance, our "14th anniversary dance," will be Friday, May 28. Both dances will be smoke-free and will feature D.J. music from 8:30 p.m. until 12:30 a.m.

Admission is $3 for members, $6 for non-members. For more information call 617-925-2354.

Health Fair set

The Social Service League and The Board of Health are sponsoring their Annual Health Fair Thursday, May 6.

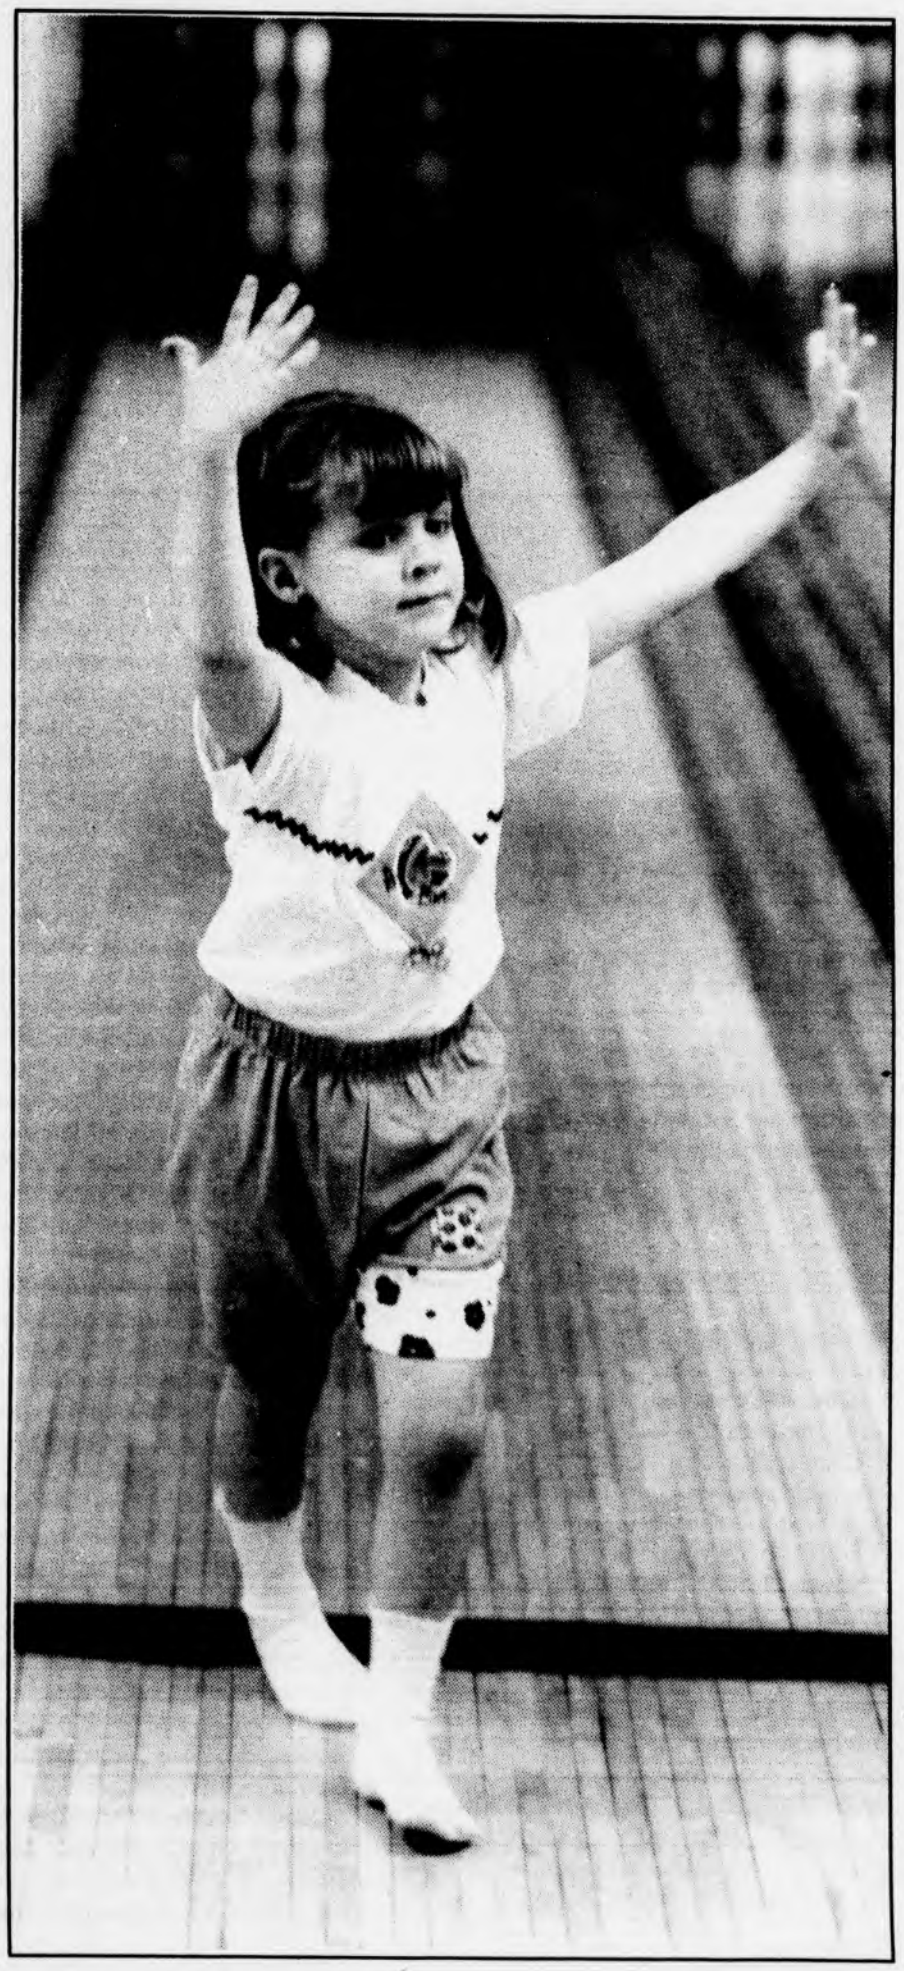
It will be held at the second Congregational Church in Cohasset from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m.

Many of the screenings and services held in the past fairs will again be offered.

Also a $25 gift certificate has been donated by Buttonwood Books and will be awarded that day at a drawing.

A complete listing of health services offered will be available next week.

Call 383-0771/0821 for information.



There's goes my perfect game! says Allison Dean during Girls' Afternoon Out at the Cohasset Community Center on Tuesday. The Center provided an afternoon of fun for local girls.

Plant sale

Old Ship Church of Hingham holds its annual May Breakfast and Plant Sale May 1.

Breakfast will be served from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the Parish House at 107 Main Street. The price for breakfast is $5 for adults and $3 for children. The menu includes eggs or griddle cakes with all the fixings. All types of plants including perennials, annuals, shrubs, and ground covers will be for sale.

Alzheimer's support group

Tish Clark, RN and Executive Director of the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association, will speak at the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore Wednesday, April 28 at 7:30 p.m. at Thaxter Park Center, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Ms. Clark will focus on the daily challenges of caring for an Alzheimer's patient at home. She will share techniques for minimizing potential difficulties and in assisting the person with dressing, bathing, nutrition, incontinence and eating. Emphasis will be on solutions to help the patient maintain dignity, adapting to the patient's experiences, innovating the home environment and the caregiver's well-being.

Ms. Clark is a certified psychiatric nurse and a specialist in geriatric care.

NOTE: This meeting will be held at the Thaxter Park Center, one-fourth a mile on the left from North St. Parking is available in a lot opposite Thaxter Park or in front of Thaxter office.

All meetings are free and open to the public. ADSGSS offers information and support to families on the South Shore dealing with Alzheimer's Disease. It is supported by private donations. For more information, please call 749-5417.

Marisol has golden touch and exotic style

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Marisol Perry remembers the first time she set foot in a skating rink when she was six years old.

Her mother, Judy, read in the paper that the former Winter Gardens in Cohasset was holding group lessons on Sunday nights.

Marisol, who moved to the states from Colombia when she was six years old, was instantly attracted to the rink and the skaters doing their warm-ups on the oval.

"I had never seen a rink before so that's why mom took me," said Marisol, now a 16-year-old junior at Cohasset High School. "I took to it. I really liked it."

She signed up for group lessons and switched over to private instructions three years later as a nine year old. Marisol, whose Cocker Spaniel "Axel" is named after a figure skating move, not after the controversial lead singer of the heavy metal band Guns 'N Roses, began her competitive career that year as well and has won nearly 50 medals in approximately 30 competitions.

But the sweetest medals came on April 3 when Marisol copped three gold medals in three events in the same competition at the Lower Cape Championships at the Charles Moore Arena in Orleans.

Skating for the Winterland of Rockland squad, Marisol was part of the gold-medal winning team in the precision event. Individually, she won both the artistic and freestyle events to wind up the best performances in her 10 years of skating.

Like all of her other competitions, Marisol entered with a certain amount of uncertainty. She had the confidence she needed for a strong outing, but there was the unknown of how good the competition was.

"It felt good when I got the medal," she said. "Well, you naturally hope to do well but you're not really sure because it depends on what kind of day you're going to have."

Marisol uses part of the theme song from the TV soap opera "The Young and the Restless" in her routine along with another piece she does not know the name of. Her coach, Marcia Breen Roussos doesn't tell her the name because she doesn't want anyone else using the piece and altering their routine similar to Marisol's.

Marisol Perry plans to mix a law practice with teaching figure skating.

With her exotic features and jet-black hair, the Spanish music Marisol uses during her artistic performances adds an International flavor to the competition.

She also has more than 20 competition and practice outfits, all of which she made herself. Marisol says she wears certain ones to fit the style of music she is skating to.

"I try and go for the elegance of the dress and how it fits the music," she said. "Those two things matter the most."

Although skaters are usually on the smaller side, height-wise, at 4-feet-11, Marisol is smaller than most competitive figure skaters.

Her height, though, is one area she doesn't have any complaints about.

"There's an advantage to being smaller," Marisol said. "You tend to have bigger jumps because there's not as much of you to lift into the air."

On a split jump, for example, Marisol can jump nearly four feet off the ice, which is more than what most skaters can do.

All the medals and talent she has displayed on the ice have not come easy, however. During the school year Marisol goes through her precision workouts twice a week for an hour and spends two hours per session in her three freestyle practices.

The winter is the hardest part of the year to secure ice time. With the high school hockey season in full swing, she is forced to get up as early as 4:30 a.m. for practice.

"For precision, we had to get whatever hours we could," Marisol said. "It didn't mean we were happy with them. We just took them."

A member of the United States Figure Skating Association (USFSA) with the Skating Club of Hingham, and the Ice Skating Institute of America (ISIA) as a Winterland member in Rockland, Marisol is looking to move up to the next level in both organizations.

She is currently at the Intermediate level, working toward the Novice level in Intermediate freestyle and is practicing to pass the fifth of eight tests in figures. In ISIA rankings, Marisol is at freestyle 6 with four levels to go.

Her immediate goals are to pass the eight test in figures and reach senior ladies in freestyle.

"I'm hoping I can have all my tests done by the end of my first year in college," Marisol said.

Eventually she would like to become a pro and then go on to teach.

As for the Olympics, Marisol is realistic about her chances. At this time in her life, figure skating is her main passion, but she expects her goal of becoming a lawyer will change her priorities.

"There are other things I want to do," said Marisol, "but that (skating) would take up too much time. It's important but it's only part of my life."

But even though it will take a back seat to other areas she wants to pursue, Marisol intends to keep figure skating alive in her life.

"I'd like to be involved with skating at least as long as I'm walking," she said with a laugh.

Gill working with softball team's young lineup

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They shielded their eyes, not use to the bright sunlight that shone over them like a fluorescent lamp.

When the Cohasset girls' softball team emerged from the high school gym for its first outdoor practice, they found themselves in a different element after a preseason's worth of working out indoors. The team hadn't even fielded pop-ups while inside. Batting practice and infield work was also toned down considerably.

And with the squad head coach Mike Gill had for the '93 season, he knew the 1-3 start was inevitable.

"We still have a great deal of difficulty getting things together because of the weather and age of our players," Gill said. "It was a terrible preseason.

"It's even more of a setback when the team is as young as ours. Most of the other teams have a number of veteran players, but we're trying to rebuild."

Gill is still in the process of working his young lineup around with the hope of finding the consistent pitching the team will need in the coming seasons. He is confident the club's hitting and fielding will improve, as evident during last week's come-from-behind victory over East Bridgewater.

The Skippers found themselves trailing EB 8-1 after three innings before they began to chip away at the seven-run lead and work their way back into the game.

An RBI triple by Jen Knowles and a bases loaded three-run double by Becky Golden set Cohasset up for its dramatic 12-11 win in the last inning.

Clutch RBI singles by Vicki Maynard and Meghan Fahey clinched the Skippers' first win of the season with its most potent hitting barrage yet.

Even though Gill considers '93 a rebuilding season for Cohasset, he knows the team's hitting and fielding will improve and the Skippers will provide competition for the other "youth-oriented" teams in the league, such as Hull and Scituate.

As for the "veteran-oriented" squads, give Gill and Cohasset a chance. Successful teams always start out with young players who improve with time. The Skippers' time will come.

Congratulations to the runners from the Mariner towns who competed in Monday's 94th Boston Marathon. Among the field of 8,883 official entrants who braved Heartbreak Hill were several members of the Marshfield Road Runners, which always has a strong turnout every year.

Some of the local runners who competed included Norwell's Jake Mahoney, Kerry Kirkendall of Cohasset, Joanne Ramsden (Scituate), Mel Gonsalves (Canton), Richard Lally (Braintree), Steve Warren (Stoughton), Andrea Hatch and Peter Sleight of Hull and Hanover's Peter Hollander.

Sunday's weather forecast called for good running conditions with high temperatures in the 50's with a westerly wind. We plan to have the complete results in next week's edition.

Hooray for those local NHL heroes.

Marshfield's Jeremy Roenick scored his 50th goal of the season in the Chicago Blackhawks' final regular season game. It was his second straight season scoring 50 goals. He ended up with 50 goals and 57 points in 84 games.

However, he was not the South Shore's top scorer in the NHL. Pembroke's Kevin Stevens recorded 55 goals and 56 assists in 72 games playing for the two-time Stanley Cup champion Pittsburgh Penguins. It was also his second straight season scoring 50 goals.

It's great to see such superstars being produced in our backyards and hockey rinks.

Other South Shore players who had stellar seasons in the NHL include: Hingham's Tony Amonte. He scored 33 goals and 43 assists for the New York Rangers. Also Hingham's Marty McInnis scored ten goals and 20 assists in 56 games for the New York Islanders in his rookie season. And Marshfield's Mike Sullivan scored six goals and eight assists in 81 games for the expansion San Jose Sharks.

The only constant, so far, in the high school softball games along the South Shore is that there is none when it comes to the length of time the games run. Hull's 21-17 win over Scituate last Wednesday lasted 2 1/2 hours. In contrast, the Bridgewater-Raynham/ Barnstable game on Friday ended a full hour faster.

One reason we see causing the longer-running games is the wildness of the pitchers early in the season. In the Scituate/Hull game there were more than 20 walks. B-R and Barnstable had a grand total of five.

Of course, with the water-logged fields that cancelled the first week of play, not to mention the pre-season scrimmages, pitchers are still working on getting into the flow of the season. Look for the games to run much quicker by the middle of May.

Silver Lake High School is taking a few major steps to improve its performance on the athletic field.

First of all, the school is in the process of building a student weight room. The industrial arts program helped construct the room to keep the costs down and the school hopes to install summer weightlifting programs for all four member towns (Pembroke, Kingston, Halifax and Plympton.)

Secondly, the school did some work on its baseball field. An outfield fence was added as well as concrete dugouts. However, at Friday's game against Weymouth, the roofs were not yet in place and the dugouts looked like WWII bunkers.

Regardless, Silver Lake school officials and the athletic department deserve a pat on the back for doing something positive that many students will use and enjoy. More schools should follow Silver Lake's lead and beef up their athletic programs instead of slashing them when it comes time to review their budgets.

Keating walked his way back to good health

(First of three profiles of Cohasset residents competing in May's Senior Olympics)

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Seventy-three-year-old Gerard Keating was busy setting up the step-up platforms for Wednesday's first aerobic class of the day at the Cohasset Community Center.

Dressed in a blue T-shirt which read "Body of Perfection", Keating, a fourth generation Cohasset resident, had 25 of the platforms lined up in rows by the time the first member of the class arrived.

"You're amazing," she said to Keating as she spotted him upon entering the center's gymnasium. Keating was less impressed.

"I'm off to a late start today," he replied as he straightened out a platform in the front row.

In Keating's case, the word late is relative. It was 7:30 a.m.

Keating, though, is amazing. Tall and lean, he has the body of a man 30 years his junior.

But it wasn't always that way for him. He is in far better shape than he was 10 years ago.

May of 1983 was a particularly rough time in Keating's life. He underwent seven heart bypass operations and he believed any form of exercise was out of the question.

Keating's doctor, however, thought differently and it changed Keating's outlook and lifestyle ever since.

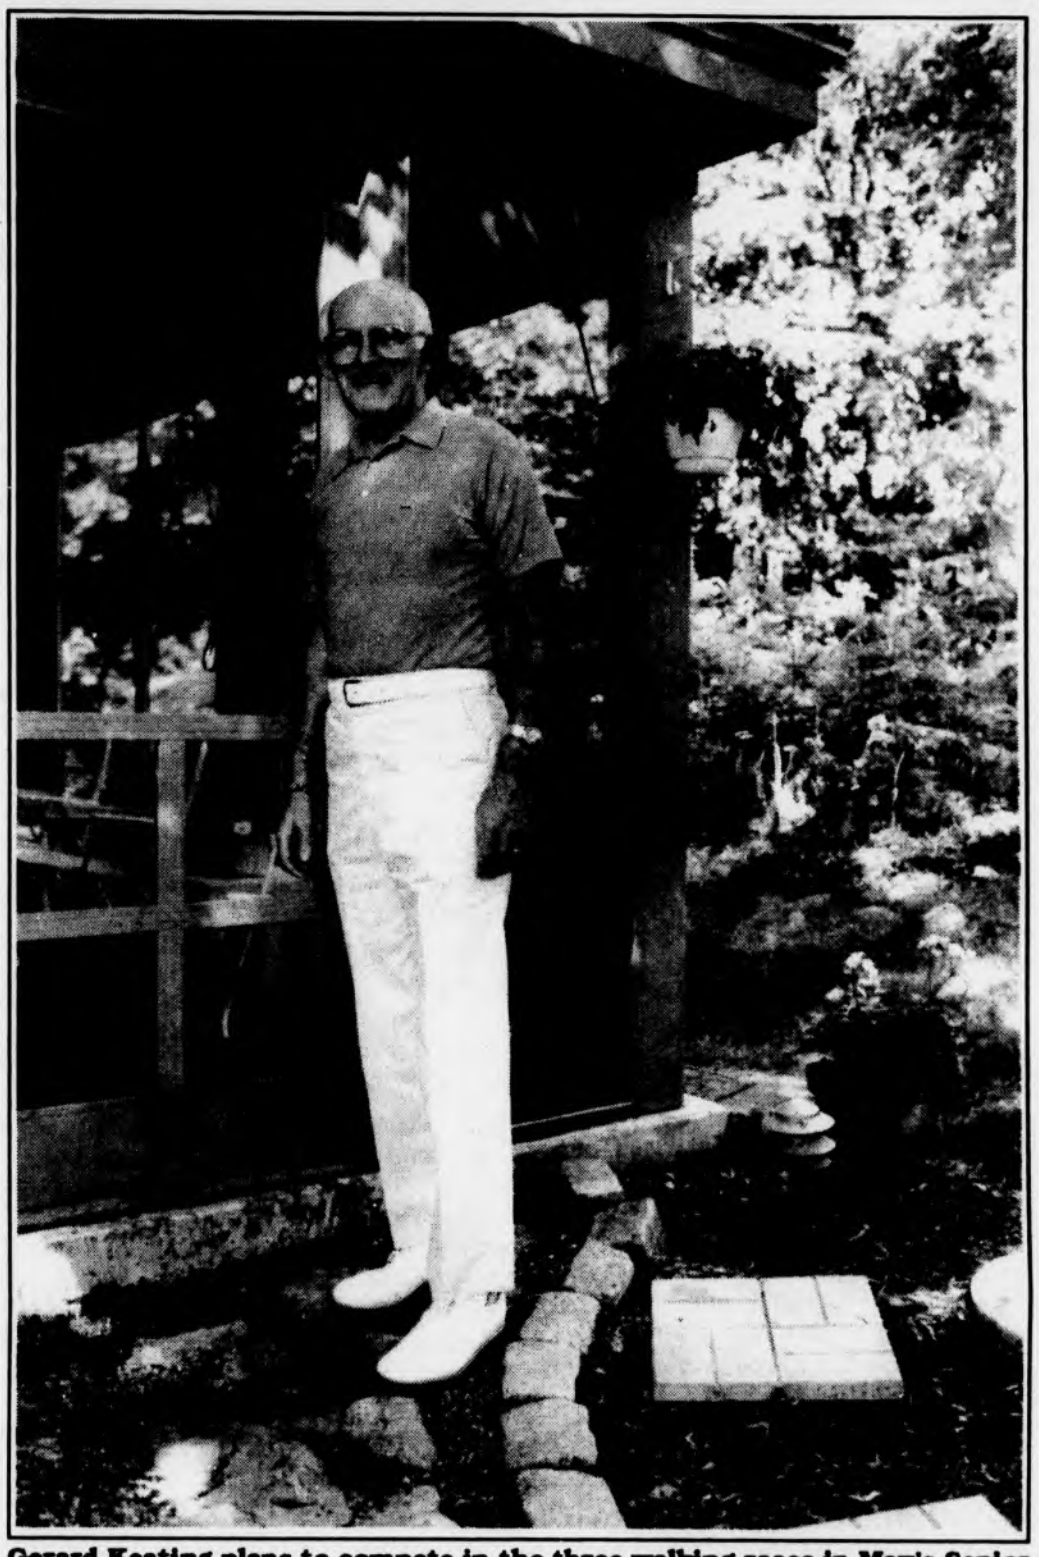
"On the day I returned from the hospital the doctor told me to start walking right away," Keating said. "I said, 'you mean tomorrow?' He said 'immediately. As soon as you step out of the car, before you get in the house.'"

Keating followed doctor's orders and walked for a half-mile that day.

As he walked his way back into shape, traversing the streets around his Black Horse Lane home, Keating decided to take his new-found activity one step further and signed up for the Senior Olympics for the first time, six years ago.

The competition, held annually in May at Quincy's Veterans Stadium divides, senior citizens into age groups in various events. Keating's specialty is the half-mile, mile and three-mile walks. He has had great success in all three races, garnering seven medals over the years.

"Some of them were gold, some of them were silver and some of them were bronze," Keating said, not knowing off hand how many of each he had accumulated.



Gerard Keating plans to compete in the three walking races in May's Senior Olympics, as well as trying his hand at the shot put for the first time.

Of the three races, Keating enjoys the three-miler the best. The course starts at the Beechwood Community Center and runs along scenic Wollaston Beach before looping back and finishing at the center. The longer race, Keating says, gives him the chance to develop a strategy, compared to the half-mile where he is forced to surge into position at the sound of the starting gun.

"It's a little more fun," Keating said of the longest distance. "You have a better chance at developing your shape in the race."

His best time in the mile is just a shade under 12 minutes, but he admits "I usually can't do that unless there's good competition."

The yearling competitin has served as more than an athletic event for Keating. He has developed numerous friendships through the Beechwood Community Center since first partaking in the competition. Keating has a number of individuals he can join for a walk on any given day. But he finds it more practical putting in his three to five miles on the Cohasset roads, rather than drive to Quincy and walk in the congested city.

"It's a lot more interesting and prettier," Keating said of his hometown.

A member of the Class of '37, Keating played football and ran track at Cohasset High School. He competed in the mile, but described himself as only "a fair miler."

"I don't remember my best time and it's just as well I don't," he said with a laugh.

Keating worked for the Cohasset Post Office for 42 years, 35 of them as postmaster. He was also a member of the school committee for six years and served as chairman for a year.

"That was enough," he said of chairing the board. Keating is currently working extensively as chairman of the Council on Aging, which he has chaired for the past four years.

Keating's health problems began in 1979 when he suffered a stroke, giving him only partial use of his right arm. He wasn't doing much exercise, save for occasional jogs when he felt up to it.

It was only after the operations that his health changed for the better.

"After the operation in '83," Keating said, "I can do, and I do, do everything."

Keating admits his training dropped off drastically this winter because of the snow that crippled the South Shore. He did continue his four days a week of aerobics, but wasn't able to get outside for his walks as much as he would have liked. Instead, Keating sought out the warmth of the center and walked endless — albeit, boring — laps around the gymnasium.

Even though it wasn't the best of winters for him, training-wise, Keating is throwing around the idea of competing in the shot put for the first time during the May event.

"No particular reason," he said when asked why he was adding a fourth event. "I just think it's time to see how the competition is. I've just never had the time to participate in the past. I'll probably make time this year."

Keating knows he is exploring unfamiliar territory. But no matter how he fares, he will be satisfied with his performance. When you receive a new lease on life, just competing is a victory in its own right.

"I feel wonderful," Keating exclaimed. "I'm in better shape now than I ever have in my life."

Swimmer Jay Craft of Hanover was a member of Syracuse University's 800-meter freestyle relay team which captured the Phillips 66 Senior National Championships in Nashville, Tennessee. The winning time was 7:40.41. Craft was also a member of the third-place, 400-meter relay squad.

Individually Craft finished eighth at the NCAA Championships in the 500 freestyle to become the first Orangemen All-American since 1987.

Whitman-Hanson distance ace Tom Newton has earned a spot for himself alongside the elite runners who have run for head coach Kevin Black. Newton, an Atlantic Coast League All-Star and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic in both cross country and indoor track, became the fastest miler in the last 20 years for the Panthers with his 4:35 clocking during last week's 82-54 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth. Newton came back later in the meet to capture the two mile at 10:14.

And while we're on the subject of the Panthers, Black may be in charge of his squad during every other day of the track season, but he approaches the third Monday in April with mixed feelings.

He loves watching the Boston Marathon coverage on T.V., but he has that fear that he'll see one of his Whitman-Hanson athletes — the ones who missed the 8:30 a.m. practice — trudging up Heartbreak Hill.

Every year six to eight Panthers by-pass a workout on the W-H track to join the masses in Hopkinton.

And every year Black is left in the dark as to who it will be.

"Here you are the track coach," laughed Black, "and the guys have to sneak away to run the marathon."

Black said on Sunday he gets concerned that the 26.2 miles, particularly the pounding of the downhills, takes its toll on the guys. That's the last thing he wants to see happen as the Panthers shoot for their fourth consecutive Atlantic Coast League title.

"I'd rather have them run the Cape Cod Marathon in the middle of the winter," he admitted.

But Boston's Boston and he'll have to wait until Tuesday to see who'll have the 'I ran the marathon over April vacation' bragging rights.

Golf tourney set

Join Honorary Chairmen John Dennis, Sean McDonough, Will McDonough, and Glenn Ordway when the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will be fighting cancer from the fairways by hosting its First Annual Golf Tournament Monday, May 17 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The tournament will be a four-person scramble format, and both individual and foursome entries are welcome. Tee-off time is 12:30 p.m.

The entry fee of $150 per player includes a box lunch, greens fees, cart, prime rib or swordfish dinner, gifts and prizes. A Chevrolet S10 Blazer sponsored by Best Chevrolet will be awarded to anyone who gets a hole in one on the designated par 3 hole. Other prizes will include closest to the pin, longest drive and teams with lowest (net) scores. All proceeds from the tournament will go directly to the American Cancer Society.

The Committee Co-chairmen for this event are Julie Lacy, James Cox, M.D. and Barbara Nermoe. Committee members include Cheryl Barnes, Marianne Glassanos, Osborne Ingram, Fran Matthews, Justine Palmieri and Jane Strone. For further information, please call Julie Lacy at 749-9175 or Barbara Nermoe at 749-6439.

Safe boating course

The Cohasset Recreation Department is pleased to announce that telephone registrations will be accepted for a spring safe boating course, to be conducted by Flotilla 1208 of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 383-6791.

The six-lesson Safe Boating Certification Program will commence Tuesday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m. in room 206 at Cohasset High School, and meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. through Tuesday, June 8. The program is open to both youth and adults and is essential under Massachusetts Law for youth aged 16 and under who plan to operate a craft powered by 25 H.P. or more. The cost for the Safe Boating Course is $15 per person for textbook and materials supplied by the U.S.C.G.A. and town expenses. Children aged 10 or so may take the course. It is suggested, however, that they be accompanied by an adult. Adults who pass Safe Boating are eligible for insurance premium reductions on their boat insurance.

Adventure course

Come join the exciting challenges encountered on the Cohasset High Ropes Course.

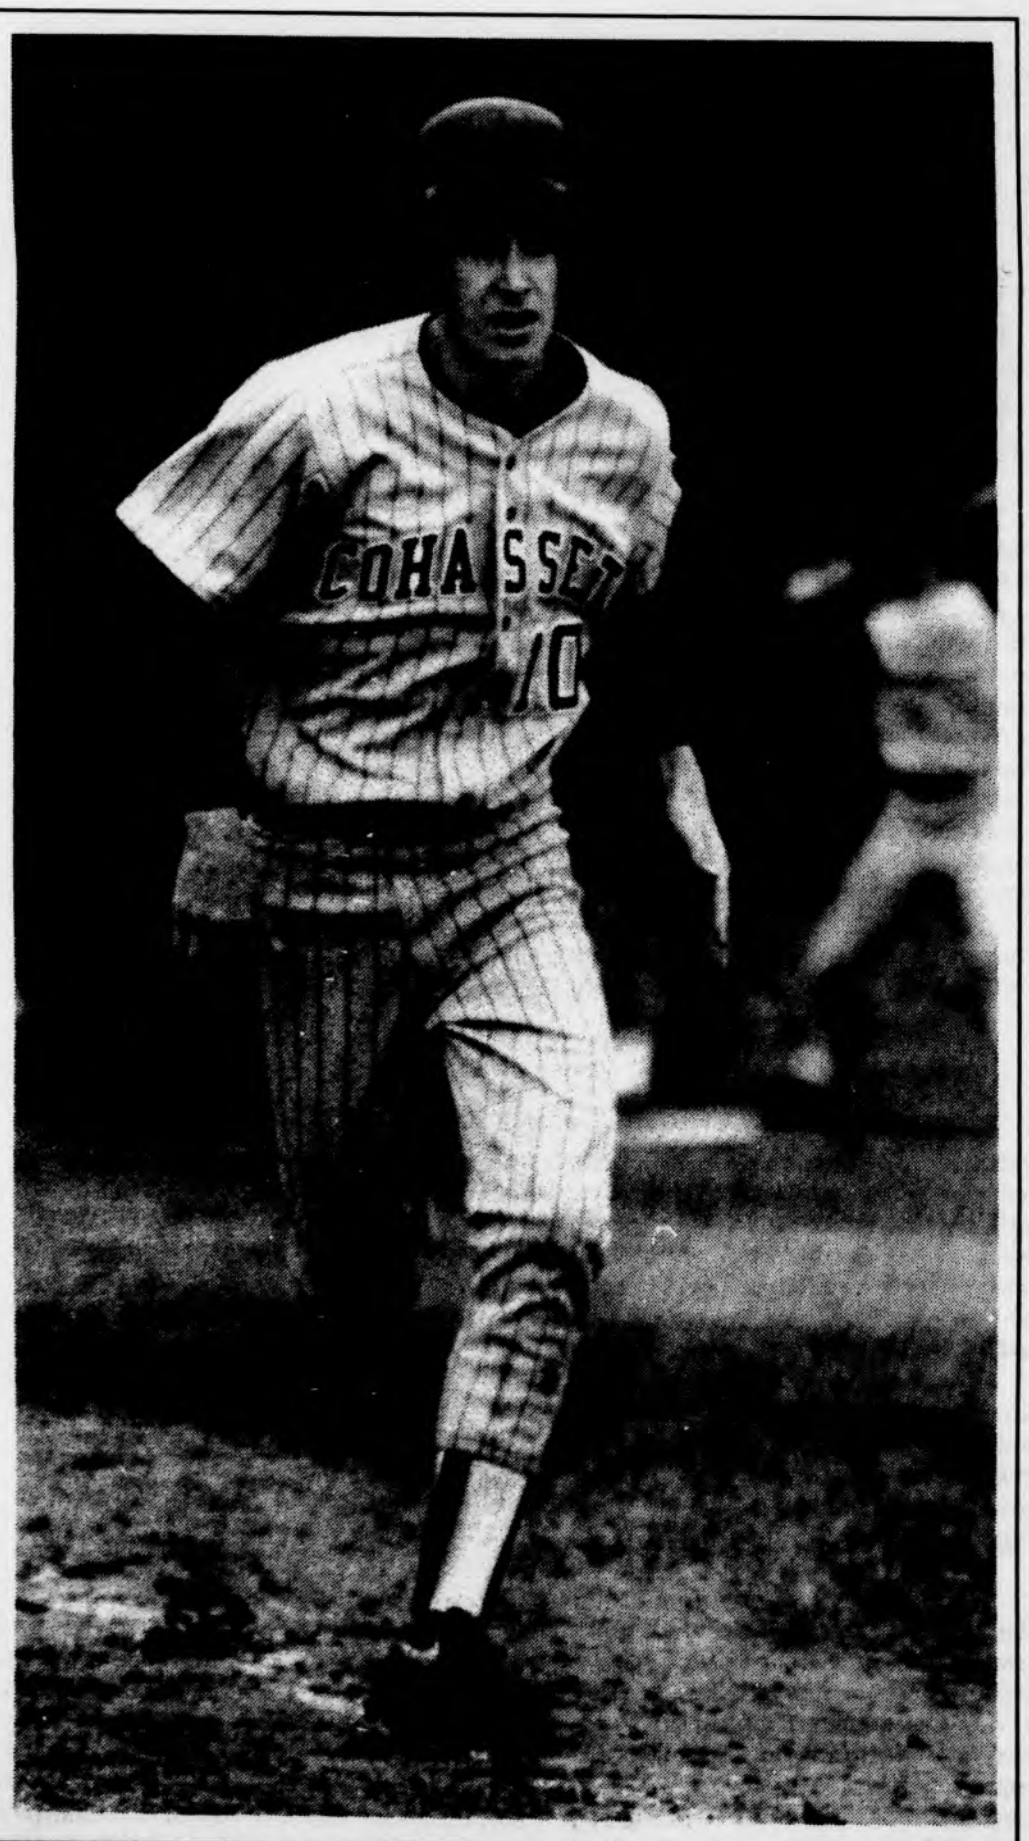
Participants learn safe and proper use of equipment, creation and employment of climbing knots and skills in belaying and rappelling. In addition to technical skills, climbers will engage in problem solving, team building play, receive and provide catalytical support, increase self-confidence and group trust that allows one to meet the challenges all the while having fun.

The course is offered:

Young Adults (ages 14-18): Advanced Assistant Training Course for those interested in seeking employment as assistant staff on the ropes course. Four consecutive weeks, 7 to 10 p.m., beginning May 8.

For information call Jack Buckley, 383-6100, 925-2428 or Susan McMackin, 383-2688.

For pre-registration call the Cohasset Community Center.



Cohasset's Andy Kamataris tries to beat out a ground ball during last week's 19-0 loss to Norwell.

Spring soccer is underway

Despite cold wet weekends and spongy playing fields Spring Soccer has begun in Cohasset. The town has fielded 36 teams this season. An Under-6 Coed League has been formed with talented new players emerging like purple crocuses. (Under-6 refers to the players' ages as of August 1, 1992). The six teams in this robust league began their season with two indoor games at the Deer Hill gym. The play is 4 on 4, three offensemen, one "man" on defense and no goalie. While some players are still locating their socks, all have found the goal. Their successes have dazzled their fans and surprised even themselves.

Under-8 teams began their local play last week, in both boys and girls leagues. Travel teams covered the south shore last weekend, playing despite the showers, producing great performances and sopping wet uniforms. This past weekend, the appearance of the sun at 2 p.m. did not prevent the cancellation of home games since the fields were all underwater. Some away games were played and Sunday games were held, as well as some make-up games Monday.

Soccer Club President Larry Shultz, 383-0597, is seeking four fans willing to coordinate and edit game reports for publication in the Mariner. Writers are needed for Boys Travel teams (U-10 to U-19); Girls Travel Teams (U-10 to U-16); Boys U-8 and Girls U-8 leagues. Games will be played every weekend until June 5.

Recreation dept. to start spring programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in registrations for 10 spring recreation programs for children ages four and five, and Grades K-six. Programs are scheduled to commence during the week of May 3, continuing for seven weeks through June 18. The programs are as follows:

False alarms calls prove costly . . .

the town's general fund.

The police department does not have the budget to send certified letters, so the notices will be served in-hand, Noonan said.

He explained the by-law hadn't been enforced previously because it is "cumbersome."

"Our intent is not to make money but to reduce the number of alarms coming into the station," he said.

Noonan stressed the money collected from fines is sent to the treasurer and does not go through the police department.

In a letter to alarm users, Noonan states;

"Often, for safety reasons two officers respond to each of these calls. If you taken into account that each call takes about 30 minutes to investigate and clear, you can easily appreciate why we are concerned with this use of scarce and valuable police resources to respond to calls which are often caused by inappropriate use, neglect, carelessness or mechanical difficulties."

Noonan is also asking all alarm users to work with police to reduce false alarms by making sure alarms are in good working order and that users use care and caution when activating or deactivating their alarm system.

"Working together we can improve not only your safety, but that of our officers while ensuring a better level and timeliness of response," Noonan wrote.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION

DOCKET NO. 93P0905E1

Estate of ELENA E. SESTITO late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that BARBARA DAVENPORT of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 19, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this fifth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Thomas Patrick Hughes,
Register of Probate

Madeline Wentworth

Madeline (Bosworth) Wentworth, 91, of Cohasset, a retired secretary for Petersen Real Estate, died April 14 in Scituate Ocean Manor Nursing Facility after a long illness.

Mrs. Wentworth worked for Petersen Real Estate and Petersen Real Estate and Insurance in Cohasset for 20 years. She retired in 1970.

She was a bookkeeper for several years for Kimball's-by-the-Sea restaurant, Cohasset.

Wife of the late Harold Orville Wentworth, she leaves a daughter, Lois Julia Butman of Cohasset; three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Arrangements for a private funeral service and burial were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Contributions may be made to charity.

Frank T. Mace

Frank T. Mace, 60, of Cohasset, vice president of Wellington Management Co. and an Army veteran of the Korean War, died of cancer at home April 5.

Mr. Mace began his career in investments with Baumgartner Downing in Baltimore, and sold securities for Kidder Peabody in Philadelphia and for Provident Bank.

He established a trading desk in Boston in February, 1992, and moved to Cohasset with his family in January, 1993.

An avid golfer, Mr. Mace was a member of the Kennet Country Club in Kennet Square, Pa.

A native of Norfolk, Va., he lived in Baltimore 32 years and Westchester, Pa., 28 years. He attended Loyola College.

Mr. Mace leaves his wife, Anne (Guidera) Mace; five sons, Frank Mace, Stephen Mace and Peter Mace, all of Tampa, Fla., Michael Mace of New York and Brian Mace of Westchester; six daughters, Theresa Richardson of Brookhaven, Pa., Margaret Mace of Philadelphia, Barbara Mace and Jennifer Mace, both of Westchester, and Mary Kathleen Mace and Kristina Mace, both of Cohasset; his mother, Elizabeth (Hauf) Mace; a brother and two sisters, Joseph Mace, Elizabeth Mace and Mary Angela Mace; four grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Arrangements for a memorial Mass April 13 in St. Mary's Chapel, Boston College, Chestnut Hill, and private burial were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Kathi-Ann McLore

A funeral Mass for Kathi-Ann (Conti) McLore, 22, of Whitman, a supervisor in the dispatch department for the AAA in Rockland, was celebrated April 16 in St. Paul's Church, 147 North St., Hingham. Burial was in High St. Cemetery, Hingham.

Mrs. McLore died April 13 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, of injuries after an accident April 4 in Rockland.

She worked in the credit department of Talbot's in Hingham for five years before joining AAA.

Born in Boston, Mrs. McLore grew up in Cohasset where she graduated from high school in 1988. She attended Aquinas College and Quincy College.

She is survived by her husband, Robert J. McLore; a daughter, Melissa Ann McLore; her parents, Vito and Kathleen Conte of Barefoot Bay, Fla. formerly of Cohasset; a brother and sister-in-law, James B. and Joan E. Smith of Halifax; another brother, Michael A. Smith of Charleston, S.C.; her grandmother, Philomena Conte of Cohasset, many aunts, uncles and cousins, and six nephews and nieces.

Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to a scholarship fund for her daughter at Quincy Savings Bank, 36 Washington St., Norwell 02061.

Howard B. Eastman

Howard B. Eastman, 73, formerly of Cohasset and Scituate, a retired mechanic for Mark's Sunoco, died April 16 at Faulkner Hospital, Boston, after a long illness.

Mr. Eastman lived most of his life in Cohasset and Scituate.

He leaves his wife, Lorraine (LeVangie) Eastman; five sons, John Eastman of Quincy, Walter Eastman of Maine, Howard Eastman Jr. of Halifax, and Robert and Arthur Eastman; four daughters, Elizabeth Hutchinson of Quincy, Eleanor Upp of Minnesota, Eva Girting of Pennsylvania and Evelyn Desauya of East Falmouth; a stepson, Donald Bell of Illinois; two stepdaughters, Wendy Hart of Braintree and Anne Diltz of Maryland; two brothers, Charles Eastman of Whitman and Walter Eastman of Rockland; a sister, Mary Bigwood of Rockland; and 19 grandchildren.

He was the former husband of Esther (Hawley) Rayner.

A funeral service was held April 20 at McDonald Funeral Home, 809 Main St., South Weymouth. The Rev. Donald Bryant, pastor of South Shore Baptist Church, officiated. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Courting danger:

Cracks could be a safety hazard

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Selectman Michael Sullivan thinks a town like Cohasset ought to have better public tennis courts.

"It's embarrassing to play other towns on those tennis courts and it may be a little bit dangerous," he said.

The school department has offered to share the cost of repairing the courts with the town.

The courts at the high school are riddled with cracks. However it's unclear whether the schools or the town has jurisdiction over the courts because two different town maps contain conflicting information, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained.

School Supt. Stephen Hart sent a quote from a seal-coating company for $4,000 to fill the cracks and touch up the playing lines to selectmen. Hart is pursuing more quotes which may come in lower, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Sullivan's fellow board members agreed that something needs to be done.

Rocco F. Laugelle questioned whether it was wise to

Dry summer for Olde Salt House

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Traffic and control were two issues that will keep the Olde Salt House dry this summer.

Selectmen denied an application for a beer and wine license at the restaurant citing parking problems and the fact the restaurant's seating is outside on a patio.

The hearing Monday was a continuation of one started last November when the board took the matter under advisement.

But no matter how eloquently owner Thomas Eisenstadt tried to persuade the board that patrons taking liquor off the premises would not be a problem — selectmen were unconvinced.

"I implore you to use common sense. I ask you to believe me from my experience this is a family-type operation," Eisenstadt said.

He stressed that the restaurant is not primarily a

All Paws comes to the rescue for a Cohasset couple

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

To a Cohasset couple, 'All Paws' is all saints.

The retired pair, who requested anonymity, knew they could no longer care for the several dozen pets they had taken in over the years, but they were unable to find anyone to accept them.

"It was getting so we couldn't feed them right," the woman said. The couple, who is on a fixed income, spent $70 a week on animal food.

"It just went too far and no one seemed to want to help."

The woman said there were plenty of groups willing to take the animals, but none willing to keep them alive.

"They all wanted to put them to sleep," she said. Her husband said one group actually had all the cats in a cage to take them away before he discovered they would be killed.

"I just started to take them out of the cage," he said.

All Paws Rescue of Hingham was the fourth group they contacted.

"They are fantastic," she said of the non-profit animal shelter. "They took 44 cats and even brought us food for the other animals."

Jen Lewis, founder and vice-president of All Paws Rescue, said she was glad to help.

Four hurt as Ford Mustang rams house

Police charged Brian D. Ranson, 20, 5 Cushing St. in Hull with operating to endanger; failure to stay in marked lanes; and speeding after a car he was driving rammed a Cohasset house early Saturday morning, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

The Ford Mustang, driven by Ranson, struck Marie Blante's home at 241 Hull St. at about 1:30 a.m. hitting an unoccupied front bedroom.

The car, which was travelling down Rockland Street in Hingham took down the stop sign at the intersection of Hull and Rockland Streets and left 280 feet of skid marks before striking Plante's house, Jackson said.

Also injured in the crash were passengers Scott Sandanato, 19 of Hull, and Ryan Newcomb and James Allen, both 19, of 729 Jerusalem Rd. in Cohasset.

Ranson and Sandanto were airlifted by MedFlight helicopter to Brigham and Women's Hospital where they were both listed in stable condition Tuesday. Newcomb and Allen were treated and released at South Shore Hospital, Jackson said.

Capt. Robert Silvia said Cohasset, Hingham, and Refueling boats okay'ed

The selectmen's office was packed Monday with citizens who support allowing Shawn Harris Enterprises, Inc. to fuel vessels at Government Island the same way the company has for years.

It was perplexing to the audience why this year the board postponed allowing the dispensing of fuel at the dock until it looked into pollution protection.

The state's hazardous waste statute is the culprit, selectmen said.

But Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said the town was liable regardless.

"The town does incur more liability," Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson explained. "But even if you don't allow (refueling) you do.

"According to the state, the land owner is initially liable — but the issue is does dispensing by truck present any further hazard than dispensing by hand."

Without being able to refuel at the dock, boat owners would lug fuel tanks by hand to their boats.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the chances of a spill are remote.

"Mr. Harris does as good a job as he possibly can. If there is a spill it would go into the bilges of the boat rather than the water.

"I think we should let it go on as is," he said.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said that the town "by formally agreeing to it takes on a different liability.

"We must weigh the liability of all the separate tanks going down," he said.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said in the end the town is responsible regardless.

"We're where the buck stops no matter what happens," she said.

The board considered requiring Harris to have two employees at the dock at all times — one at the truck and one filling the tank in the boat.

Harbormaster Irving Gadow said that wasn't necessary.

"Myself or (assistant harbormaster) Bob Baggs is down there to supervise refueling operation," he said.

Shawn Harris, the refueling company owner, explained that the fire chief in Scituate requires his employee to stay at the truck and allows the boat owner to fuel the tank.

Cohasset firefighters Paul Bilodeau, Frank Mahoney, and John Dockray show off the town's new $90,000 ambulance which weighs 23,000 lbs. and is more heavy duty than those the town had in the past and should have a longer life expectancy. Fire Chief John Nadeau explained the ambulance uses diesel fuel which is more efficient. The ambulance has already been out on several calls, Nadeau said.

"Jimmy Breen says the boat owner knows the boat better and can fuel up his own tank," he said.

Harris also explained that his truck is equipped with emergency valves and a fire extinguisher and specialized pads if there is a spill. He said the fuel is pumped "at an idle" making the refueling a slow process due to the capacity of the tanks.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said an extra employee would present an undue burden to Harris Oil, Inc.

"The boat owner is always there. They pull up to the dock, they are at the other end.

"There's not that much profit in it. I can't see why the boat owner can't be the person at the other end," he asked.

In a majority vote, selectmen approved a permit to allow delivery of diesel fuel at the Government Island dock pending a set of procedures to be submitted by Harbormaster Gadow. Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby voted against issuing the permit.

Shawn Harris Oil, Inc. is insured through American First Insurance Agency in Quincy. The company's automobile policy provides limited pollution liability at $30,000 per person/$70,000 per accident bodily injury and $5,000 per accident property damage.

Entertainment on Sunday is approved

Selectmen renewed the following licenses for the South Shore Music Circus: public entertainment on Sunday; entertainment weekday; common victualler (food); and Sunday food license.

General Manager Vincent G. Longo assured the board that shows on Sunday would end before 11 p.m. He said the Sunday concerts should end by 10:15 p.m. but the extra 45 minutes would provide for any unforeseen glitches which might delay the performance.

"There are no double shows on Sundays," he said.

River City trouble is terrific in Music Man

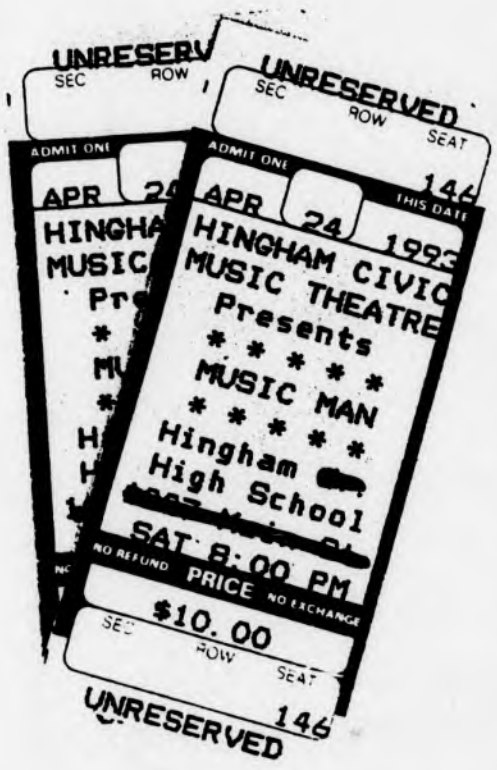
By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

play review

It's been 13 long years since Hingham's Scott Wahle has been on stage.

And lucky for us, the WBZ-TV sportscaster chose the local theater to make a comeback.

As Professor Harold Hill in Hingham Civic Music Theatre's production of "The Music Man," Wahle charmed the people of River City, Iowa and at the same time had the packed audience at Hingham High School in the palm of his hand Saturday night.



There's no doubt that hundreds of South Shore citizens found themselves humming tunes like "The Wells Fargo Wagon," "Seventy-Six Trombones," and "Ya Got Trouble" as they went about their business Sunday.

A Hingham resident, Wahle — who saw "The Music Man" for the first time when he was nine — was a natural in the role of the fast-talking, slick, and likable Professor Hill.

He can sing, dance and act and he wasn't alone.

Terri-Marie Sabella, as the "The Sadder But Wiser Girl" Marion Paroo the River City librarian, is also no stranger to the stage. She lists her one woman show, "The Wide Wild World" along with her role as Anita in "West Side Story" and as among her favorites. Sabella has a superb voice for musical comedy and she portrayed the intelligent, morally-upstanding Marion with total believ-ability.

"The Music Man" is on stage at 8 p.m., April 30 and May 1 at Hingham High School. Tickets are $10. For information, please call 749-0857.

For those who don't remember the story — Professor Hill is a travelling salesman (con-artist is more apropos) who comes to River City after learning from fellow salesmen how stubborn and impossible the Iowans are.

In no time at all, Hill — whom we're reminded can't read a note — brings new life to the town of 2,200 people by promising music lessons, band instruments and uniforms.

He has no trouble distracting the school board by pointing out how well they can work together — as a barbershop quartet. Oli, Oliver, Ewart & Jacey (Dan Walsh, Ken Siroonian, John Sawyer and Gregory Harris) provide plenty of comic relief with renditions of "Lida Rose" and "Goodnight Ladies"

And River City is chock full of other characters awakened by Hill's magic touch. There's a bumbling, stumbling mayor (played by Jack Armstrong) who happens to own the billiard hall and his farcical wife portrayed by Kathy Campbell and their pretty teenage daughter (Brandi Rice) whose boyfriend (Josh Mitchell) is from the wrong side of the tracks.

Marion's younger brother Winthrop — played by Duxbury fifth grader Brendan Woods — very nearly steals the show with his loveable lisp and rendition of "Gary, Indiana". And in weaker company, he certainly would have. Woods was adorable but the entire cast was so strong that he couldn't run away with all the accolades.

The turn-of-the century costumes complete with grand hats for ladies are colorful and lovely. The sets are beautifully designed and provide the perfect back drop for the performers.

Director Martha Sawyer (who years ago coincidentally co-starred with Wahle in a Notre Dame High School production in which NDA borrowed Wahle from Hingham High) deserves ample credit for this terrific show along with music director Meri-Lee Mafera and choreographer Diane Robertson.

To get back to the story — in the end, Hill is discovered for what he is. But with Marion's help the townspeople realize that Hill delivered on enough enthusiasm to make them believe in themselves. And of course — the new band uniforms arrive just in the nick of time. Marion and Hill fall in love — and surely live happily ever after.

If you want a night of pure entertainment — that's uncomplicated and fun — don't miss HCMT's "Music Man" — you won't be disappointed. Bring the entire family.

And now you'll have to excuse me, I'm going to dig out my old "Music Man" album and listen to those great songs again.

Library in Health Fair

Susan Pope, a reference librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, will bring a selection of the library's most current collection of health related books to the Cohasset Health Fair, Thursday, May 4 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 5 to 7 p.m. in the evening. Mrs. Pope has organized a collection that centers on pertinent health issues of concern to citizens of all ages. She has selected books whose primary focus is prevention and well[illegible]ng as well as books that address matters of ill-health.

Titles range from Prescriptions for Nutritional Healing and New Age Herbals to the Allergy Self-Help Cookbook. Physically debilitating diseases such as Parkinson's Disease, Arthritis, and Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, are represented in the collection, as well as, mental health issues of depression, sleeping and eating disorders and addiction. There are also a number of books specifically related to Women's Health issues.

Self-Help and Prevention represent a major focus in Nutrition, The Well Adult, Winning The Food Fight, This Is Living, and The Book of Diet and Fiber. These books emphasize attaining and maintaining good health.

Mrs. Pope will also be available at the Health Fair to consult with individuals who are interested in a better understanding of the Health-Reference materials maintained at the library, The Merc Manual, The Doctor's Vitamin and Mineral Encyclopedia, and The Prescription Drug Manual. She will also have available for distribution Health Letters from Tufts and Harvard.

The Health Fair Collection will also be featured in the main lobby of the library beginning Thursday, April 30.

Library staffer Susan Pope stocks the shelves with books on health care to coincide with the May 6 Health Fair sponsored by the Social Service League and Board of Health in conjunction with the Council on Aging.

Cohasset artist to show work in Paris and Bordeaux

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset artist Claffy Williams with some of her acrylic paintings at a recent exhibit. Mrs. Williams is off to Paris where one of her paintings won a place in a show which opens next week. (File photo)

Claffy Williams may paint in abstract but she's as down to earth as they come.

An acrylic painting entitled SAX, which is one of a series of paintings on musical instruments, has won her a place in a show next week in France.

But in her Atlantic Avenue studio which overlooks Little Harbor — a source of much inspiration to her — Williams talks as much about being a regular tourist as she does the show.

She's been invited to show in the eighth Grand Prix of Paris, but Williams plans to squeeze in sightseeing along with some gallery and museum hopping while there.

"I'll be buried in the Louvre," she says enthusiastically.

Williams, who is no stranger to art shows, is the only Boston area artist invited. The Grand Prix of Paris opens May 6 in the Salon Du Colombier, City Hall in Paris and then travels to the Museum of Modern Art in Tonneins, Bordeaux.

Williams heard about the show after she received a form letter starting with "Dear Artist."

"The letter asked to send three slides to this French woman," she recalls.

"Then she wrote back that she had accepted my work and added 'I love your work,' " Williams notes.

Worried that the news was too good to be true, Williams — who is on the board of advisors at the South Shore Arts Center — called the French woman up in Miami where she was staying.

"I can tell a lot by talking with someone on the phone," she says. "It all sounded very real. She is French and this is all very exciting."

So Williams sent SAX off to a show in Miami and the painting travels from there the 5,000 miles or so to France.

And she is off Sunday to meet the show's curator Mme. Jane Chirronsot Chambeaux in person and to see Paris. She's one of only 14 artists invited to participate. The artists come from Europe, South America, and the Orient as well as the United States.

For Williams the trip is another chapter in her career as an artist which got underway after her four kids were grown.

But her talent surfaced much earlier.

"I used to hide crayons in the closet from brother," she says with a smile.

Williams, who explains it takes an artist eight-to-10 years "to get showing," tries to paint for at least four hours every day. Then she spends hours taking care of the "business" of being an artist which includes sending slides of her work out to publications and curators. And she also finds the time to teach at the Arts Center.

One reviewer described Williams' work as "Eastern simplicity with Western abstraction."

"I like that (description)," Williams notes.

And in addition to the thrill of being in Paris — Williams is looking forward to mixing with other artists.

"Mme. Chambeaux said she's like all the artists to meet each other.

"We're (artists) alone so much it's great to talk with other artists and find out what they like to do," Williams adds.

Kids' creativity workshop set for summer

Make this a creative summer for your children. The Children's Summer Creativity Workshops is offering art programs for ages five through 14 years. Classes meet once a week, for five weeks, for two hours per week, from Aug. 2 to Sep. 2.

The Morning Creativity program for ages five through 10 years, is partially held in a magical garden. Thru weekly outdoor sketching young artists drawings will be compiled in sketch book form to document each artists progress. Children will express various nature themes through creative use of clay, paint, collage, and printmaking.

The Evening Creativity programs for ages nine through 14 years, includes the following series: Artists in the Garden, Sports/Action Figures, Natures Patterns and Design, and Native American Art.

Advance registration is now open. For more information call instructor Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453

'Real' real estate legend honored by Conway

New and old friends gathered to honor a legend in real estate, Joanne Haag, for her friendship and service to Jack Conway & Company which spans a quarter of a century.

The evening of recognition, held recently at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club, brought back many happy memories as her colleagues relived her many achievements and success stories.

"She has always been an inspiration to us all," said long-time friend Mary Ellen Neagle, manager of Jack Conway & Co.'s Cohasset office. "She leaves a record of achievement that will never, ever be topped in this industry in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Since joining Jack Conway & Co. in 1970, Ms. Haag has been named the number one agent in the company 15 times. In her first year in real estate she topped the entire company in sales, selling everything from cottages on Lighthouse Sandhills Point to estates on Jerusalem Road in Cohasset. A few years later she was awarded by the industry for being the top sales associate in the entire state. For instance, during one period in her career Ms. Haag sold five houses in just five days for a total of $1,150,000.00 in volume.

Company chairman Jack Conway remembers when she was just starting out after getting her real estate license, and was attending the Conway Country School of Knowledge. "She astounded the whole class when she not only attended every day but also had two listings and two sales while the course was still going on!"

Many attribute Ms. Haag's lively personality to her terrific success. She started out with a degree in psychology and no previous job experience, yet single handedly became one of the most successful agents on the East Coast.

Besides her selling accomplishments, Ms. Haag has earned the designations of CRS (Certified Residential Specialist), GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute), and has served as president and governor of the Massachusetts Women's Council of Realtors. Ms. Haag is the mother of three and resides in Hingham. She is married to Robert Vantine, a successful Wellesley travel agency owner.

Joanne Haag and Mary Ellen Neagle with Jack Conway at a dinner honoring Ms. Haag for years of dedication and service to the Jack Conway & Company.

"She not only did her job well, but has a been a very good mother, and a wonderful person. She has the skill to mix her ability with kindness and there are many people who can't do that," said Conway Company president, Dick Cahill.

The event was attended by 100 friends from Jack Conway & Company. Ms. Haag was surprised with a beautiful amber necklace and earrings, recently brought back from the Dominican Republic by Jack and Patti Conway.

DON'T MISS IT!

around town

Peter Ferenz is going to have a great summer this year. He will be at Derby Academy for its Summer Arts Program as a Councilor in Training. Peter is a junior at Cohasset High School and everyone is very happy for him (cannot wait to hear all about it).

We'll all miss Paul Robey "around town"...he was a special man with a grand talent for making people feel good about themselves! And did he know how to laugh and have a good time! He will be missed by all and our condolences go to Dorsey and his family.

Don't forget the Appalachia Service Project that is going on "around town"...a dedicated group of young people are headed for Southwestern Virginia from June 27 through July 3 and they would love to have your help...not physical, just monetary. You can get your car washed (May 1); they have servants for hire (call Ami Argus, 383-9325); and they have many more ideas. They are even selling stocks for $25 a share, with increasing benefits up to four shares.

Some of the young people involved are Katie Barrett, Mindy Cheel, Penelope Dane, Ann Dane, Marnie DeMichele, Jon Ford, Sarah Kirk, Allison Ritts, Amy Silvia and Dan Silvia.

Gary Ritts is in charge of this wonderful helpful venture. Call him if you can be of help (383-0345). He will help you decide what is the right thing for you; you must help these students on their way to do good for all.

You had better believe that Polly and Tom Doggett are pleased and happy...their son, Peter, is in Nepal climbing mountains up to 15,000 feet! He is part of a group of five and thrilled to be there.

Peter is living in Long Beach, California, and is a member of the Sierra Club's 100 peak. He has climbed 274 peaks in Southern California in two years...to say that he is an avid climber is to understate it!

And, guess what? He began the whole thing at Lily Pond, right here in Cohasset. A true athlete, Peter also ran in the Los Angeles Marathon...all of Cohasset is proud of you too, Peter!

All of those at the Cohasset Savings Bank want to send congratulations and best wishes to Margie Horne and Dennis Zucker, who were married April 23. Of course we all extend our best wishes as well. Here's to a long, happy and healthy life together!

Had a nice chat with Anthony Finnegan last week. What a nice gentleman! As most know, Anthony had surgery recently and was overwhelmed with all of the gifts, cards and flowers...so many he can't begin to count! Anthony would like to thank all who thought of him. He couldn't believe how great everyone was. Now it is time for us to thank Mr. Finnegan – he is the person most responsible for getting the brand new bridge on Doane Street and he is proud to say so. All Cohassetites should go to see it; it truly is a work of art!

Again, he thanks you all for your thoughts, and we thank him for our new bridge!

South Shore Hospital's Cohasset Committee has invited members of the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club and other newcomers to tour South Shore Hospital Wednesday, May 5, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Hospital staff will illustrate the many new changes that have and will be taking place at our local hospital that benefit patients and the community. There will be an informal reception at the tour's conclusion, during which hospital representatives will answer any questions you may have. Anyone else interested is encouraged to come and then socialize afterwards.

To RSVP or for more information, call the South Shore Health and Education Foundation at 340-8856 or Shirley Marten at 383-9829 or 383-0832. Shirley is arranging car pools too.

We hope that Bud Railsback is recovering quickly after his recent accident. Bud is a wonderful man and he has to be seen around town as soon as possible!

Kerry Miele is one happy gal! She just learned that she will be working at Disney World through the Clemson College work program. So, if you want to see Kerry, get there fast. She'll be gone in two weeks. Of course, you could plan a trip to Disney World and see her there! Wouldn't that be nice!

Nancy Garrison of King Street has been inducted into the Alexander Graham Bell Honor Society at Curry College. The senior English major was among 20 students who were honored by the society at a recent reception. The object of this society, named for the famous inventor who was an early chancellor of the college, is the promotion and recognition of academic excellence at Curry. Students having a cumulative grade point average of 3.4 or better and taking at least nine credits may apply, then are chosen by members of the society who base their decisions on academic achievement and extracurricular involvement both on and off campus.

Madeline Wentworth

Madeline (Bosworth) Wentworth, 91, of Cohasset, a retired secretary for Petersen Real Estate, died April 14 in Scituate Ocean Manor Nursing Facility after a long illness.

Mrs. Wentworth worked for Petersen Real Estate and Insurance Company in Cohasset for 20 years. She retired about 1970.

She was a bookkeeper for several years for Kimball's, Cohasset.

Wife of the late Harold Orville Wentworth, she leaves a daughter, Lois Julia Butman of Cohasset; three grandchildren, Robert Charles Butman, Bruce Wentworth Butman, and Kenneth Barry Butman, all of Cohasset, and six great-grandchildren.

Arrangements for a private funeral service and burial were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Contributions may be made to charity.

Arthur L. Clark

Former town official, Arthur L. Clark, 85, of Concord, New Hampshire died April 26 at the Concord Hospital.

Born in Cohasset, Mr. Clark lived there for many years and owned and managed the Clark Plumbing and Heating Co. from 1950 to 1972. Previously he was vice president of the MacNeil and Clark Plumbing and Heating Company. During World War II, Mr. Clark worked as a senior quarterman at the Hingham Shipyard.

He attended Cohasset public schools, the Boston Trade School, and Quincy Trade Night School.

He served on the Cohasset School Committee, advisory committee, the high school building committee, water commission, and board of selectmen.

Mr. Clark was a member of the Beechwood Congregational Church and the United Church of Christ of Penacook. He was also a member of the Horace Chase Lodge; the Konohasset Lodge in Cohasset, Eastern Star Priscilla Chapter 51 OES; Dorothy Bradford Chapter OES, Hingham; and Past Noble Grand Old Colony Lodge of IOOF. He was also a member of the Contoocook River Assoc. and served on the board of directors.

He was a member and past president of the Cohasset Rotary Club; past trustee and treasurer of the Nantasket Library at North Cohasset and past trustee of the Lothrup historical house.

Son of the late Edgar C. Clark and Elisabeth (Lean) Clark, he leaves his wife Eunice (Blaney) Clark of Concord, NH; three sons, James A. Clark and Donald E. Clark both of Hingham; and Robert C. Clark of Braintree; and one daughter Elizabeth G. Vafides of Concord, NH; ten grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Mary Whelton of Withersfield, Connecticut and Christine Cornish of Thurmont, Maryland; and numerous nieces and nephews.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, May 2 at the Beechwood Congregational Church. The Rev. Stephen Hall and Mr. E. Gardner Jones will officiate. Burial will be at Woodside Cemetery.

Thirteen'ers

Four members of a newer generation visited the Selectmen's meeting room Monday night.

Three of the four — Jeffrey Treanor, Richard Abbadessa, and Glenn Davis are products of Cohasset and its schools. The fourth, Christopher E. Drown hails from Marshfield.

The young men all applied for an opening on the Cohasset police force.

According to Howie Carr's guest on WRKO Tuesday morning "13'ers" — who gain their name because they are the 13th generation since Colonial days and are born between 1961 and 1980 — are a troubled lot.

So it was nice to see four "13'ers" prove the experts wrong.

We were impressed with how articulate the four applicants were and the value they placed on making a difference in a community.

They all said their main motivation in wanting to become a police officer was to "help people." The least attractive part of the job was making arrests.

The small-town life appealed to them. They said they want to form a bridge between the police and youth of the community. They want to get right into the schools and let the kids know police are not the bad guys.

Cohasset is lucky to have such fine young people who want to serve.

If the applicants Monday are any representation of their generation — then "13'ers" are going to be lucky for all of us.

And Chief Brian Noonan and the selectmen have a job on their hands to pick just one.

Get well, Merle

Here at the Mariner, we wish Selectman Merle S. Brown a speedy recovery from heart by-pass surgery.

We understand he was watching the board meeting on cable-TV Monday. We hope he's back in front of the camera soon!

Campaign finance reform is overdue

letters

To the Editor:

President Clinton talks a lot about campaign finance reform. He campaigned on the issue, mentioned the subject during his inaugural address, and even included the subject in his Feb. 17 address to Congress. No matter how good the President's rhetoric, however, talk alone will not force the Congress to act on campaign finance reform legislation.

We are still waiting for legislative details and presidential guidance on Campaign Finance Reform. The longer the President delays, the longer special interests will continue to use campaign contributions to assert political influence and dictate policy.

Take for example the issue of pollution control. Without real campaign finance reform the automobile PACs will continue to play a strong hand in the fuel efficiency debate. On health care, pharmaceutical PACs will continue to dominate drug policy. Effective campaign finance reform will help ensure that national policy goals are no longer influenced by private industry goals.

Access and influence are being bought at high rates in Washington. Recent Federal Election Commission data indicates that a 1992 House election costs incumbents nearly $600,000. The average House incumbent received nearly $250,000 in PAC contributions, while challengers received a significantly smaller $29,000. Overall, PACS contributed over $160 million to congressional candidates.

President Clinton campaigned on the need for a "revolution in government." It is time for him to lead that revolution by immediately presenting Congress with a comprehensive campaign finance reform package tougher than the one vetoed last year.

Stronger legislation must include banning PACs and soft money, and reducing the amount that individuals can contribute by at least 75 percent. Most importantly, we need clean campaign resources to replace special interest money, funded by eliminating the current business lobbying deduction and increasing the voluntary tax check-off from $1 to $5.

State sen. candidate featured at Co-op 8

State Sen. Michael J. Barrett, D-Cambridge, Democratic candidate for governor, will be the featured speaker at 11 a.m. Sunday, May 2, at Co-op 8's brunch at the Barker Tavern, 21 Barker Road, Scituate Harbor.

Co-op 8 is an association of Democratic town committees from Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Tickets are $14 each and may be obtained from Betty Kinsella of the Scituate Democratic Town Committee at 545-3122.

Barrett is Senate chairman of the Joint Committee on Health Care. He served as a state representative for three terms from 1979 to 1984 and has been in the Senate since 1987.

During his legislative career, he helped draft the law authorizing the Boston University-Chelsea contract, whereby B.U. agreed to manage Chelsea's public school system for 10 years.

He also helped write and pass the landmark Cape cod Commission Act which created a regional land use planning mechanism for Barnstable County.

In 1983 he was chief architect of the state's 1983 Hazardous Waste Superfund and helped establish the House Environmental Caucus.

Last year he wrote the state's first-in-the-nation domestic violence registry law which requires that the state's criminal computer systems be linked and continues to work on other bills that affect victims of violence.

An attorney, Barrett graduated magna cum laude from Harvard College and received his law degree from Northeastern University School of Law.

He and his wife, Nancy, and their twin daughters, Hannah and Lily, live in Cambridge.

Moms: There's either dinner or little league

By Lili Adler
Special to the Mariner

Spring is here.

Around town, a bright blue blanket of silla covers lawns; yellow daffodils yawn and stretch open; and somewhere a copy machine is working late, duplicating team lists, practice schedules and game times; collating packets of papers that will be distributed with hats and uniforms so Little League teams can batter up and play ball in synchrony with towns and cities across the country.

And players and their coaches, thousands, maybe millions of them, each in their own way, are making room in their lives and hearts and minds and muscles for baseball, getting ready to flex and run and explode with their own wondrous sense of this sport.

There is another group for whom the Little League opening parade means something. The season has a personal challenge for them though most have never worn a baseball uniform, traded a single baseball card or swung a bat on any official baseball field. They know the game, know the local teams and know facts about baseball that statisticians haven't begun to tally. They are we, the moms of baseball.

Our sons and daughters are outside warming up. They have been lobbying for a new batting glove. Teachers say they are talking all through math class about who else is on their team. Their dads are at coaches meetings, or stopping by on their way home to price that new batting glove and just trying on one of those new pump-up fielder's gloves. They are talking with each other about the season's prospects and trying to sound like they think it's only a kid's game. And we, too, are involved in the serious pre-season preparations.

We are marking up our family calendars to see how these countless games fit into the rest of life. Some of us write down large 6's for those six o'clock evening games, and 8's, 10's, and 12's for those often sweltering Saturday morning games. Some of us write in different colors for the different leagues we staff. Red marker for the eleven-year-olds major league games, blue for the eight-year-olds minor league games and maybe green for the six-year-olds farm team games. We write in code, B for the Beechwood field, HS for the high school diamond, and LL for the town's official Little League field, the one with real bleachers, dugouts and the snack shack.

We are going up to the attic late at night, when the players have been tucked in, hunting for the box of summer clothes that holds those worn white baseball pants. We pull them out from where they've been sandwiched between layers of jams and swimming trunks. We inspect them in the dim attic light, checking to see if the elastic waist still has any give, if the knees will take one more iron-on patch, and we marvel that the long lean major leaguer sleeping below could have ever fit into this skimpy pair of size eights.

Baseball moms are also preparing their potions, recalling and sharing formulas for the thing that will get red dirt out of those white pants. Some say it's got to be chlorine bleach; some say it must be non-chlorine bleach. Some swear by dishwasher powder, and some are happy with a Wisk and ammonia solution mixed 2:1, a recipe I overheard in line in a fabric store.

We moms of baseball are going to the market and buying bags of corn, (frozen mini ears), and skinny hamburger patties, determined as we are every April to find a way to serve some kind of dinner before the week night games, and knowing that even if we cook something early enough, it's most often overlooked and left on the plate while our star is tasting the fly ball he plans to snag and the line drive he hopes to slam. Even while shopping and dreaming up the baseball dinner we hope, this year, they'll surely eat, we moms are knowing that by June, we'll accept that dinner can only be pizza or hot dogs from the snack bar, a meal inhaled after a game by a tired and happy player and appreciated more than any cooked-ahead-pot-roast-supper could ever be.

We are thinking, too, about the sweatshirts, spring jackets, water bottles and sunglasses we'll wish we had in the car for those cold, hot or slanted-sunny night games. We'll remember sitting in those bleachers, same spot every game for the best view of Jake playing third, Steve in right field, or Peter behind the plate. We stake out our claim for the spot where we can best see them, and where they can best signal us with that barely perceptible sign, that lopsided brief grin, that two-second thumbs-up or that beaming smile transmitted across the field to mom when our star has done well and feels just awesome. The dads stand along the fence but we will sit where we sat all last year, freezing only when we glimpsed the bare, bluish, goose bumpy arms jutting out of the uniform sleeves on those chilly May evenings; sweltering only when we saw our boy's blotchy red face, carried by a sweaty pumping arms and legs machine in overdrive as it crossed home plate on those sizzling June Saturdays; thirsty only when we felt our child's penetrating eye contact from the dugout, eye contact that bore right to our neuro-receptors with the unspoken but unmistakable message, "Puleeze bring me a soda and sneak it into the dugout. I know the coach won't mind bending the rules this time when we're this thirsty!"

We moms are suiting up for the season, donning our padding and protecting ourselves the way a catcher suits up to protect himself at the top of each inning. We are buckling on those invisible but regulation chestplates that save us. We want to be ready for that sudden, heart-stopping split- second of fear that comes when we hear a line drive crack against a child's chin, or that wild pitch bounce off a batter's helmet, a crack most often followed by our own tearful relief as the player wipes his eyes bravely and gives the anxious crowd an "Oh, I'm okay" grin. And we are searching, without success, for some piece of equipment that will protect us and our players from the ache of that third, called strike that always seems to come at the end of the game, with bases loaded and two men out, that ache that sometimes disappears over the post game ice cream from JJ's, but sometimes lasts until the next hit, the next game or the next victory makes it go away.

We are deep into spring training and preparations knowing that by the playoffs, these will be baseball facts:

That a family meal is a dim memory, for a wise mother has once said: "There's either dinner, or Little League."

That baseball pants can never really be white again.

That home is only a place people run in and out of between games.

And that baseball is not a sport, but a microcosm of life, in which the most important stuff happens when you're getting ready for something else.

— Moscow manifest —

By Tim Muzzi
Special to the Mariner

(Editor's note: Mrs. Muzzi traveled to Russia last fall on a trade mission with People to People International, a private organization which promotes international awareness. Upon her return, she collected books to send to Russian universities. She's planning to hold a yard sale to raise money to send the books overseas. If you have something you'd like to donate please call 749-5986).

Arrival at the Moscow airport confronts us with the first image of Grey Decaying Granduer. No other airport has greeted us with such gloom and silent hostility. The young soldiers review our papers with stiff regard, then somber acceptance,—no smile,—no greeting. There is no baggage assistance so we arduously push our luggage through the long dark lines as Customs coniders our belongings.

Moscow presents itself as our bus consumes the vast expanse of grim buildings mixed with Old World Majesty,-reminiscent of nobler times. Scurrying people wearing dark clothing and serious faces throng through the busy streets.

The bus arrives at the (3500 room) hotel "Russia" as we move anxiously towards the enormous grey lobby. Our courier has made our room arrangements as we wait for assistance with our baggage — fruitlessly. "Oh well, there are elevators, and we can manage..." But as the elevator arrives at our floor, the "floor Lady" greets us and indicates with barely understandable English that our room is— "down hall, to next hall, to cafe, to left door, and to end of hall where attendant is seated. Your room is next room after." Thank goodness for the help of our fellow delegates!

My roommate and I follow through the dark corridors, and pass by occasional curious guests. We finally enter our room prepared for the stiff staleness, but cringe in horror as I enter the bathroom. When I snap on the light an army of cockroaches scurry for cover! I ponder my ability to sleep amid this discomfort. We try to become acquainted with our room, and gratefully search our luggage for our soap and soft scented toilet paper, after discovering the rough brown paper and smelly sliver of yellow soap which is provided. We hastily retrieve a change of clothes and re-lock our luggage, since being warned that this (hopefully) will protect against thievery, and the invasion of the cockroaches!

I become aware that this giant hotel is inhabited by many upper-class Russians who pay just a few hundred rubles per month, although our group pays over $100 per night! ($1 equals about 200 rubles) I consider this as one of many signs that suggest that perhaps we are not especially welcome in this city of turmoil.

We are warned against going out of the hotel alone, since we very obviously look American, and the crime rate is very high in Moscow, especially for foreigners! By this time we have made a solemn pact to "look out for one another."

Moscow is unlike any other place that most of us has ever been in, and promises to remind us of how many comforts we have left behind! Our visit here was intended to bring information from Purchasing Management Professionals from the USA into business groups within Moscow, but already we have given birth to the recognition that this country seeks a long and painful reorganization, and our answers may not suffice, — or even be recognizable amidst such a tumultuous journey.

We proceed through our preplanned meetings with awe, concern for the inadequacies of our answers, sympathy for the obvious plight of these people, and a growing glimmer of hope that we are performing some semblance of service.

On the second day of our visit I attempt again to contact the Foreign Commercial Service at The American Embassy in Moscow. Gratefully I make contact, and am given an appointment in one hour.

The language problem coupled with a definite reluctance of the service help causes delay, but I finally convince the "doorman" (after paying him 500 Rubles) to bring me outside, and get a taxi to take me to the Embassy. After much discussion between them (in Russian of course), I entered the taxi for my destination. Enroute I was told that the fare would be "five American."

We arrived in about ten minutes at an archaic building with a Russian sign overhead, and a young doorman who greeted us — (the taxi driver made conversation with him, accepted the fare, and departed). The doorman escorted me through the building, then downstairs into a small room, where a man was seated at a desk ,and two others at a table.

The door was then closed, and I began to get a sinking feeling in the pit of my stomach as I asked if this was the American Embassy—? The man at the desk laughed and said "nyet."

I quickly reached out a 500 Ruble from my pocket, to the man at the door, asking for him to "open door," which he thankfully did, and we went back to the entrance.

I offered him more money to get a taxi for me which would take me to the REAL American Embassy. I was finally on my way, while wondering if I had been in any "real" danger, and grateful that I didn't have to find out!

I tried to relax, and noticed that the highway in this part of Moscow was eight lanes wide on each side, and the buildings were stately, and grand. But still on the streets there was the look of need and despair in the faces of the people. My arrival at the embassy, and my business there was successful.

The clerk (to my relief) also spoke clear English, and was extremely helpful, and pleasant. She even obtained a taxi for me, after some negotiation — at a fare of 150 rubles! My return to the hotel was without incident, except for the imagery of what could have happened back in that basement room where, as my companions reminded me, that they would not have had any idea where to find me, if I had not returned. One of our delegates commented that Russian people probably have a strong aversion to being at or even near the American Embassy, perhaps explaining my "difficult trip."

There were many other surprises and new experiences, such as the restaurants where there are no menus — since the customers are served whatever the cook is lucky enough to have on that day — and the "Black Market" peddlers hoping for American dollars (while watching for the police) for the sale of their wares in places like the magnificent Red Square with its quaint cobblestone streets — and last, but definitely not least, I will never forget the night that a companion and I, at midnight, happened upon over 150 people standing in a line by the subway. In their hands, each offered something that they hoped to sell — a bag of fruit, a cooked dry chicken, a pair of worn shoes. And each anxious face showed no regard for the late hour or for the temperature.

For many years we had thought of these people as our powerful adversaries. We now know that the wealth and power we observed was concentrated on their defense systems, leaving the people wanting and fearful, and even suspicious of those that might try to help.

The USA may not be a perfect place to live, but remember that we are a country of opportunity, and free thinking. The common Russian people have no knowledge of this gift, so that the transition to a free market economy is as foreign to them as their language and lifestyle is to us. I fear that their journey has not yet begun.

All Paws comes to the rescue for Cohasset couple

"They are nice people," Lewis said. She has made periodic trips to the couple's house since last week to check on their own animals.

"I brought them quite a bit of food and medicine (for the animals)," she said. Lewis said she hopes the cats can be placed in private homes.

The Cohasset woman said they amassed their brood after years of picking up strays.

"The first one was at the town dump. The poor little thing was left," she said. Included in the animals the the couple has cared for over the years have been a skunk and raccoon.

As word spread, the woman said, people began to leave strays at their door.

Ironically, All Paws was founded last year from similar events.

Lewis, who owns the Kresslingham Kennels at 261 Gardner St., said she also took in strays. She said it got to a point where she needed outside help.

Now, the group has non-profit status and is regularly called by animal officers to take in animals that would otherwise be put to sleep.

In fact, on the day the Mariner visited Lewis and All Paws Rescue Secretary Robyn Service, they were bottle feeding six-day-old labrador puppies.

"They were abandoned in the snow in a trash bag," Service said. Lewis added that Hingham's animal control officer had called All Paws Tuesday morning when he discovered the animals.

"They have to be bottle-fed every two hours — it's not an easy task," she said. Add to that the job of caring for the dozens of cats and dogs, and several sheep. Lewis said All Paws is more that a full-time job.

"We run the country veterinary clinic here," she said half-joking.

Compassion, however, for the animals costs the organization, Lewis said.

"Veterinary expenses for these 40 cats, including spay and neuter costs, will run about $5,000," Lewis said.

Doane Street construction completed

The new Doane Street culvert is complete, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Doyon, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield, and representatives from the state inspected the bridge recently and made a short punch list.

"(J.B.) D'Allessandro (general contractors) have done all that's required to bring the project to completion," Doyon said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the punch list items were very minor for a job of this type.

Selectmen voted to release the 'retainage' held under this contract pending a letter from the engineer overseeing the project.

J. B. D'Allessandra is based in Avon.

Doyon explained that 'retainage' is about five percent of the last bill that is routinely withheld from payment to a contractor in order to over things that might still need to be done.

Statutory bonds approved

Selectmen approved bonds required by state law for the following town employees: Marion L. Douglas (town clerk) $30,000; Elizabeth A. Ripley (treasurer/collector) $120,000 & $150,000; Sally A. Lincoln (assistant treasurer) $37,500; Linda Litchfield (assistant collector) $30,000; John P. Riley (deputy collector) $12,000; and Jacquelyn R. McGuire (assistant town clerk) $14,000.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby explained the board votes the bonds yearly.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained the town has insurance to cover the other employees who deal with money.

Country girl at heart

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke is a country girl at heart. She told Vincent G. Longo, general manager of the South Shore Music Circus, Monday there weren't a lot of country music shows on the list he presented to the board.

"There's not much country music here," she said.

Longo said all the shows hadn't been booked yet.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle told Goedecke if she wanted country music she should "go to Wyoming."

Hettstrom to compete in finals

Cohasset's Erica Hettstrom earned a score of 32 during Saturday's Level Five gymnastics competion at Spectrum Gymnastics in Brockton, qualifying her for the state finals on May 9 in Algonquin.

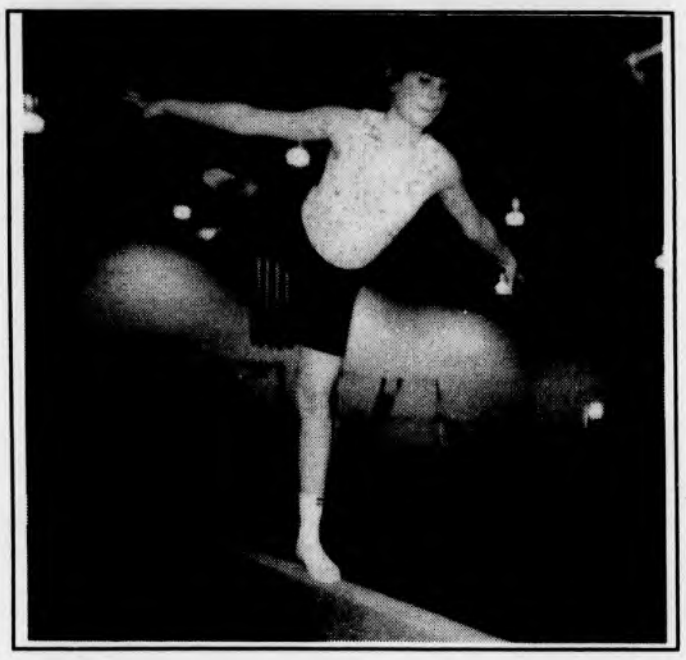
Hettstrom, competing as a member of the Cohasset Community Center, finished fourth in the all-around category. She placed fifth on the uneven bars, tied for fourth on the balance beam with teammate Julie Smith and sixth in the floor exercise.

Jodi Colwill won the vault and Kristin Reynolds finished fifth.

Several of the girls moved up a notch in the rankings with strong, overall scores.

Megan Pratt's performance was good enough to move her from the the sixth to seventh level. Five other Cohasset gymnasts — Erica Hettstrom, Colwill, Smith, Tara Hettstom and Caitlan Flint all entered level six with their performances. There are 10 levels in femal gymnastics.

The eight-member team had to score at least a 30 to qualify for the sectional meet.



Level 5 State Qualifier Erica Hettsrom

Lauren Genovese, Kerry Dwyer and Siobhan Hart-Kelly all performed well for the Cohasset squad.

Local residents will be able to catch the team in action at the community center during a May 7 competition. The events begin at 7 p.m.

Former Abington cross-country and track standout Erik Pugh has been working for The Alamosa News while majoring in English — with a concentration in Journalism — at Adams State College in Colorado.

Pugh, who will be graduating on May 8, had his education and running put on hold when he was sent to Iraq during Operation Desert Shield and Storm as a member of the National Guard.

Pugh sustained a freak back injury while in the Mid-East after being thrown from a truck following the liberation of Kuwait. His back is still stiff, but he has resumed jogging and biking.

During his work for the school newspaper, Pugh wrote an excellent feature article on eight-time U.S. Cross-Country champion Pat Porter, which delved extensively into his training and race strategy. He also showed his range by reviewing plays, musical events and taking his own photographs.

Pugh plans to stay in the Alamosa area in hopes of landing a full-time job writing sports for a daily newspaper, following graduation. Too bad too. There's a certain local sports department that would love to have him aboard its staff.

Congratulations to the Scituate High baseball team which won its first game of the year against Hull and then went on to defeat Norton. The two wins may not sound like a big deal but last season the Sailors went a less than sparkling 0-20.

This year under new head coach Vin Gilarde the Sailors have a new attitude and have jumped out to a great start.

Hey, if the Red Sox can defy everyone's expectations and compete for the pennant, why not Scituate. Rah-rah, let's go Sailors.

All Paws comes to the rescue for Cohasset couple

"They are nice people," Lewis said. She has made periodic trips to the couple's house since last week to check on their own animals.

"I brought them quite a bit of food and medicine (for the animals)," she said. Lewis said she hopes the cats can be placed in private homes.

The Cohasset woman said they amassed their brood after years of picking up strays.

"The first one was at the town dump. The poor little thing was left," she said. Included in the animals the the couple has cared for over the years have been a skunk and raccoon.

As word spread, the woman said, people began to leave strays at their door.

Ironically, All Paws was founded last year from similar events.

Lewis, who owns the Kresslingham Kennels at 261 Gardner St., said she also took in strays. She said it got to a point where she needed outside help.

Now, the group has non-profit status and is regularly called by animal officers to take in animals that would otherwise be put to sleep.

In fact, on the day the Mariner visited Lewis and All Paws Rescue Secretary Robyn Service, they were bottle feeding six-day-old labrador puppies.

"They were abandoned in the snow in a trash bag," Service said. Lewis added that Hingham's animal control officer had called All Paws Tuesday morning when he discovered the animals.

"They have to be bottle-fed every two hours — it's not an easy task," she said. Add to that the job of caring for the dozens of cats and dogs, and several sheep. Lewis said All Paws is more that a full-time job.

"We run the country veterinary clinic here," she said half-joking.

Compassion, however, for the animals costs the organization, Lewis said.

"Veterinary expenses for these 40 cats, including spay and neuter costs, will run about $5,000," Lewis said.

Lewis said All Paws will hold a yard sale May 23 to raise money to pay for the pets. Any donations to All Paws would be appreciated.

Black Rock clean up

There will be a clean-up day at Black Rock Beach Saturday, May 1. Please meet at 9:30 a.m. to help friends and neighbors make the beach a pleasant place for everyone this summer.

Call Lori Merliss at 383-0232 for further information.

Coffee House, May 7

Sue Krueger/Jim Lester of the North River Ensemble and classic ballad-oriented group, P B and J, will present the season's high point/finale at the Coffee House off the Square Friday, May 7. This event is rescheduled after being snowed-out March 7.

After running the Coffee House all year, our classically trained soloist, Sue Krueger, and flutist Jim Lester will perform folk, classical and contemporary songs with their usual elegance, wit and style.

Then, for lovers of clear, soaring classic Appalachian folk songs and Childe ballads we offer P B and J. The spellbinding, crystal-clear voice and dynamic range of Priscilla Swift (P) will once again blend with the venerable but vibrant banjo, autoharp and guitar sounds of Jon Verdun (J) and Bob Wareham (B). Those who missed these performers in the 60s and 70s have another chance this Friday — one not to be missed.

The Coffee House is at the Old Ship Church Parish House hall (ground floor), 107 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theater. Admission is $5 and profits go to the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee for Central American relief.

Call Sue Krueger (617) 545-0585 or Jim Watson (617) 749-1767.

Car wash May 1

The Appalachia Service Project is sponsoring a car wash and can drive Saturday, May 1 at the Cohasset High School parking lot. The hours of the car wash are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and the cost is $5 per vehicle.

In the event of rain, the car wash/can drive will be held Saturday, May 8; same time and location. All proceeds to benefit the Appalachian Service Project work week in Virginia at the end of June.

Shakespeare concert

A concert entitled Songs and Sonnets of Shakespeare will be presented by The Broad Cove Chorale, Margo Euler, Director at Broad Cove House in Hingham Friday evening, May 7, at 8 p.m.

The Bard's immortal words, set by composers of four centuries — including Mrs. H.H. Beach, Vaughan Williams, and Mendelssohn — will be followed by a festive reception in the music room at Broad Cove House, built by David Lincoln in 1733.

The New York Public Library has a card file listing over 200 references to songs in Shakespeare's plays: the Chorale's program focuses primarily on those songs written by Shakespeare which have been the inspiration for composers and arrangers over the years; they do not attempt to recreate the songs as they would have occurred in context. Several of the songs will be accompanied by oboe, English horn, recorder, and piano, all played by the versatile ladies of the Broad Cove Chorale.

Tickets (in advance only; no door sales) are $8, and are available at Noble's Camera, Hingham Sq., or by calling a member of the Chorale or 749-6561. Five of the Chorale's 17 members are from Cohasset: Susan Cameron and Jane Forrer, Lisa Koed, Deedee Rousseau, Ann Whiteley.

Storytelling for the family

Save the date, Sunday, May 16 at 7 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, for an imaginative night of storytelling for the whole family. Jennifer Justice, teacher of storytelling at Lesley College and winner of the Silver Apple Award from the National Education Film and Video Festival, will appear in an exciting storytelling performance to benefit the Appalachian Service Project. Tickets are $8, or $5 for children 12 and younger. Refreshments will be served after the performance. Seating is limited. To order tickets now, call Rev. Gary Ritts (383-0345) or Ami Argus (383-9325).

The Appalachian Service Project must raise $22,000 for its trip this summer to repair homes for desperately poor families in Appalachia. Under the direction of Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, 35 Cohasset High School students, four Cohasset school teachers, and 13 parents/adult advisors will travel by bus to Virginia for eight days.

Please come to the storytelling performance May 16. You can enjoy a delightful hour of entertainment and help teach our children the value of community service at the same time.

Berry basket workshop

Make a fun summer basket, great for berry picking! The berry basket is made with flat reed and is 5 1/2 inches by 5 1/2 inches. With a hand-carved oak handle, it has dyed twine and flat reed for accent with a seagrass filler strip in the rim.

Taught by Joyce Curry from Hingham, this workshop will meet on Thursday evening, May 20, at 7 p.m. at the Community Center. The cost is $25 which includes all materials. Your talents will be admired when you go home with the finished product! Please call the center at 383-0088 to register.

Abbey plant sale

Plant sale, Saturday, May 8, 9 a.m. to noon at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., (Route 228) Hingham.

For sale are perennials, ground cover, herbs, house plants, bushes, annuals, fruit and vegetable plants.

Proceeds to benefit the Monks of Glastonbury.

Local artists featured

After receiving 325 entries from artists all over New England, judges selected 125 to show in the South Shore Art Center's 1993 New England Juried Exhibition.

Kimberly Alemian of Cohasset was awarded the Grumbacher Award for her oil and acrylic painting "Carmen Suite IV".

Barbra Gurnis of Cohasset took watercolor's third-place honors.

Mixed-media second-place awards went to Cheryl Casey of Hingham.

Collecting honorable mention in oil and acrylics was Jacqueline Moores of Cohasset. Joanne Chittick of Cohasset received honorable mention in watercolor. Sue DeMichele of Cohasset won honorable mention for drawing.

The show is on display at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset through April 30.

Gallery hours are open free to the public, Tuesday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call (617) 383-9548.

Scholarship deadline set

The South Shore Art Center will accept applications April 30 and May 1 for the Margaret Marshall Dillon Memorial Fund Award. The Dillon Memorial Fund assists people who wish to return to the field of visual art after a period of extended interruption. Applicants must be members of the Art Center at the time of application, however, there are no residency or age requirements.

What follow through! That's Catherine Whoriskey urging her bowling ball down the alley during the recent Girls' Afternoon Out at the Cohasset Community Center.

A professional art jury will evaluate the potential talent of applicants as demonstrated by their submitted works of art and slides. An application form must accompany the slides or art work and should state reasons for requesting the award as well as what the applicant wishes to accomplish in the field of visual art. Final selection for the award is based on the jury's evaluation of the work and proposals submitted and will be weighted in favor of the potential demonstrated by the art work/slides (70 percent) and the proposal content (30 percent).

For more information regarding the award, please call (617) 383-9548, Tuesday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Ballet season opens

Say "good-bye" to one of the snowiest winters in years by joining the Chambers Ballet Company as they launch their sixth season with a joyful tribute to spring entitled "Rejuvenation."

Performances will take place Saturday May, 1, at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. at the Company Theatre Center for the Arts in Norwell.

Dancing to the music of Donizetti, Tchaikovsky, Vivaldi, Lloyd Webber and others, this vibrant company exquisitely blends classical ballet, jazz and modern dance into a celebration of remembrance, hope and renewal. Selections include "Gospel," a rising, uplifting spiritual first performed by the company in 1988, but not seen since; "Requiem," an awe-inspiring personal tribute set to the sounds of Andrew Lloyd Webber; and the premiere of a brand new piece entitled "Future Love Paradise," a modern selection that explores the journey of individual discovery and personal identity.

The gala performance at 7:30 p.m. features a champagne reception following the production. Tickets purchased in advance for the matinee and evening (performance only) productions are $12.50 for adults and $10 for students/seniors. Gala tickets (advance only) are $17.50 for adults and $15 for students/seniors. If purchased at the door, tickets are $15 for adults and $12.50 for students/seniors.

Tickets are available at the Company Theatre Box Office in Norwell, (617) 871-2787. For more information, call (617) 986-2787.

Youths' Advocacy Day

The Cohasset Community Center is coordinating Cohasset's participation in the 9th Annual Children's and Youths' Advocacy Day, May 6, at the State House.

Children and youths from across the state will attend to present their issues to the State legislature.

The participants will learn about basic legislative process and effective advocacy techniques.

This is an excellent opportunity for any group in town that is youth-oriented to learn about the legislative process and to network with other youth groups to share ideas and goals.

Any organization in town who is interested in further information and/or would like to attend the first meeting should contact Rhonda Myers at the Community Center at 383-0088. The trip May 6 will probably be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Bus transportation will be provided.

Art Center scholarships

The South Shore Arts Center will accept applications on April 30 and May 1 from high school seniors for two college scholarships. Applicants should submit required materials to the Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd. on Friday, April 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, May 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

High school seniors who have been accepted to an accredited art school may apply for the Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship and the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship. The students must deliver a portfolio, the name of the accredited school to which they are accepted, and a brief artist's statement to the Art Center on April 30 or May 1. A professional art jury will evaluate the portfolios and select the scholarship winners.

For more information, please call the art center at 383-9548.

Drama student picked

Kevin O'Donnell of Cohasset High School was named to the 1993 Boston Globe State High School Drama Festival All-Star Cast for his outstanding performance as Chris in "Act Three, Scene Five" by Terry Ortwein.

A total of 42 students from 15 participating finalist schools were named to the All-Star cast or awarded technical merit achievement honors during the festival awards ceremony Saturday, March 27, at John Hancock Hall in Boston. The drama troupes performed for a panel of judges consisting of dramatic arts professionals during the weekend of March 25-27.

The State High School Drama Festival, now in its 62nd year, is open to all public, private and parochial high school students in grades 9-12 throughout the Commonwealth and is sponsored annually by The Boston Globe and the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild, Inc.

Mathematicians excel

Cohasset High School was represented by the following seventh grade students in the fifth and final meet of the Continental Mathematics League, the Pythagorean division: Christopher Laas, Katie Buckley, Justin McNamara, Matt Lewis, Lindy Holway, and Josh Flanagan.

Christopher Laas is the individual leading scorer.

In the Continental Mathematics League, Euclidean division, we were represented by: Megan Conley, Brooke Heilner, Amanda Gontarz, Patrick Hurley, Abigail Kornet, and Elisabeth Kidder. The leading individual scorer is Amanda Gontarz.

B.C. High exam given

Boston College High School, The Jesuit High School of Boston, 150 Morrissey Blvd., Dorchester, will administer its transfer examination Saturday, May 1, at 9 a.m. to interested students seeking admission to the 10th or 11th grade.

Any late applicants to the freshman class may also sit for this exam. Registration for the transfer exam can be made by calling B. C. High to request the materials. The test fee is $15.

For further information about the test or about the transfer procedure, call Richard Gill in the Admissions office at 436-3900, Ext. 32 or 76.

Dry summer for Olde Salt House . . .

take-out operation but an eat-in family restaurant.

Eisenstadt said customers would not come to the Olde Salt House to buy beer for their boats.

"Why come to us and buy a 12 oz. beer for $2.25 when you can get a six pack at the liquor store for $4.65?" he asked.

"..We're not a booze joint, not a gin mill."

Eisenstadt also said he would hire a person to be outside on the patio at all times to make sure alcohol doesn't leave the premises.

In December, Eisenstadt asked the board to postpone the continuation of the hearing until he straightened out some matters with the sewer commission.

When an establishment applies for a license, various town boards and officials must sign off. Eisenstadt's application for a liquor license brought the sewer commission into the picture. Commissioners said the Olde Salt House was using more water than its allocation under state sewer restrictions for Cohasset.

The sewer commission said it thought serving beer and wine would increase the establishment's water usage.

Although Eisenstadt disputed the sewer commission's findings, he will install a 2,000 gallon holding tank and grease trap for effluent, plans which met with commissioners' approval.

Eisenstadt also agreed not to operate the fuel dock at the site until the oil company that installed the curre[illegible] system installs a standpipe which meets the fire ch[illegible] specifications.

spend $4,000 for repairs if the courts needed to be totally redone.

Jane O. Goedecke said she'd spoken to Athletic Director Clark Chatterton who said the tennis season still has five weeks to run.

"We need to make a determination if it's hard to use the courts or unsafe to use them," she said.

The board decided to ask Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield and Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle to see if the courts need to be redone entirely. The school department will get estimates of what it would cost to rebuild the courts, Doyon said.

Selectmen voted to ask for a transfer of $2,000 to cover half the cost of stop-gap repair to the courts.

Doyon said the patching would address safety concerns but the issue is — how long the patching will hold before the courts need to be redone.

Four hurt as car rams house . . .

Hull fire departments responded to the scene after a witness pulled the alarm box which is on line in the three towns.

Cohasset fire department used the "Jaws of Life" to extricate two of the victims who were trapped in the vehicle. The other two victims were outside the car, Silvia said.

Ranson and Sandanato were transported by ambulance to the parking lot at the Metropolitan Police Station on Nantasket Avenue which served as a landing area for the helicopter.

Sgt. Jackson said Plante's house had a near miss six months ago when the picket fence and hydrant on Plante's property were taken down in another accident.

Sexual harassment in workplace alleged

Two former employees of Victoria's in Tedeschi Plaza have accused the restaurant's manager of sexual harassment in the workplace.

Peter Kostopoulous, 27, of Cambridge was arraigned Tuesday in Quincy District Court and charged with two counts of indecent assault and battery; two counts of assault and battery; and threats to do bodily harm, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Kostopoulous is also part-owner of the corporation PKCP, Inc., along with Chris Petrides, which is doing business as Victoria's.

Jackson said Kostopoulous pled innocent to the charges. He will appear at a pre-trial conference regarding the charges August 3.

Jackson explained that the alleged victims are both female and are no longer working at the restaurant.

Kostopoulous and Petrides bought the restaurant from Victoria Forman last fall. Selectmen approved the transfer of the wine and malt beverage license to Kostopoulous at their board meeting Nov. 30.

Spensley Chevrolet may get second life

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The clock is ticking for Spensley Chevrolet: a May 13 foreclosure auction is set for the Route 3A car dealership.

However, the owner of Cohasset Plaza — which contains the Super Stop and Shop — may stave off the liquidation proceedings.

Donald E. Staszko has agreed to buy the dealership and surrounding property under the owners' jurisdiction, and provide financing for a total package price of $1.6 million.

Spensley Chevrolet owes $1.7 million to South Shore Bank, Bay Bank and Quincy Savings Bank. South Shore Bank began foreclosure proceedings last year.

Under the purchase/finance arrangement, the dealership would continue to operate and lease the property back from Staszko.

However, the Bankruptcy Court and Spensley's creditors must approve the arrangement in order for the dealership to avoid a foreclosure auction.

Gary D. Thomas, Spensley's attorney, said he doesn't expect any problems.

"I'm quite confident this will be accepted," Thomas said. "Mr. Staszko has committed $1.6 million to the deal."

According to the terms of the purchase and sale agreement, Staszko will pay $900,000 for the dealership and the dealership property. In addition, he will pay another $300,000 for property behind the dealership which is also controlled by Spensley owners Lloyd and Geoffrey Spensley.

Lastly, Staszko has offered to pay $400,000 to the banks, which Spensley Chevrolet will repay.

The voice of North Cohasset remembered by congregants

By Mary Ford

"We are here to celebrate the beautiful life of Arthur Lean Clark. We cannot look at this life with all its accomplishments without feeling a certain sense of pride that he was our friend, that we knew him."

— Stephen Hall, pastor of Beechwood Congregational Church

There was no doubt Sunday that the late Arthur Lean Clark left Cohasset a better place than he found it.

And although they may not realize it, a new generation of Cohasseters has the benefit of an abundant water supply and full-time executive support at town hall — among many other advantages — thanks to Clark.

Clark, 85, passed away April 25 in Concord, New Hampshire where he owned a summer home for 20 years. He and his wife, Eunice, became year-round Concord residents nine years ago.

The Beechwood Congregational Church Sunday was filled to overflowing with Cohasseters who came

Ambulance run area curbed, fees hiked

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Town hall was a microcosm of an issue that's plaguing the nation Monday night: the high cost of healthcare.

Selectmen decided on a tough new ambulance transport policy that limits Cohasset's service to medical emergencies to save money and to ensure optimum availability of the town's ambulance service.

And the board approved hiking the ambulance fees by more than 60 percent to help subsidize the limited service.

The board was far from unanimous in both decisions.

In a minority opinion, Selectmen Rocco F. Laugelle and Michael H. Sullivan wanted more leeway in the ambulance policy and said the fee increase was too high.

They were out voted.

So from now on, ambulance transportation will be

Civil Service issues

The state's Civil Service rules are perplexing to the town's selectmen who are not in agreement in their interpretation of the system which is supposed to remove any bias from the hiring process.

The town recently filled an open patrolman's spot after requesting the local preference list from civil service. A local preference list is supposed to contain only names of those who were residents of the town at the time they took the test.

Under civil service rules the town is obligated to choose one of the top three candidates on the list received. And if they don't choose the first person on the list, they have to explain to the Civil Service Commission why they chose number two or three, and not why they didn't pick number one.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle nominated Richard Abbadessa of Cohasset to fill the spot although Abbadessa was listed third on the local preference list which means he had the third highest score of the candidates on the civil service test. Abbadessa's nomination failed in a 2-3 vote. Selectmen Laugelle and Merle S. Brown voted to appoint Abbadessa. The board then unanimously approved the appointment of Jeffrey Treanor of Cohasset who had the highest score on the test.

Selectmen said both men were strong candidates.

In a telephone interview, Chief Brian W. Noonan said he would have been happy with either one.

Abbadessa may get the nod for the next patrolman's spot which will open up once a current police officer is promoted to sergeant. Applicants for sergeant must take a civil service exam, one for perspective sergeants, and the one who scores the highest on that test is usually picked. The sergeants' list can be limited to current Cohasset police officers, Noonan explained.

Patrolman applicant Christopher E. Drown, who lives in Pembroke and has never lived in Cohasset, was number two on the local preference list Cohasset received for the patrolman vacancy.

Selectmen could not explain why Drown was on the list and plan to challenge his placement if his name appears again when they request a local preference list to fill the next opening.

It's also not clear why the town must wait to promote a patrolman to sergeant before hiring another police officer.

One explanation offered Monday was that the town has four authorized sergeants and 13 authorized patrolmen — so a patrolman has to be promoted to sergeant to open up the vacancy.

That explanation was challenged by Robert V. Davenport who said at the meeting that the number of people in each position was irrelevant.

"The town has 17 or 18 police officers who could all be sergeants," he said. "I cannot totally believe you have to promote someone to sergeant before asking for the list again."

cohasset's week

Lubitz steps down

Edward J. Lubitz of Red Gate Lane has resigned from the zoning board of appeals.

In a letter to selectmen, Lubitz said he enjoyed the years he spent with the board and was stepping down due to personal and family commitments.

Boards reorganize

Richard P. Barrow has been re-elected as chairman of the recreation commission. Stephen C. Endris is vice-chairman and James E. Carroll is secretary.

Selectmen gave Endris and Carroll special municipal employee status Monday. Both men required special municipal status to preclude conflicts of interest between their elected position and part-time work and/or contracts with the commission.

Endris is a past president, current member and referee of the Cohasset Soccer Club, which is contracted by the recreation commission to operate fall recreational soccer leagues. Carroll was re-appointed at the commission's December 1992 meeting to the position of playground program director for the summer of 1993.

The sewer commission has re-elected Edward M. Guild as chairman, R. Gary Vanderweil as vice-chairman, and Henry A. Rattenbury as clerk.

Interviews held

Selectmen interviewed town fishermen Manuel Salvador and Paul Figueiredo for an opening on the harbor committee Monday.

It was not clear if there was a break down in communication because three other candidates Herbert Jason, Matthew Marr, and Scott Herzog did not appear for their interviews.

The board decided to determine if the three missing candidates had received telephone messages left for them and if not to give them the opportunity to be interviewed at the board's next meeting, Monday May 17.

Salvador, a lobsterman for 25 years, said he would like to serve on the committee because he was concerned about pollution issues that affect the harbor.

Figueiredo said he felt the eventual appointee should be a full-time fisherman. He said he'd like to see a launching rack for storage of smaller boats on the newly purchased Hagerty property which might get some people off the waiting list for harbor moorings.

Local top scorer gets nod as newest police officer

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

For the past three years Jeffrey Treanor has taken every test available and gone on dozens of interviews in his quest to become a police officer.

"I've been all over the east coast from Florida to Maine," says the determined 25-year-old.

The Mariner caught newest police recruit Jeff Treanor hard at work on a carpentry project in Cohasset this week.

But ironically, the Cohasset native only had to go down the street for the interview of his life.

After grilling Treanor and three other candidates last week, selectmen approved the appointment of Treanor as Cohasset's newest police officer on Monday.

Scoring 98 out of a possible 100 points, Treanor had the edge. His name was first on the local preference list provided by the state Civil Service Commission. The high score paid off because under Civil Service, selectmen have to appoint the top scorer unless they can come up with a reason that will wash with the Civil Service board as to why someone else on the list is more qualified.

The local preference list should contain names of candidates, who were residents of the town seeking the appointment, at the time they took the test.

Treanor, who holds a para-legal certificate from Northeastern University, said he recommends anyone who aspires to become a police officer take as many tests as they can and go on many interviews.

"After three years of taking tests all over the east coast, I have a good idea where I stand," he says.

"Trying to become a police officer is ultra-competitive," Treanor adds. "But the process prepared me for the oral interviews. It was a positive experience."

After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1986, Treanor attended Massasoit Community College and transferred to Westfield State College where he earned a bachelor of science degree in Criminal Justice. In December, Treanor earned a "para-legal" certificate from Northeastern University.

His hands-on experience includes working as a security officer at New England Baptist Hospital and as a summer police officer in Barnstable, which gave him the best training.

"It reaffirmed my belief that what I was doing no classroom could have taught.

"We were sent to a mini-academy, given a gun, and sent on the street," he recalls.

Treanor's goals include reaching out to Cohasset youth. He'd like to be involved with drug awareness and resistance education. He also would like be involved in starting a police athletic league to help keep kids busy and improve communication between kids and cops.

"Growing up here I see why a lot of things happen — why kids might pop a tire or bust a window.

"They need something to do."

Treanor says a family friend, who is a patrolman in Dade County, Florida, inspired him to become a police officer.

"He showed me the humanistic side of the job," he recalls.

And Treanor sees "the humanistic" side of the job as the key to success as a policeman in a small town like Cohasset.

"Most of the job is the unreported action — the dealing with people, the social service aspect," he explains. "That appeals to me. I know the town and the people."

After 17-weeks at the police academy for training set for this summer, Treanor should be on the streets by Halloween.

In the meantime, Treanor is doing carpentry work and looking forward to the day he wears Cohasset blues full-time.

"I believe in treating people like you would treat yourself," he says. "I have no skeletons in my closet. I'm very honest and forthright."

(Tennis) ball is now in the town's court

The town acquired some 'new' tennis courts Monday night.

In a majority vote, selectmen decided the town should take over maintenance of the crack-riddled tennis courts at the high school. Until the vote, the courts were anchored in no-man's land.

The issue of just who had jurisdiction over the courts — the schools or the town — was not resolved because two different town maps contain conflicting information. So after considerable discussion the board claimed the courts for the town.

"No one has ever taken full responsibility and the bottom line is it needs attention," Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said.

Last week selectmen accepted the school department's offer to split the $4,000 cost of providing stop-gap repairs to the courts, which include filling cracks and painting the lines.

Sullivan pointed out the town actually has access to the courts more than the schools which use them during the high school tennis season in May and June.

"So the majority of the time, the rest of the town is utilizing them," he said.

Sullivan suggested the town take control of the courts now and put an article before the voters at the next town meeting asking for money to resurface the courts.

"They are a disgrace to the town. Someone should take responsibility to move forward and forget the past," Sullivan said.

"The whole place looks like a bomb hit it," he added.

The voice of North Cohasset remembered to pay homage to a man they respected.

"He was recognized as the voice of North Cohasset," said Gerard Keating who spoke at the memorial service. Keating, retired Cohasset postmaster, fondly recalled serving at Clark's testimonial dinner in the early 80s which recognized his service to the town.

"It is not only a privilege but an honor to recognize the outstanding contributions of Arthur to his beloved community," Keating said.

Clark was born in Cohasset and attended local schools and trade schools in Boston and Quincy. He was the retired owner of Clark Plumbing and Heating Co.

In 1937, Clark was elected to the school board on which he served for 12 years, three as chairman. He served on the school building committee from 1945 until 1953; and served on the advisory committee for six years in the 1950s.

In 1964, Clark was elected to the water commission. And in 1967, he was elected to the board of selectmen where he served until 1981. He also served on the board of assessors and the board of public welfare.

Under Clark's watch, the town installed a new municipal standpipe; 12-in. water main from Beechwood to Lower King St. along Route 3A; built a sewage treatment plant; and installed a booster pump on Jerusalem Rd.

As a selectman, Clark went to Washington, D.C. to lobby for a $1 million federal grant which helped pay for a new water treatment plant and development of the Lily Pond reservoir.

He sponsored low-cost housing for the elderly and in February of 1978 was designated as the town's disaster agent following the Blizzard of '78. Cohasset was the second town in the state to have its plans approved by the federal government.

In 1980, Clark was able to obtain $15,000 for the town from the Army Corps of Engineers. The money was left over from a Cohasset Harbor dredging project in 1968.

Clark also did the ground work for the establishment of the position of executive secretary at town hall. That job is now held by Gregory Doyon.

"In addition to the above, Arthur somehow found time to serve in the Rotary Club, as a trustee and treasurer of the North Cohasset Library; and as a trustee of the Lothrup Historical House

"And for years, Arthur was a call firefighter," Keating said.

"New schools, new reservoir, new water plant, new standpipe, new water main, establishment of executive secretary position..

"Arthur's name is synonymous with growth, change, and progress," he said.

"Arthur you have done a ton of good work. We thank you, we salute you, and may you rest in peace."

Clark's daughter Elizabeth Clark Vafides of Concord, N.H., said her father was a man of character and integrity.

"He set an example for us in the way he led his life," she said.

"One of his grandsons said 'Grampa was the real thing,' " Vafides recalled.

"He was not capable of lying. He was true man of his word. He respected his neighbor and fellow man," she said.

Vafides said when her father passed away the sky was dark and overcast and the weather was drizzly.

Arthur Clark remembered. . .

"But for a moment after his death, the clouds parted and the sun shone brightly for a few moments," she said.

"We knew the Lord had welcomed Dad into his heavenly home with the rest of the angels."

The Rev. Hall called on everyone to continue what Clark started.

"In today's world, there's only one way to honor a life like this.

"Go forward and try to make this a better world. The way he tried to make it," he said.

"Arthur is a symbol of inspiration for a job very well done."

In addition to his wife and daughter, Clark leaves three sons, James A. Clark and Donald E. Clark, both of Hingham, and Robert C. Clark of Braintree; two sisters, Mary Whelton of Wethersfield, Conn. and Christine Cornish of Thurmont, Md.; ten grandchildren; ten great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

cohasset's week

Dickson is appointed

Clifford Dickson is the town's new shellfish constable. He served as assistant shellfish constable under Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, who will now take on the assistant's job.

Dickson, who is the steward at the yacht club, will receive a stipend of $500 and $250 for expenses.

Laugelle enthusiastically nominated Dickson for the post.

"He knows the harbor and Scituate waters," Laugelle said.

Bassings Beach flats will fall under his jurisdiction although the beach is actually part of Scituate. Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained Cohasset law enforcement officials have jurisdiction there under a special act of the legislature.

Dickson got high marks from Selectman Jane O. Goedecke.

"He's an excellent choice. I'm glad he wants the job," she said.

Parmenter is reappointed

Selectmen reappointed Dorothea Parmenter, 60 Reservoir Rd., as Registrar of Voters.

The names of Douglas Peck, 63 Windy Hill Rd., and Juliette Guild, 365 Jerusalem Rd. were also submitted for consideration in accordance with the statutes by the Republican Town Committee. Under state law, the board of registrars is evenly split between members of the Republican and Democratic town committees, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

THE OPEN LISTING

QUESTION: With an "open" listing, you can list property with many Realtors and pay only the one who sells it. What do you think?

ANSWER: As the name implies, the "open" listing is open to everyone to sell including the owner. You pay a commission only to the Realtor who sells the property.

It sounds good on paper — but, frankly, it's the most ineffective arrangement to make if you REALLY want to sell your home in a reasonable time and expect the Realtor's full expenditure of time and advertising money. At any juncture, the Realtor can lose the sale to another Realtor or to the owner himself.

❑ Great news this week...Merle Brown is recovering nicely from his recent surgery and will be back in his selectman's chair in a few weeks. Keep up the good work, Merle, everyone misses you and is rooting for your continued speedy recovery!

❑ The Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health in cooperation with the Council on Aging present their annual Health Fair today, and they certainly do an admirable job! They cover every facet of health, from cancer to diabetes, to eye care, to glaucoma to cholesterol...on and on! Healthy snacks were donated by Stop and Shop, Sea and Cheese and Dunkin' Donuts. The Chart House contributed a dinner for two and Buttonwood Book Store a $25 gift certificate. The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee is taking part as did the Cohasset Fire Department. As you can see, it was a group effort, and a most worthy one. Congratulations!

❑ The Emmanuel College Alumnae Association invites all Cohasset Alumnae to return to the college to celebrate Alumnae Weekend, May 21-23.

The weekend provides alumnae with the opportunity to gather with classmates, renew their friendships, reminisce about the past, and see and learn more about Emmanuel today. Weekend activities include a walking tour of the Fenway, a Filene's Basement shopping spree, a cookout with the Dixieland Cavaliers, and a reunion class parade.

For more information about Alumnae Weekend 1993, call the Emmanuel College office of alumnae affairs at (617) 735-9946.

❑ In recognition of her outstanding scholastic performance at Boston University School of Management, Tara Volungis was recently invited to become a member of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national honorary society for students of business and management.

Tara, a junior, also made dean's list for the first semester. Way to go, Tara!

Lee Androski (right) and Lee Drew (left) of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset attend an orientation meeting recently at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston to plan for annual "Art in Bloom" festival May 4-6 at the museum. The festival celebrates flower arranging as an art form.

❑ Spring Honors' Weekend was held recently at Nichols College, and Suzanne Kecskemety received the Student Government Association Officer Award; the Freshman Seminar Teacher Assistant Award; the Contributed Most to the Mayor's Council Award; and the Green Key Award.

Suzanne is a senior majoring in public administration at Nichols. She is the daughter of Jack and Susan Kecskemety of 7 Cushing Road, and graduated from CHS. Spring Honors Weekend recognizes the academic and athletic accomplishments and leadership of Nichols students, as well as their participation in various clubs and organizations on campus. We certainly can see that Suzanne shines at Nichols!

Congratulations!

❑ Remember when we told you that Greg Derr, former photographer for the Mariner (now for the Patriot Ledger), was in a pistol shooting World Cup shooting championship competition?

Well, Greg finished sixth in Seoul, Korea, competing for the U.S. team. Greg fired 576 out of 600 possible points in the men's air pistol match. In air pistol competition, athletes fire lead pellets from air or gas-powered guns at targets 10 meters down-range.

No wonder he takes so many great pictures; he can't miss!

❑ Hats off to Polly Doggett and her efforts to bring VISN, the Vision Interfaith Satellite Network, or ACT, American Christian Television to communities south of Boston. She states that the network's multi-faith programming is informative and necessary in a nation where intolerance is on the rise, and that they bring a greater respect and tolerance for other faiths as well as a greater peace and understanding into your heart.

What may seem like an awesome task, we'll bet will be accomplished by Polly. She is getting a group of those who care to help her with her fight.

Good luck and God speed, Polly.

❑ Here's to a wonderful birthday for Jean Doble, who will be turning that magic age next week. Continued health and happiness to you and have a memorable day!

❑ Let us end by wishing all of you Mothers a very wonderful Mother's Day, surrounded by the gift of love with all that love you. A nice, sunny day would be a real bonus, right?

❑ That's the news from here for this week; call me with yours (don't forget).

garden news

Amateur gardeners'

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset meet Tuesday, May 18 at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Lynn Eisenhauer with Mrs. Ginni Nast assisting as co-hostess.

The program, entitled "Language of Flowers" will be presented by Mrs. Fran Merkle.

At their recent annual meeting, Mrs. Betty Madden, president, extended appreciation and thanks to the officers, chairmen of the committees and members for their co-operation and efforts in making the past year a successful one.

Officers elected for the coming year are: President, Mrs. Betty Madden; Vice-President, Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos; Treasurer, Mrs. Doris Flint; Recording Secretaries, Mrs. Isabel Wilson and Mrs. Ginni Nast; Corresponding Secretary, Aylsa Goodrich.

Gardener recognized

Mary Hickey, past president of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, recently received the South Shore District Service Award at the annual meeting in Canton.

Hickey has been very active in her own club and has served as South Shore District Director and first vice president of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

She is accredited National Council flower show judge and holds her Master Judge certification. She continues to be a tremendous asset to her club and to the Federation.

This month, Hickey starts a three-year term as director on the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts board.

The spring brunch and annual meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be held at the Chart House May 25 at 10:30 a.m. A special musical program will be presented by Cohasset High School students. Babysitting will be available. Tickets may be obtained until May 18.

For more information, please call Karen Kirkendall at 383-0464.

Plant sale Saturday

Saturday, May 8, 9 a.m. to noon, a large selection of plants are for sale on the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., (Route 228) in Hingham.

Perennials, ground cover, herbs, house plants, and some bushes, annuals, fruit and vegetable plants will be on sale. Plants are all being donated from local private gardens in the Hingham-Cohasset area; many will be divisions of specimens grown in the Abbey gardens. Seedlings to mature plant divisions will be available to tempt local gardeners at our first plant sale.

Proceeds will be donated to the Benedictine Monks of Glastonbury Abbey.

Something in common

This is my first year on the receiving end of Mother's Day.

Since becoming a mother, I have discovered why there are so few first-hand accounts written about the experience.

As someone who has kept journals since about age 9 - and written most faithfully during times of turmoil - I expected to do a lot of writing during my 10-week leave of absence. Instead, I found myself unable to get a word out, and spending what little free time I had reading every "how to" book I could find about babies.

With Mother's Day just around the corner, I have finally decided to put my thoughts on paper. Here is some of what I have learned since October 13, 1992.

•Knowing the sex and name of your baby before the delivery does not reduce the amount of expectation involved. My mother didn't really want to know I was expecting a boy. She wondered what there would be to announce on the Big Day. But she found out that saying "Kyle is here" over the telephone was no less exciting than announcing "It's a boy."

•After experiencing childbirth, I have now joined the realm of women with a "labor story" to tell. Every mother has one, but every mother also knows there's much more to the truth than she'll ever let on.

•Being a mother is almost like joining a club. Sharing the experience is important, and brings us closer to our own mothers. Suddenly, we have a lot in common.

•Bonding does not always occur in the delivery room. For me, bonding occurred while I was pregnant, then suffered a lapse in the delivery room, but became stronger each day after.

•The first two weeks are a honeymoon period in some ways. The baby seems to know that mother is not up to putting up with any nonsense (or is just as tired himself). But that can change...colic usually strikes at about 2-3 weeks old, much to my surprise and dismay.

•Lots of people have not read the research showing babies cannot be spoiled by too much attention. I was shocked to hear others use the "S" word so early in my son's life. What will the future bring?

•Who is it perpetuating this myth of babies sleeping constantly?

•Going back to work is difficult after having a small being attached to you for 10 weeks. But it's not that hard...I cried on the way to work the first day, called home frequently to see how my husband was doing for the next few weeks, then somehow reached the point where more often than not, he calls me.

•For a first-time parent, it is truly amazing to see how early in life a child asserts his personality. At 6 months, he insists on holding the spoon to feed himself, has a favorite blanket and toys, laughs only at what he thinks is funny, and sometimes just wants to be left alone.

•Having a child of your own brings a new awareness of children in general - whatever their age. When I see a rambunctious six year old or a teenager with a bad attitude, I wonder WHAT WILL I DO IF KYLE IS LIKE THAT? When I instead meet a well-spoken young man or a thoughtful 8-year-old, I think how lucky his parents must feel.

•As a mother of an infant, I have yet to know what it's like to be a mother of a toddler, a preschooler, a grade school child, a pre-adolescent, adolescent, or young adult...There'a a lot to this parenthood thing. But I expect what I hear is true. It doesn't get easier with each new stage, just well different.

•What I do know is there's nothing like coming home to a smiling 5 or 6-month-old. What a way to be greeted! We could all learn something from these little people - so new to the world yet completely versed in how to win over a mother's heart.

HAPPY MOTHERS DAY. - Sunday, May 9, 1993.

Daffodil Days sets a new record

Local volunteers, residents and businesses helped the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society sell over 120,000 daffodils and raise a record $61,000 during the recent Daffodil Days program in support of the Society's program of information, education and service in nine South Shore communities.

Cohasset turned in receipts of $1,175 from the sale of these "first flowers of Spring" that stand as a symbol of the increasing hope made possible for cancer patients by research sponsored by the Cancer Society.

"Once again people responded wonderfully and I want to thank the volunteers, residents and business in Cohasset who helped make it possible," Pauline Sweeney, long-time co-chair of the Daffodil Days program of the Unit, said. "Even in these difficult times and with a snow storm to make things more difficult, the South Shore again set a record and led all 40 Cancer Society units in the State."

The South Shore Unit, with an area office in Stoughton, serves the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham,Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth. Volunteers carry out programs of professional education, referral and transportation in these towns.

Mrs. Sweeney singled out for special commendation as major contributors, Cohasset Savings Bank, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and Cohasset Junior-Senior High School where Mike Gill headed the effort. She also cited Al Odermatt, Mary Donovan and Ozzie Ingram for delivery service and thanked the Community Center for serving as a pick-up site.

Democratic committee news

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee spent its most recent meeting on reorganization. Elected to serve for the current year were Chartis Langmaid, Chairman; Randy Nash, Vice-Chairman; Karen Corcoran, Secretary; and Ronnie McMorus, Treasurer.

Members of the committee participated in a forum on health care reform this past Saturday at the Weymouth Jr. High School. Congressman Gerry Studds was present and heard the public present its views on a national health care program.

Local Democrats also participated in Co-op 8's Sunday brunch at the Barker Tavern in Scituate. Featured speaker was State Senator Michael J. Barrett, D-Cambridge and candidate for governor.

The group will meet again in May to determine the winner of the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship. The Cohasset High School senior who wrote the best essay on community service and its benefits will be announced.

Growing up on Government Island

By Molly (Tornberg) Orr
St. Petersburg Florida

(Part 2)

"My interest in the restoration (of the Lightkeepers House) is keen and personal. My father, Per F. Tornberg, was keeper of Minot Light from 1922 until he was transferred to Annisquam in 1936. I lived on the Island from 1922 until 1934 when I graduated from high school. Part of my heart is still on the Island and I treasure the memories of the wonderful life I had there."

Into the four bedrooms were tucked Mother and Dad and five children. Allan, at that time, was in a special year-round school and only spent summer holidays at home. A child's memory of space is different from an adult's. Every bedroom seemed spacious and adequate to me. I am certain, now, that the only bedroom which might be called spacious was my parents' room. It was on the front of the house and had a large window that allowed a spectacular view of the harbor and the lighthouse. The other three rooms had enough floor space to accommodate a double bed, a chest of drawers, and a chair. In the bedroom I shared with Betty, we had a delightful Victorian vanity with a framed oval mirror, which came from my Mother's home in Dundee. We had a matching tall chest of drawers. Our bed was a delicately designed iron bed painted white with fancy brass finials on each corner post. I loved my bedroom and its furnishings.

There were no closets in the childrens' rooms so Daddy attached a triangular piece of board into one corner of the room. Clothes hooks were screwed into the underside of the board. Jean fashioned cretonne curtains to hide the collections in these triangular spaces that served as closets.

I recall that the radiators were quite inadequate to heat the rooms in the winter. We slept under mountains of blankets during the cold weather.

The bathroom was directly over the kitchen. It had a radiator in it as well as a register on the floor. The heat from the kitchen stove was directed through a pipe to this register. The bathroom was always toasty warm and upon arising, we snatched our clothes and ran to this room to dress.

Our dining room had a fireplace and when it was not being used for formal meals, we used it as a study room. It was a cozy place to study. The short wave radio was in this room and as the reception gradually improved, we enjoyed the broadcasts. We only used the living room in the summer as it was too cold for comfort in the winter.

Our kitchen was large enough to have two tables and two stoves. One table was for family meals and the other was used for preparing food. The smaller stove stood in one comer. It was a three burner kerosene stove with an oven and was used for summer cooking.

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Orr's story appeared in the winter 1993 issue of Historical Highlights, the newsletter of the Cohasset Historical society.)

Lightkeepers' tours set

The Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence is open for tours each Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers' Board of Directors will have someone on-site to answer questions. Inside/outside renovations are in progress and landscaping/beautification work is beginning.

Residents are encouraged to see the progress of this community service project which is intended to make the building available to all Cohasset residents while preserving an important aspect of Cohasset's seafaring heritage.

Members of the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters, Local 2804, above, donate time to restoring the Lightkeeper's residence on Government Island. Local residents Larry Mitchell, Bill Higgins, Tom Hernan, Sr. and Jim Curley have also donated time to this important project. Local contractor, Wayne Sawchuck has been working hard with his excavator to make way for the new wall. And members of the Community Garden Club will plant flowers around the wall and patio to enhance the beauty of the residence in coming weeks.

State should consider odds before legalizing gambling

By Scott Harshbarger
Attorney General

The Governor and others have proposed and the Legislature is now considering expanding legalized gambling in Massachusetts to include video poker, keno, blackjack and, possibly, full-fledged casinos. Many of those advocating more state-sponsored gambling claim it is a painless way to generate revenue for the Commonwealth. I disagree.

I have discussed this issue with Attorneys General representing every state that has expanded gambling beyond a lottery — and there is one common warning: STOP AND THINK! I believe that expanding gambling is short-sighted, fails to assess the full costs to the Commonwealth and is bad public policy. Expanded gambling is truly a "cure" worse than the disease and it should not be implemented.

Apart from the philosophical and moral issues, the following are some of the realities that must be faced and addressed before we act:

• The further legalization of gambling will have significant costs in terms of crime for state residents. In the first year of legalized gambling alone, Atlantic City's crime rate increased 25 percent.

• If we increase state-sponsored gambling, a substantial increase in law enforcement personnel will be needed to combat corruption and larceny. Louisiana, which also has legalized video poker, has established a $1.9 million budget solely for State Police enforcement of the laws regarding gambling.

• The legalization of gambling will result in increased gambling addiction, which also results in further societal problems. Based on an eight-month, federally-funded study conducted by the Delaware Council on Gambling Problems, as much as 40 percent of white collar crime committed in the country may be related to compulsive gambling.

• Questions arise also as to what the appropriate regulatory authority should be. The Massachusetts Lottery Commission already has an established statewide regulatory system that manages the Lottery and would be the logical regulatory authority, as opposed to a new commission unfamiliar with the important task it will face.

• Any view that the further legalization of gambling will cure Massachusetts' economic and budgetary woes is misguided. With gambling in Rhode Island and Connecticut and its present consideration in Maine and New Hampshire, will any out-of-state dollars really be coming to Massachusetts? Or will video poker or keno simply transfer gambling dollars away from the Massachusetts Lottery, thereby decreasing the money currently going to cities and towns?

• Expanded gambling attempts to balance the budget on the backs of the poor and the working class. This measure will allow state government to avoid the hard choices of higher taxes or less spending. Expanded state-sponsored gambling is a budgetary bandage, while what Massachusetts needs is a long-term health plan.

Given its high social, law enforcement and economic costs, expanded gambling is the 'fool's gold' of the 1990's. Further legalization of gambling, it is not a venture to enter into lightly, if at all. Governor Weld and the Legislature must seriously consider the odds before further legalizing gambling; its costs to the citizens of the Commonwealth could far outweigh its benefits.

Kids and adults line up to help the poor

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

It's not everyone's ideal summer vacation: participants travel by bus to parts of rural Appalachia and spend their days putting up drywall, building drainage systems, and constructing outhouses for the poorest in the area.

Despite the rigors of the ten-day trip, organizer Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church said popularity of the Appalachian Service Project has soared.

"It's practically double what it was last year," he said.

A total of 54 citizens — 37 teens and 17 adults — from Cohasset will make the same pilgrimage to Applachia this summer. Last year 28 teens participated.

"Half the same adults go back every year," Ritts explained.

The Appalachia Service Project is organized nationally by the United Methodist Church. The church brings groups in from across the country to work on home repair projects in rural parts of Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. Each group contributes about a week's worth of work to the entire eight-week project.

Ritts, who organized the town's first trip to Appalachia when he arrived at Second Congregational Church in 1987, said the trip has become a spiritual necessity.

"We go down there thinking we will help them when just the opposite occurs — relative to the real meaning of life," Ritts said.

"It's something I have to do every year just to keep me in touch with what is really important."

Because the people they help in Appalachia are among the poorest in the nation, Ritts said, the emphasis is on family and relationships — not material wealth.

"They are real people-oriented," Ritts said. He added that the generosity of the people helped is also astounding.

"Sometimes there are families near the end of the month who have nothing" to eat, Ritts said. He added that as soon as the families receive any bit of food, they want to share it with the workers.

"There was one man who was raising potatoes for his family to eat — and they didn't have much to eat," Ritts said. Despite the circumstances, "the first potatoes out of the ground went to us."

Ritts said the experience has caused participants to re-evaluate their life's direction.

"One girl was in banking (at college,)" he said. "And switched to a more service-oriented career."

And last year a high school youth told Ritts the only reason he was going on the trip was to put it on his college applications.

When the week was over, the same youth told Ritts he wanted to incorporate some type of volunteer service into his career choice.

"I guarantee the kids come back different," he said. "It may be subtle, but they will be different."

Participants usually bring sleeping bags and stay in schools that are empty because of summer recess. The Applachia Service Project brings back the schools' kitchen help for the duration to cook the group's meals.

Despite sparse accommodations, it will cost $22,000 to send 54 people from Cohasset to work on the Applachia Service Project.

Ritts said each teenager contributes $100 to the trip, and each local church contributes $100 for each parishioner they send on the trip.

The remainder of the money is obtained through fund-raisers, like car-washes and "servant-for-hire" program in which Appalachian project volunteers did various chores for Cohasset residents for $5 an hour.

Those who want to contribute, or want more information on the Applachia Service Project may call Rev. Gary Ritts at 383-0345 or Ami Argus at 383-9325.

Paintings auction

Three paintings deaccessioned from the Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be offered at auction by Skinner Inc. Friday, May 14, at 7 p.m. in Boston, at The Heritage On the Garden, 63 Park Plaza.

Preview times at that location are May 12, 12 to 5 p.m.; May 13, 12 to 7 p.m.; and May 14, 12 to 6 p.m.

Illustrated catalogue #1508, Fine American and European Paintings, may be purchased for $20 ($23 by mail) by calling Skinner, Inc. at 508-779-6241. A copy of the catalogue may be viewed at the library.

The paintings and their estimated values are:

- Thomas Robinson (1835-1888), "Gentleman Farmer," $4,000-$6,000.
- Attributed to Alvan Fisher (1792-1863), "Shore Road," $10,000-$20,000. (Said to be a view of Jerusalem Road near the former Black Rock House.)
- Frank Henry Shapleigh (1842-1906), "Lake Thun," $2,500-$3,500.

The Library Trustees and the Board of Selectmen voted to dispose of these paintings at public auction, and Town Meeting voted to place the proceeds of the sale in the Library Endowment Fund. Income from the Endowment Fund is applied to the annual expenditure for books, reducing the request for tax support. The Endowment Fund presently consists of thirteen Funds named for donors or sources, and will provide $12,512 toward the library budget in the next fiscal year.

VOLUNTEERS ARE THANKED

The Friends of the Paul Pratt Library extend their thanks to the following library volunteers:

Spring library hours

Spring hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.; Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sign up to participate in SHARE

SHARE is a non-profit organization dedicated to community service and self-help, offering good food at great savings for those who participate.

SHARE participants pay $13 for the food and pledge two hours of volunteer service once a month. In return you receive 15-17 food items, good wholesome nutritious food purchased from growers and processors, with a retail value of $25-$35. SHARE has no eligibility or income requirements and is not connected in any way to any government program.

People can sign-up from 10 a.m. to noon on the following days: Thursday and Saturday (May 6 & 8) at the Cohasset Community Center; from 10 a.m. to noon Friday (May 7)) at 60 Elm St. Pick up day is from 8:30 to 10 a.m., Saturday, May 22 at the Deer Hill School.

Coffee House off the Square season finale set for May 7

Sue Krueger/Jim Lester of the North River Ensemble and classic ballad-oriented group, P B and J, will present the season's high point/finale at the Coffee House off the Square Friday, May 7.

After running the Coffee House all year, our classically trained soloist, Sue Krueger, and flutist Jim Lester will perform with their usual elegance, wit and style.

Then, for lovers of clear, soaring classic Appalachian folk songs and Childe ballads we offer P B and J. The spellbinding, crystal-clear voice and dynamic range of Priscilla Swift (P) will once again blend with the venerable but vibrant banjo, autoharp and guitar sounds of Jon Verdun (J) and Bob Wareham (B).

The Coffee House is at the Old Ship Church Parish House hall (ground floor), 107 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theater. Admission is $5 and profits go to the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee for Central American relief.

Call Sue Krueger (617) 545-0585 or Jim Watson (617) 749-1767.

A message to help South Shore businesses improve efficiency, reduce costs

To our valued commercial customers:

The current, difficult economic climate has made improving efficiency and reducing costs high priorities for virtually all businesses in our area.

That's why I want to bring your attention to a program available to all Eastern Edison's commercial and industrial customers. It's called Energy Solutions. This program identifies ways you can reduce electricity costs by improving efficiency for lighting, HVAC, motors and variable-speed drives — and provides financial incentives to you for making our recommended energy-efficiency improvements.

Savings to your business can be substantial. We pay the full cost for a complete energy survey, and provide rebates up to 70% for the installation of efficiency measures. Local businesses taking advantage of our Energy Solutions are saving thousands of dollars annually on electricity costs.

And, to save you time and effort, we coordinate the entire process, from the initial energy survey to the post-installation quality assurance inspections. It's all part of our corporate commitment to energy conservation. Using electricity wisely provides a host of benefits that help control costs, strengthen our local economy, as well as preserve natural resources. Energy efficiency works for business, our communities and the environment.

Car dealership may get second life . . .

McCauley declined to comment on whether the banks would accept the arrangement.

Staszko's attorney, Charles Humphreys, offered his assessment.

"We are not really expecting objections," he said. "This plan is made to satisfy the Spensleys, their creditors and Mr. Staszko."

Asked what Staszko's motivation for buying the property was, Humphreys said it was rooted in sound business sense.

"He considers it to be a valuable business investment."

Thomas agreed.

"I think and believe Mr. Staszko looks at this as a worthwhile investment. And crucial to this deal is the survival of Spensley Chevrolet," Thomas said.

He added that he did not know who approached whom first regarding the deal.

"All I know is he (Staszko) came on the scene at a very opportune time," Thomas said.

Humphreys agreed. "It is a creative solution to a lot of problems."

It is unclear what effect Staszko's purchase of the Spensley dealership and surrounding land would have on proposals to build a large supermarket on adjacent property in Scituate.

The construction of a supermarket on that Route 3A land could conceivably reduce the number of customers who frequent the Super Stop and Shop, also on Route 3A, which is leased from Staszko.

Leatherbee Development Company has said they want to build a supermarket on land adjacent to the dealership which includes a small tract of Cohasset land.

Robert MacPherson, a partner with Leatherbee who has been working on securing the Scituate property, said Staszko's purchase of Spensley would not change Leatherbee's plans.

"We are still negotiating on the property," he said.

MacPherson said he could not comment on Staszko's motives for buying the Spensley property.

He reiterated, however, that Staszko's purchase of Spensley Chevrolet and surrounding land would not preclude Leatherbee from pursuing development of a supermarket in adjoining Scituate.

Ambulance run area curbed, fees hiked solely to the closest medical facility which is either South Shore Hospital in Weymouth or Quincy City Hospital in Quincy. The ambulance will not transport people to Boston hospitals.

The average ambulance run to South Shore Hospital costs the town about $200. A trip to a Boston hospital costs about $900, Fire Chief John R. Nadeau explained.

Nadeau stressed that patients would not be put at risk with this new policy.

"If it's an emergency you go to a trauma center and be stabilized," he said.

The policy applies to all ambulance transport situations, including mutual aid. Mutual aid occurs when Cohasset's fire department is called to assist with an emergency in another town.

Nadeau explained that recently a citizen asked if the town ambulance could transport a family member to a nursing home rather than pay for a private ambulance.

A call for a heart attack came in at the same time the town might have been providing the nursing home run, Nadeau pointed out.

"And we've had a couple of mutual aid calls in Scituate for transportation to a Boston hospital at the request of a doctor," he added.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said the ambulance "should not be a taxi service."

But Sullivan said there should be some gray area because some hospitals might offer specialized services.

"I'm not sure we should tell our EMTs an out and out 'no' (to transport elsewhere) which might cause some harm (to the patient)," Sullivan said.

Chamber of Commerce president Robert Martin, who attended the meeting, said sometimes the town has to say no.

> 'The inability to say 'no' has caused the present crisis in the healthcare system.'
> — Bob Martin

"The inability to say 'no' has caused the present crisis in the healthcare system," he said.

Selectmen Goedecke, Martha K. Gjesteby and Merle S. Brown voted to approve the new policy.

Sullivan also opposed hiking the base ambulance fee from $125 a run to $195, the amount allowed under Medicare, a federal healthcare system.

"We'd be going up for everybody simply to get the most from the insurance companies," Sullivan said.

Goedecke said if insurance companies think $195 is a "fair" base rate and the town is only charging $125 then the higher fee is justified. Fees for oxygen will also go up and the town will also start charging for use of the defribrillator and MAST (shock-prevention trousers).

The higher fees will raise about $28,000 more per year. The actual cost of running the ambulance, when labor and maintenance costs are figured in, is about 2/5 of the fire department's total budget or $400,000. So the taxpayer, not the user, is still providing the main subsidy for the service, selectmen said.

Brown pointed out that the town's public safety committee was unanimous in its support of the higher rates.

Goedecke, Gjesteby and Brown voted in favor of the increase.

Father's legend spurs Clark in senior track and field events

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

(Second in a four-part series of local residents competing in the Senior Olympics)

Ellery Clark Jr., has always lived by the advice given to him by his former Boston Athletic Association coach, Jack Ryder.

"He told me, 'Ellery, the further one runs, the crazier he is,'" the 83-year-old Clark said of the man who coached him during the later part of the 1920s.

Distance running has never been Clark's forte, but it has turned out to be a blessing for the good-natured Cohasset resident. He has avoided injury over the years and is as competitive now as he ever was when he was a BAA member, competing in the shorter events.

Clark has focused on senior competitions and has done well for himself — collecting several medals and ribbons along the way. 1992 was very good to Clark. In eight Senior Olympic competitions he won 16 medals in events ranging from the 200- and 400-meter dashes to the longer race walks, on up to the popular 10-Kilometer (6.2 miles) distance. His longevity in athletics has been nothing short of incredible. Clark is the only member of the 1928 BAA team who is still competing.

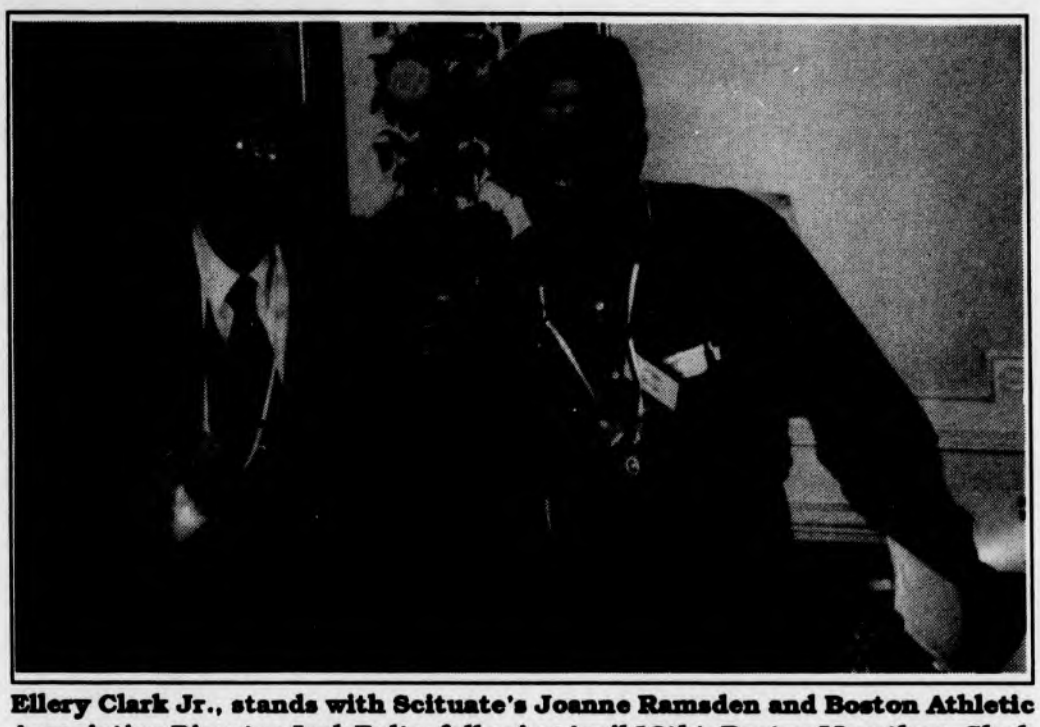
"I'm the only one active from what I call 'the old days,'" Clark said as he sat comfortably on the couch in the home of his friend, Joanne Ramsden of Scituate.

Having competed for so long, one might think Clark would not be so awed by the accomplishments of many athletes. Johnny Kelly may have matched the number of times Clark has stood poised at the starting line of a race, but few others have. There is one athlete whose accomplishments — more than anyone else — have inspired Clark to continue his exploits on the track: His father, Ellery Clark Sr.,

The elder Clark was one of the best track athletes in the world when he won both the running high and long jumps during the first modern-day Olympics, held in Athens, Greece in 1896. He was the national and world record holder in an event which resembled the 20th-century decathlon in 1897 and 1903.

Even with the success he has had over the years, Clark has never considered himself on the same athletic plateau with his dad.

"I could do about 20 percent of what he did," Clark said. "It's (track and field) more mental than anything else. Of course, a lot of good talent never hurt anyone."



Ellery Clark Jr., stands with Scituate's Joanne Ramsden and Boston Athletic Association Director Jack Fultz, following April 19th's Boston Marathon. Clark will be competing in the Senior Olympics, which begin on May 10 at Veterans Stadium in Quincy.

Clark's father was a legend in his day. In 17 years as a BAA member, he took home 63 first-, 41 second- and 29 third-place finishes. He won the high jump at the annual New York Athletic Club meet and was a four-time New England all-around champion. Probably the biggest honor bestowed on Clark, though, was his posthumous induction into the Track and Field Hall of Fame in 1991.

With the legend and memory of his father spurring him on, Clark is prepping for his seventh Senior Olympic Games at Quincy's Veterans Stadium, which run from May 10-15. If Clark comes anywhere near last year's performances he'll consider his effort a success. He took home six medals in '92 and is confident he can put together a string of strong races starting Monday. When asked if he believes he can repeat '92's showing, Clark said: "I hope so, but one can never tell in athletics."

If he doesn't match last year's performance, it won't be from a lack of training. Clark has been preparing for the games by doing easy and hard walks on alternate days. His easy days consist of two-mile workouts near his Jerusalem Road home. On the days between, Clark puts in a more strenuous training session, usually consisting of four quarter-mile repeats on the Scituate High School track.

With 86 firsts, 26 seconds and 26 thirds, he has a goal of reaching the 100-victory mark sometime next winter, hopefully at the Providence College meet. Clark looks at the Quincy games as a stepping stone on the way.

Clark admits the victories are nice, but his ultimate wish is to be one of the torch bearers at the '96 Olympic Games in Atlanta. The games are of particular sentimental value for Clark, coming on the 100th anniversary of his father's brilliant showing in Athens.

"That would be rather neat, as one might say," Clark said of the prospects of carrying the torch. "They (BAA members) were all heroes of mine and they're just as big now as they were then."

Clark believes he is a logical choice to carry the torch at the games because he is the only son of a member of the 1896 games who is still actively competing.

Track and field, though, is far from being the only area where Clark has made his mark. An avid Red Sox fan, he has written three books on the team and its history. He also wrote three books on naval war tactics and taught at Annapolis for 38 years. Clark still remained close to athletics, coaching the cross-country team during the years he spent teaching.

Clark believes he has at least two years of competition in front of him. He admits he is not sure exactly when he will retire.

"That's always a tough one," he said, when asked how long he planned to continue racing. "Hopefully through '96 anyway."

Clark could conceivably retire from racing and carry the Olympic torch, 100 years after his father's electrifying performances. One couldn't ask for a more poetic career-finale. Clark's father probably would have liked it that way.

Finally, it appears the good weather is here to stay.

For too long all we wrote about in the sports department was the weather.

This game was cancelled, that game was postponed, the other game was called off because of a hailstorm.

I was seriously considering changing my name to "Dickie".

Let's hope the weather stays warm because we don't want to see local high school athletes playing make-up games in August when they should be getting sunburned at Humarock.

Anyway, we published a list of coaches' cliches a few months back.

Now we would like to add some weather cliches we've heard as well.

"We're all in the same boat"- This is Noah reference, I guess. For those of you who don't remember, Noah was that football coach way back who stockpiled his talent after getting an advance scouting report that the weather was going to be bad. In high school lingo it means, it's raining everywhere, so everyone is in the rain. Or something like that.

"Nice day, if it don't rain"-This means the coach is optimistic that those dark grey clouds hovering over the high school are just there for decoration. If it rains, it's a bad day.

"Good day. Good day to work"- This is said by a coach on the first day the team goes outside to practice. It could be five feet of mud and a hurricane outside, but inevitably, a coach will say, "Good day, good day to work."

And of course,"It was raining cats and dogs out there"- This quote is timeless, like our columns. This means it was raining very hard. As for any sports reference, we could not find any.

Whitman-Hanson trackster Doo Rattan had a busy day for himself in the April 24, Haverhill Invitational. The senior broke the school's 27-year-old record in the long jump by six inches with his 22' 11—1/2". The 1965 record by Eric Pina was the oldest track standard at W-H.

Rattan then went on to place second in the 440, despite having to run by himself in the third heat. He finished in 52.8. Finally, he ran his fastest 440 split in the mile relay as the squad was edged by Andover, giving the North Shore squad the victory over the second-place Panthers.

The two-mile relay team of Ian Ullathorne, Matt Wisnaskas, Jim O'Sullivan and Chris Toomey also set a school record with their 8:48, second-place finish to Reading.

Look for the Panthers to be ranked among the top-10 teams in the state after finishing in front of track powers Reading, St. John's Prep and Dennis-Yarmouth in the meet.

Freshman Chris McEwan also set a meet record in the high hurdles during the Freshmen/Sophomore Meet at Xaverian High School on Saturday. McEwan's time of 16.6 was fast enough to win the sophomore race as well. Black said he'll be someone to watch in the future. With a time like that in as a freshman, there's no argument here.

Total game results in 8-1 lacrosse start

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

A team is only as strong as its weakest link. In Cohasset's lacrosse team's case, there are no weak links.

The Skippers, 8-1 on the season, have four players who've combined for 114 points and a defense that has allowed an almost unheard of 2.5 goals per game.

"If you know anything about lacrosse," said head coach Ken Ekberg, "you know that's nearly impossible."

That's not to say the work done on offense by Chris Adams (37 pts.), Doug Ellinger (28 pts.), Charlie Endris (27 pts.) and Chris Goodman (22 pts.) hasn't fueled Cohasset to victory against much bigger schools. It has. The backfield, though, has been playing with a reckless abandon that has opened up opportunities for the midfielders and forwards.

Starting with goaltender Brandon Devoe and filtering through defensemen Max Devoe, Dave Leahy, Peter Collins and Mark Sechen, the Skippers have prospered by using the sliding-man defense with the efficiency Ekberg was hoping for before the season started.

The sliding-man calls for the defensemen and midfielders to back each other up and includes a good deal of double-teaming opposing players. The defense requires a great amount of communication on the field with the players letting one another know who they are covering and which player or players are to be double-teamed.

Ekberg says the double-teaming can completely change an opponent's offensive strategy. Each team Cohasset has faced has at least one or two impact players who must be followed carefully

Cohasset Little League kicks off season with parade

The skies were overcast but the mood was far from dismal as more than 400 budding baseball stars marched in Saturday's opening day parade, which kicked off the start of the Cohasset Little League season. Teams made their way through Cohasset Village, dressed in their game caps and jerseys. The anticipation of a summer of base hits, stirring victories and competition — memories of which will last long after the final out of the season — was evident in the smiles and laughter of the kids who participated. Red Sox radio announcer Ken Coleman was on hand to wish the kids good luck in their upcoming season. The entire league was treated to a barbecue following the parade. League games began this week.

Spring Fling III horse show results listed

By Trish Cox
Special to the Mariner

The Hanover Hunt & Riding Club (HHRC) recently kicked off its 1993 horse-show season with its third Annual Spring Fling Horse Show. Geared as a warm-up show for area riders, the show, held at Briggs Stable, benefits the Histiocytosis Association of America. A contribution in the amount of $1,500 will be sent to Jeff Toughill, President of the Histiocytosis Association.

Show organizers would like to thank the more than 90 riders for their support and the club members who worked to make this popular event such a success. We are also grateful to the show's financial patrons, Alice and Ben Duffy of Hingham, and Milly Cassidy and the Boyle family, both of New York City, for their generous contributions. Special thanks to Jason Farrington of Farrington Flowers, Merchants Row Mall, Norwell, who donated his time and expertise to spruce up the clubhouse with arrays of spring flowers.

Sunny skies and cool temperatures provided the riders with ideal conditions to show their horses. Judged by David Arnold of Scituate, Rhode Island, huntseat, saddleseat and western riders competed against one another for the three championships offered. Kim Devers of Hanover won the Top Adult Rider award with Kristen Prebola and Kristen Metivier tying for Reserve Champion. The Junior Rider award was won by Kristen Chipman and Reserve went to Alexandra Peak. the Top Horse of the Day was Something Naughty, owned by Kim Devers. These winners were presented with matching leather halters and leads. Results of the show are below:

Pleasure Horse/Pony in Hand — Something Naughty, Kim Devers; Daisy Mae, Katie Kemmitt.

Lacrosse team has it all . . .

with more than one man. Denying even one of the players the ball, Ekberg says, can be the difference between victory and defeat.

"If you can take one of those kids out of the play," he explained, "it becomes disruptive and affords your defense the opportunity to come up with the ball."

The Skippers are approaching the three "pivotal" games of the season and Ekberg knows the team has to avoid penalties and concentrate through each match in order to have a chance. Austin Prep, at 8-1 and ranked 10th in the Boston Herald lacrosse poll, is first up for Cohasset. An improved Bedford, which lost a close 10-4 game to No. 1 ranked Concord-Carlisle, follows for the Skippers before they play Boston College High School.

Ekberg says Cohasset must avoid careless penalties in the three games, something they didn't do against Xaverian. The private school squad took advantage of four consecutive Skipper penalties to score a pair of goals.

"We just can't afford to do that," he said.

Once Cohasset has the three away games behind them, they can look forward to four straight home games to wrap up the season — a relief for Ekberg.

"If you look at our schedule, most of the teams we play are an hour bus trip away," he said. "That's not the best way to prepare for a lacrosse game."

Cub Scout run slated for May 10

The final part of the Presidential Physical Fitness Challenge, the one-mile run, will be held Monday, May 10 at 3 p.m. All Cubs who wish to complete the Challenge should meet at the running track on Milliken Field at that time. Runners should bring a cold water bottle (to put IN themselves and ON themselves!) and an "energy snack" (such as oranges or chocolate). All Cubs who complete the Challenge will earn a handsome badge and certificate from the President's Commission on Physical Fitness.

Community Center tennis tournament set

The community center fourth annual tennis tournament is scheduled for June 25, 26, and 27. Registrations are underway for this Round Robin Youth and Adult Tournament.

The youth tournament will be played Friday, June 25.

Adults will play on various courts in Cohasset and Scituate Saturday, June 26, with finals played Sunday, June 27.

Registration fee is $12 for youths and $30 for adults.

Entry forms are available at the community center or by calling the center at 383-0088.

Kids' summer art

Make this a creative summer for your children. The Children's Summer Creativity Workshops is offering art programs for ages five through 14 years. Classes meet once a week, for five weeks, for two hours per week, from Aug. 2 to Sep. 2.

The Morning Creativity program for ages five through 10 years, is partially held in a magical garden. Thru weekly outdoor sketching young artists drawings will be compiled in sketch book form to document each artists progress. Children will express various nature themes through creative use of clay, paint, collage, and printmaking.

The Evening Creativity programs for ages nine through 14 years, includes the following series: Artists in the Garden, Sports/Action Figures, Natures Patterns and Design, and Native American Art.

Classes are kept small to provide individual instruction. The Workshops have been developed to encourage children who enjoy the visual creative process, and who have the desire to develop their individual artistic skills.

Advance registration is now open, and is required to insure placement. For more information please call instructor Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453 .

Derby summer arts

More than 20 professional artist-teachers are making plans for the fifth year of "Summer Arts at Derby" at Derby Academy in Hingham. Students will soon be busily choosing their courses for this exciting and creative five-week program.

"Summer Arts at Derby" is a comprehensive arts program for ages eight to 15, that allows the students to explore a myriad of performing and visual arts. The staff includes professional musicians, actors, photographers, painters, sculptors, filmmakers, dancers and writers. The program also includes gymnastics, sports, cooking and newspaper.

Students have the unique opportunity of choosing their own schedules from over 50 offerings. Guest artists will also visit for special one-day workshops. Each day a noontime performance period allows students and staff to share their talents. A newspaper is printed daily, and a full-time musical production is mounted.

"Summer Arts" culminates in an Arts Festival July 30 at which students demonstrate their talents through theatre, music and dance performances, art exhibits, a gymnastics show and showings of original films and videos.

The dates of "Summer Arts at Derby" are June 28 to July 30. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Students from over 18 communities attend the program. For brochures and applications, call Thalia McMillion at 740-4766.

Allison Earon

I like to go shopping with my mom. In the summer I like to go to the beach with my mom. My mother loves me because I feed my rabbit every day after school. I love my mom because she takes me to the Strawberry Parfait and we have ice cream. I love my mom when she takes me on trips to Florida and other places. I love my mom when she makes me macaroni and cheese. My mom loves me because she's mom. I love it when my mom makes chocolate chip cookies. I like to help her. I think my mom is nice when she can play a game with me. Something I like to do with my mom is go to the movies. I love my mom because she took me to MOM. Happy Mother's Day.

Corey Evans

My mom and me like to read. She helps me do my home work. When I was in kindergarten I came out of school and I played with my mom when my brother was asleep. We play Chutes and Ladders together. I win. My mom likes helping me with my writing. I like to cook with my mom. I go to the bank with my mom. Me and my mom go out with my baby brother. We go for walks together. Sometimes I sleep in my mom's room. Mom and me like playing Connect Four. We go sledding in the winter in the night. We grow flowers. Happy Mom's Day.

Ashley Faber

I like to play and hug and kiss my mom and watch TV with my mom. I like to play fun games with my mom and read books with my mom. My mom loves me because I love her. I love my mom because she is always there when I need her to be there like whenever I get hurt she's there. My mom is the best mom in the whole world. I'm glad she's my mom. My mom loves me and I love her. I like spending time with my mom and writing poems for her. I think my mom is super. My mom is the best. I love my mom. She takes care of me.

The gift of laughter

Loretta La Roche, M.D. (Mirth Doctor) entertained and tickled the funny bones of approximately 125 Cohasset residents last Wednesday evening as the Cohasset PSO's annual spring meeting presented Loretta Roche—Parenting with Humor.

La Roche is a nationally known educator, humorist, and motivationalist. She is president of the Humor Potential and director of Wellness Associates, a Mass. based firm offering seminars on stress management and motivational techniques. Loretta's mission in life, to which she has dedicated her time and comic talents, is to break down the negative forces which begin to influence us from early childhood, freeing us to enjoy all that life has to offer.

Utilizing a zany cast of characters representing our most common destructive reactions to stress, Loretta emphasizes how we can create a more joyful homelife for our children by simply relaxing and having more fun with them. We should tap into the child within and become more playful. "A family that laughs together stays together," says Loretta. "Make a joy journal in your household and appoint a joyologist."

Loretta applies humor to every aspect of our stressful lives, however, there's a definite method to her madness. Her humor is a means to an end, that being a happier healthier society.

"I've been blessed with a talent for making people laugh, and I believe laughter is the most effective tool we have in overcoming stress and the limitations in our lives. But what I do is serious and I take it seriously. This is more than just fun and games. My goal is to help people let go of their inhibitions and look around them at the humor in life, and there is a lot of humor out there. Like the sign that says, 'Stop Here for Gas'; now that's funny," La Roche says.

(This article was submitted by the Cohasset PSO.)

Part stand-up comic, part inspirational speaker, Loretta LaRoche talks about parenting with humor during a special PSO program for parents last week.

Pops concert planned

Cohasset High School will present the annual Pops Concert Thursday, May 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria. Come, relax, and enjoy an evening of vocal and instrumental music. Refreshments are included in the $5 admission fee.

Tickets will be available at the door.

More than one million students who took the 1992 PSAT/NMSQT last October entered the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program. Christa R. Ansberg, Brian D. Duffy, Bonnie L. Krueger, Anne G. Lindgren and Michael A. Riley placed among the 50,000 highest-scoring participants.

These students have shown outstanding academic potential and all will be considered for the semifinalist stage. Semifinalists will have an opportunity to continue in the competition for 6,500 merit scholarships to be awarded in 1994.

Panel discussion held

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Cohasset PSO co-sponsored a program on eating disorders at the Cohasset High School April 8.

The panel discussion was presented in two segments of grades seven and eight, and grades nine through 12.

This program was moderated by Michael Gill, health coordinator of the Cohasset School Department. The panelists were: Arlene Winston, Ph.D. candidate and psychotherapist with Straits Path Counseling Center; Dr. Steven Emmet, psychotherapist, Ph.D., Director of Anorexia/Bulemia Society R.I. and Ann Alden, representing ABC Inc. of Lincoln (Anorexia/Bulemia Care).

CHARITABLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust is accepting applications from charitable organizations which provide nursing care, day care, respite care or home care for low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm. To be eligible for the grant award the charitable organization must be exempt from taxation and must be able to use the funds in Plymouth County and contiguous towns. Priority will be given to those programs which offer direct aid to eligible individuals in their homes by maintaining such individuals in his or her home so as to improve the quality of home life.

Funds are also available to assist in the design, construction and equipment of facilities for use by low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm so as to improve the quality of their living arrangements. Individuals are not eligible for funding. The deadline for submitting a completed application is June 15, 1993.

Applications are available by sending a written request to:

Derby Spring Fair

The Derby Academy Spring Fair will be held this Saturday, May 8 from noon to 4 p.m. at the school on Burditt Ave. in Hingham rain or shine.

A day for the entire family, the fair will include past favorites: pony rides, clowns, games and prizes, Moonwalk, paint-a-cap, High Striker, face and nail painting, cookie decorating, etc. There will be a raffle for two Play-To-Win Arcade Basketball games which will go to the lucky winners at the end of the day. And the best guesser at the Big Jelly Bean Guess will take home the jar of beans, plus gift certificates for the movies and dinner at Bertucci's.

Admission and parking are free.

SS NOW to meet

South Shore Chapter, National Organization for Women (NOW), will meet May 9, 2 to 4 p.m., at New North Church, Lincoln St., Hingham. Call Suzanne, 749-3342 or Jeannette, 337-6725 for more information.

Rescheduled due to blizzard — Patricia Ireland, NOW President, and the NOW Action Team will be coming to the South Shore May 22. Details to follow or call for more information.

Bennet School show

In celebration of the Year of the American Craft, the South Shore Art Center will host an exhibition by students from the North Bennet Street School in Boston. Celebrate Craft: Training in the Tradition at the North Bennet Street School, opens with a reception Friday, May 7, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

North Bennet Street School is nationally recognized for its programs in book binding, furniture, jewelry and stringed-instrument making. Irving Anderson of the South Shore Conservatory of Music will perform on an NBSS-made violin during the opening reception, May 7. A lecture on "Creating the Instrument: Violins" will be delivered by Marilyn J. Wallin of NBSS at the Art Center, Thursday, May 20, at 7 p.m. The exhibition will remain on display through June 11.

During May, the Art Center will also exhibit outstanding work by middle school students from Cohasset, Duxbury, Norwell, Scituate, and the Silver Lake Regional School District. Art Forum opens May 6 with an opening reception Friday, May 7, from 6 to 8 p.m., and remains on display at the Art Center through May 27.

The opening reception and exhibits are open free to the public. Gallery hours are Tuesday - Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please call 617-383-9548.

Burlesque comes to the South Shore! Don't miss Cohasset's Joe Hochkeppel (far right) along with Billy Freeman (L) and Kim Aubin in "Sugar Babies" presented by Darling Productions' Quincy Center Dinner Theatre, May 8, 9, 16, 22, & 23 at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy. Storyteller to perform

Jennifer Justice, award-winning storyteller, will spin delightful tales for your family Sunday, May 16, at 7 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset. Justice, with an MFA from Boston University, teaches in the Arts in Education program at Lesley College in Cambridge. The art of storytelling has been revitalized in the past 15 years, Justice says, as people have re-learned the joy of this direct, imaginative communication, in contrast to passive entertainment like television.

Tickets are $8, or $5 for children 12 and younger. The performance will last about 45 minutes, then refreshments will be served. All proceeds will benefit the Appalachia Service Project. Tickets are limited, so buy now, by calling Rev. Gary Ritts (383-0345) or Ami Argus (383-9325).

The Appalachia Service Project involves 35 Cohasset High School students, teachers Kearin Dunn, Susan McFadd, Paul Narkiewicz, Judy Ritts, and 13 parents/adult advisors, who will travel to Southwestern Virginia this summer for eight days to repair homes for poor families in Appalachia. Under the direction of Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, students learn valuable skills in cross cultural awareness, manual labor, and fundraising. Through direct contributions, car washes, bake sales, "students of hire," sale of "stock" and tickets for this performance, students and advisors must raise $22,000 to cover the cost of their materials, transportation, and room and board. Transportation is by bus and "room" is the floor of a local school or church.

Please bring the whole family to the storytelling performance May 16. Children and adults alike will delight in Jennifer Justice's colorful stories of Appalachia, and you will be supporting the students' community service there.

business notes

Chartis Bell Langmaid of Cohasset has joined the Cohasset office of Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker as a sales associate. Chartis has been very involved in the community for more than 20 years. She was a candidate for the State Senate in 1992; represented Cohasset on the Affordable Housing Task Force subcomittee of the South Shore Coalition; and is chairperson of the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

A graduate of Wellesley College and the Program for Women in Politics and Government at Boston College, Chartis is currently president of the Women's Statewide Legislative Alliance, a member of the South Shore Women's Business Network; a volunteer with the South Shore Habitat for Humanity; and chairperson of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Jack Conway & Company welcomes Patty Watters, Jill Cannistro, and Caroline Klier to its Cohasset office.

The women recently graduated from the Conway Country School of Real Estate after completing an intense, eight-week training seminar.

The seminar provided the latest information on changes in legislation and trends within the housing industry.

Marilyn Jarvis has been named tops in sales for the month of February for the Conway Cohasset office.

Jarvis, a Jack Conway & Co. associate since 1986, has consistently been among the company's top producers.

Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker welcomes Jo Ann M. Haynes to its Cohasset office as a broker associate. An independent real estate broker for more than 27 years, Haynes has expert knowledge in all aspects of real estate negotiations, specializing in new home construction.

A graduate of Emmanuel College, she is actively involved in the community through memberships in the Cohasset and Community Garden clubs; Coh Golf Club; and Phi Alpha T International Honors History Soci

Haynes, and her husband William, reside in Cohasset. They have three daughters.

The Mariner has Cohasset covered. Call 1-800-649-6661 to subscribe.

Big budget deficits on the horizon

By Dori Dwyer

Town officials painted a deficit-ridden picture of Cohasset's fiscal future Tuesday night at town hall.

The basis for the pessimism is a four-year budget projection which showed huge deficits every year from 1994 through 1997.

Town accountant Michael Buckley said he created the budget forecast at the request of the advisory committee.

"These (projections) are based on the best available information, but there are literally hundreds of things that could change the numbers," Buckley explained.

Regardless, chairman of the advisory committee Nancy Adams Roth said an override request at next year's town meeting was virtually assured.

"We have set the stage," Roth said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said it was better to get the word out early about next year's override. "We are not trying to fool people," she said.

Based on current projections, the amount of the fiscal year 1995 override is $385,830.59. However, Selectman Jane Goedecke said the amount will change. "It's dangerous to put too much emphasis on the figure of $300,000 or $400,000. We will have a better idea in August," she said.

Roth said the advisory committee will begin to analyze override alternatives.

"This summer we will look at ways to either reduce the override, or what we may do if the override doesn't pass," she said.

The budget forecast assumed level-funding for department expenses; that

High-tech carries hefty price tag: $700K

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset school board now knows what it will take to move the schools into the high-tech era: $700,000 over three years.

The news was contained in a blueprint for technology development from a planning study conducted by Merrimack Education Center (MEC), which was hired by the school department to assess its needs.

MEC reviewed the requirements, capabilities, and steps necessary to implement an information management system that would support improvements in the teaching, instruction, and administration components of the school system.

MEC recommended that Cohasset schools be networked for linking and exchanging information; that the high school operate its own administrative system; that the computer laboratories in all schools be updated; that a curriculum pilot project be implemented in one curriculum area; and that staff development in technology areas be expanded.

Chelmsford-based MEC was hired by the school department to review existing technology within the system and to make recommendations for the future. MEC Representatives came to Cohasset to make observations, examine relevant documents, conduct and analyze surveys and conduct interviews.

MEC's presentation last week represented the culmination of the study and contained the its recommendations for making the best use of the

TV and film producers seeking Mass. appeal

Gov. William Weld's recent junket to the West Coast to spur interest in on-location filming in the Boston area appears to be an "unbelievable" success that will draw several "large" productions to the area, according to Linda Peterson Warren of the Massachusetts Film Bureau.

The Bay State already has had its fair share of blockbusters setting up shop. Several years ago "The Witches of Eastwick" with Jack Nicholson filmed in Cohasset. Recently "Housesitter" with Steve Martin, "The Firm" with Tom Cruise, "The Good Son" with Macauly Culkin and "Hocus Pocus" with Bette Midler have lensed in the Greater Boston area.

Warren says since the junket, her office has been "swamped with scripts" from producers asking for breakdown and location scouting.

"Things are really moving. There are major things upcoming, so stay tuned."

A major film or television production brings many good things to the state, including work, business, taxes and tourism to cities and towns. The governor's interest, support and willingness to participate in the trip has helped immensely, she adds.

"We have had wonderful support," she says. "Without that kind of support, this would be very difficult."

While Weld and his fellow travelers were pressing the flesh on the West Coast, Bruce Marson, the general manager of WHDH-TV, was pressing his ear to the phone.

Septic woes keep health board busy

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Board of health met on Tuesday night to rule on various requests for variances and approvals of emergency septic system repair plans.

Specifically, the board approved a plan for an emergency repair of the septic system at 7-9 Highland Ave., owned by Nancy and Dennis Rother

It also approved a plan for an emergency repair of the septic system at 118 Beach St., owned by Clifford Mitman, and required engineer Paul Mirabito, who presented the plan, to modify the plan in order to address the concerns of an affected neighbor.

Representatives of the owners of 63 Nichols Rd. were successful in securing a number of variances from the board in order to implement an intricate plan to resolve existing septic tank problems. The variances were granted onthe basis of hardship and equal environmental protection.

Watch for pedestrians

Sgt. Robert Jackson said police are getting tough on motorists who don't yield to pedestrians in village crosswalks.

"We'd like to caution all drivers to slow down," Jackson said. "And we warn people who enter the crosswalks to walk defensively."

He said police have recently ticketed three drivers for failure to stop for a pedestrian and cited one for operating to endanger.

The fee is $35 for failure to stop for a pedestrian and surcharge points are added to the driver's insurance policy for the moving violation.

Jackson said if pedestrians see a motorist failing to stop and the pedestrian is willing to be a witness in court — the police will issue a ticket from the station. The pedestrian needs the license plate number of the car, Jackson said.

He stressed that pedestrians should cross the village streets with care.

"Thinking the white lines protect them, people are crossing without looking both ways," Jackson said.

This is not the San Andreas fault but the crack in the tennis courts at the high school. The courts, which need refurbishing, have been a hot topic in selectmen's meetings of late. It is not clear whether the town or schools have jurisdiction over the courts. But both groups are talking and the issue should be resolved once and for all soon. Please see the editorial, page 10.

Fire open house

The public is invited to attend an open house at the fire station from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, May 29 held in conjunction with National Emergency Medical Services Week and the timely delivery of Cohasset's new ambulance.

"This is a great opportunity for the public to inspect their new ambulance up close, pick up safety information and Tot Finder Stickers, have their blood pressure checked and talk to firefighters and Emergency Medical Technicians," Fire Chief John R. Nadeau said.

"Our new ambulance represents forward thinking. It is designed to provide long-term service. Its heavy duty construction, air ride suspension, and communication system upgrades are but a few of its features."

EMS week is a nationwide salute to the more than 500,000 emergency medical technicians and paramedics; 70,000 emergency nurses; and 23,000 emergency physicians who provide lifesaving care to the nation's residents every day of the year, Nadeau said. Accidents claimed more than 88,000 lives last year and one in three Americans suffered an illness or injury requiring treatment.

"The Cohasset Fire Department wishes to take this opportunity to remind everyone that calling us is one of the simplest ways to help save a life," Nadeau said. He also thanked the taxpayers for providing the fire department with money to purchase the latest equipment including military anti-shock trousers, defibrillator, and an electronic vital sign monitor in addition to the new ambulance.

Bills written off

Last week selectmen voted to write off the uncollectible balance of $156,062.93 incurred for ambulance runs in prior years rather than to carry inflated figures on the books which distorts the town's financial picture.

Of the remaining unpaid accounts, only $12,000 is collectible because many insurance companies are only recognizing claims incurred within 90 days, Fire Chief John R. Nadeau said.

"As you know, this administration inherited a receivables account of $168,024.55," he said. "We have reviewed all incidents dating back to November of 1989 and have generated and processed bills for Medicare clients and others that we believe collectible. Of these pre-FY92 accounts, we billed $22,710, collected $14,167.28, and accepted on assignment $3,628.27 and show accounts receivable of $4,914.45.

"Current FY92 receivables amount to $7,047.17. Current FY92 receivables and pre-FY92 collectible receivables total $11,961.62," Nadeau explained. "This is a far cry from what the accountant and treasurer are carrying on the books."

Nadeau told the board that FY93 collections have exceeded $70,000. And in addition, the collection rate for 1992 bills is 81.7 percent.

Animal control hours

Animal Control Officer William Quigley informed selectmen after reviewing his FY93 budget, that he has only 88 hours available for animal control until June 30.

"In order to stay within the payroll budget, I will be forced to work about 11 hours per week until FY94," Quigley wrote.

"All emergency calls will be handled. Patrols and administrative work will be done only when time allows. I will continue to check all messages and clear the answering machine daily," he said.

Farrell gets raise

Selectmen approved a step increase for Accounting Clerk Mary M. Farrell from $7.92 to $8.38 effective June 14.

The board praised the employee review that Farrell's supervisor town Accountant Michael Buckley wrote.

"The work Michael Buckley did in reviewing this person is excellent," Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said.

"You took the words right out of my mouth," added Selectman Michael H. Sullivan.

Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said "the review was very well done."

Bill payment authorized

Selectmen approved payment of $30,129.11 to dredging contractors AGM Marine Contractors, Inc.

Town accepts gift

Selectmen accepted a gift of $100 from Philip J. Carney, 16 Beechwood, for the fire department. The money will be deposited into the town's gift account and go toward defraying the cost of a recently purchased "Quik Kut" tool for emergency extrication.

HOW DO YOU KNOW?

I'm serious. I really want to know. Did you gals all call each other early this morning and say - This is the day! Let's do it!?

Yesterday all you gals were wearing your winter woolies. Today all four of you walked into the office all crispy and starchy, with white stockings and your new, jeweled pocketbooks.

Hmmm, I said. Aren't they pushing their luck a little? It's damp and raining. Then around noon the sun came out, it hit 60 degrees, and I noticed the crocus.

So, I want to know, and stop laughing. How does this happen? Is there a day that spring comes, all on its own? Or do you gals in the office decide? Stop giggling!

state and local receipts would not increase; that insurance and workers' compensation costs would increase 10 percent; and that raises in 1994 and 1995 would be 3.5 percent.

For the 1996 and 1997 projections, however, salary hikes are anticipated to be 2.5 percent.

The projected deficit for 1996 is $418,492.58, while in 1997 the deficit is expected to be $508,503.59.

Roth said a committee would be formed to handle the issue of future overrides.

"If you go for an override every other year, there is a better chance of passing it," Nancy L. Sandell of the school committee said.

The budget forecast does not include capital expenditures, Buckley said. Roth asked members of several town committees and boards who attended the meeting to explain future capital needs.

Sandell said the school committee had just received a technology study which puts the schools on a three-year improvement and purchase plan.

"It's for $300,000 in the first year and $200,000 in the second," she said. "Maybe we'll be on a 10-year plan."

Sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil, Jr. said the commission would need between $2 million to $6 million to perform required improvements to the town's sewage treatment plant within the next three years.

"By picking up extra capacity, it would cost $2 million," he said. "But there is always the possibility the state would hammer us into the $6 million project."

Buckley, speaking for the computer study committee, delivered unexpectedly good news. "People will be pleasantly surprised at how cheap this will cost — considering how cheap computers are now," he said.

He said the total computer improvement package fro town hall would cost about $30,000 — of which the committee already has half.

"Town meeting appropriated $15,000 for consulting, but we don't need that because the people on the committee are so knowledgeable," Buckley said.

Bruce A. Edmonds of the public works garage study committee said the committee will ask the town for between $257,000 and $383,000 for construction of a new garage.

Merle S. Brown of the committee for the study of the structure of public safety services said although his committee faces the task of implementing E-911, the expense will be minimal.

"The state and New England telephone pay for it," he said.

Town treasurer Betty Ripley said the town could count on spending more than $1 million for capital expenses in the coming years.

"If we end up capping the landfill, buying the Haggerty Property and a new fire pumper, we are looking at over one million dollars," Ripley said.

department's existing technology resources while integrating the department's future plans in this area.

Specifically, MEC sought the opinions of administrators, teachers, students and parents through in-person interviews and, in some cases, through the use of written surveys. It also conducted an inventory of existing software, hardware, network systems and instructional technology applications form all schools in the system.

MEC reported that the schools had done a number of good things with regard to technology and that the system should now concentrate on coordinating the technology.

The Executive Summary indicated that there is a high interest throughout the system in networking as a daily mechanism for administrative and professional activities as well as to assist in the spread of educational resources between classes and schools. Another finding of the study is that the school department needs to upgrade technology use in scheduling, grade reporting, and other administrative duties.

The report also said that interest in integrating technology with instruction is greatest at the high school level and it identified a system-wide need for staff development in the area of technology as an administrative and educational tool. Finally, the study said that certain computer labs need to be upgraded.

Implementing the technology plan would involve a sizable expenditure on the part of the school department but representatives of MEC stressed that the future of schools is largely dependent upon technology and the cost should be viewed in this context.

The specific cost estimate of MEC for budget purposes is about $700,000 over a three-year period. Cost in the first year would be about $300,000, followed by two years at $200,000.

MEC said that if any state of federal grant money were to become available to schools in order to implement technology development, the town would be better off if it already had a plan in place.

The school committee will review the study's complete results before taking any further action.

Talks on DARE program continue

School board Chairman Nancy Sandell reported lst week that she and committee member Ken Wilcox had taken part in a recent meeting to discuss the ongoing questions surrounding the DARE program.

DARE is a drug awareness and resistance education program.

Sandell said participants in the meeting included members of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, representatives from the police department, selectmen, Health Education Advisory Committee, school administration and student body.

"This program is fraught with a lot of emotion and our objective was to look at the program objectively and I think that we were able to do that," she explained.

It was agreed that the town would look at other communities which had implemented DARE and also consider other versions of the program which might be viable options.

"I think that the general attitude was a positive one. We all agreed that we should at least be receptive to the idea that the current (health) program could be supplemented and that we should endeavor to take advantage of the unique position which police officers enjoy in our community," Sandell said.

What's the big deal?

You are! When you decide to have your baby at Quincy Hospital, you receive the special attention you deserve.

Right from the start, we can help you select one of our fine, private obstetricians. And we also have the largest nurse midwife group in this area.

You'll have a private room during labor, and after your baby is born. Relaxing decor. A private bath with a tub. A partner's chair that converts to a sleeper. All the comforts of home during your labor, in the security of the hospital. And later, having your own room gives you the space and freedom to get comfortable with your new arrival without a lot of unnecessary interruptions.

Your family and friends will appreciate the free parking and the fact that Quincy Hospital is only minutes from Routes 128, 3 and 93.

After you go home, what you'll remember most is the nurses. Their personal attention and individualized teaching help make your experience unique. In fact, the nurses give you a phone number when you leave so you can call them 24 hours a day if you have any questions.

But seeing is believing. So call Quincy Hospital's Public Relations Department at (617) 773- 6100 ext. 4016 or send in the coupon to receive a free seven minute videotape about Quincy Hospital's maternity service.

Because the big deal at Quincy Hospital is great care!

TV and film producers seeking Mass. appeal

scouting, Marson, in cooperation with state officials, was able to arrange for the highly-rated (100 million viewers worldwide) game show "Wheel of Fortune" to make a Boston visit. He, and others, see the show's visit as having both short-term and long-term benefits.

According to Patrick Moscaritolo, president and chief executive officer of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau, the episodes, set to air in May, will further prove to the entertainment industry that the Boston area offers spectacular results.

"What is the value of presenting such national treasures as the Gardner Museum, the Longfellow House in Cambridge and the House of Seven Gables in Salem to 24 million (national) viewers a day?" Moscaritolo asks.

"If we had to pay for that airtime at the going advertising rate, it would cost us close to $2 million, and that is a conservative estimate."

Moscaritolo says the shows will air in the early weeks of May, a perfect time to reach families planning their summer vacations.

The shows will not benefit only Boston, according to Moscaritolo. Thirty-seven other sites, including several South Shore locations, will be featured in promotional spots and prize segments.

But he is stressing the role the tapings will have in showing "the industry" that Boston has the capability and talent pool to serve major productions.

"There is the important message of cooperative mega-production that is sent out to the world," Moscaritolo explains.

"It is directed to decision makers in Hollywood and Los Angeles and the television industry across the country. That message is that we have a wonderful, exciting city and state in which to film TV and movies and, more importantly, that we can work together in Massachusetts to make it all possible.

"We understand the importance of television production and of the movie business. We understand the economic benefits to the state."

Stephen Tocco, state secretary of economic affairs and a special assistant to the governor, agrees the state offers an attractive setting and cooperative environment to production companies.

"We have a gem here on the East Coast," Tocco boasts, explaining that recent campaigns have stressed "the ease" with which Massachusetts can handle production needs.

To that end, he said the "Wheel of Fortune" tapings were "a chance that we certainly did not want to pass up."

Tom Kershaw, owner of Boston's Bull and Finch Pub, the real life inspiration for the television series "Cheers," has his own ideas about what it takes to attract the entertainment industry and its residual tourist market.

In addition to owning the nation's most famous bar, he is chairman of the board of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau, founder and chairman of the Massachusetts Tourism Council and a member of the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration, an appointment he received from former President Bush.

Kershaw also was appointed by the governor to the Council of Economic Growth and Technology and traveled with Weld to the West Coast.

"The governor is a great salesman," Kershaw says. "I was with him in Hollywood at the cocktail reception on the "Cheers" set before it was dismantled and sent off to the Smithsonian . . ."

He says he is eager for movies and sitcoms to come to Massachusetts, especially sitcoms.

"If they catch on, they can go on forever and ever," says Kershaw.

Speaking in Scituate recently, he said matter-of-factly, "If Paramount (or another studio) comes to your town, be very hospitable.

"I asked for a small favor to sell T-shirts" just as "Cheers" was being launched, and the studio agreed.

Today, the T-shirts and related souvenirs generate twice as much revenue as the restaurant, and restaurant sales are three times what they were before "Cheers," Kershaw acknowledges.

"Do whatever you can to encourage them to come."

Now, wherever he goes, Kershaw promotes Massachusetts and emphasizes the importance of advertising the state's resources and attractions.

Massachusetts spends about $20 million annually to promote itself, he says. The money comes from the hotel tax which generated $60 million last year.

In comparison, the federal government spends $15 million to promote the nation as a tourist attraction.

Kershaw says that in the past two to three years, tourism has generated a $20 billion surplus for the national economy.

"Tourism is a golden goose and we are still fighting for $15 million," he said. "If we spend the money well, we will see an increase in tourism and in economic rewards — jobs. That affects everybody."

Septic woes keep health board busy

Dr. Iraj Aghdasi, an abutter to 4 Otis Ave., requested that the health board inspect his property to observe drainage problems arising from problems at the 4 Otis Ave. site.

Chairman William E. Baird, agreed to view the location this weekend.

The board instructed Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik to issue a cease and desist letter and notification of system failure to the owners, David and Marie Buckley, 217 S. Main St. Godzik said the property owners were illegally pumping from their septic system onto the ground surface of the property. The board will require the owners to hire an engineer to design a new system and that any future pumping be performed by a licensed sewage hauler.

EATING DISORDERS

Dr. Godzik also reported to the board that a very successful program had recently been conducted at Cohasset High School dealing with health concerns associated with eating disorders, anorexia and bulimia. Godzik asked the board's feelings about conducting a similar program, sponsored by the health board, to educate parents and other citizens about the dangers of these disorders. The cost of the program would be about $400, Godzik said.

Baird wants to determine how much community interest and support exists for such a program before the board looks into ways of paying for it. Any interested citizens should call School Health Coordinator Michael Gill at 383-6107.

Food pantry open Tuesdays

With shelves generously stocked with a variety of nourishing foods, the new Cohasset Food Pantry opened for service, Tuesday, May 4 and will be open each Tuesday, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 7 to 8 p.m. to provide food assistance to Cohasset residents.

Particularly generous donations of food from first-of-the-month collections by St. Anthony's Church helped to fill the shelves of the newly created facility in the basement of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave., next to Cohasset Town Hall, for the opening day. Continuing food drives by churches and other agencies in Cohasset will be conducted to help maintain the supplies.

For further information about the Cohasset Food Pantry, call 383-0345.

Attic treasures talk

Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of the nationally-known Brattle Book Shop in Boston, will speak at a free and open lecture under the sponsorship of the Friends of the Cohasset Library, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, June 3, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, South Main Street.

Mr. Gloss' talk is entitled, "Treasures in Your Attic: Old and Rare Books."

"New England homes are treasure troves for old and rare books that have increased in value over the years," Gloss said "and we're inviting those attending to bring any volumes they want to know about to the lecture for a free verbal appraisal."

The Brattle Book Shop is the successor to America's oldest continuously operating antiquarian book store. Kenneth Gloss succeeded his late father, George Gloss, a well-known figure both in Boston and in national antiquarian circles.

Kenneth Gloss had worked in the store since childhood and elected to go into the book business rather than pursue a doctorate in chemistry. He became the sole proprietor upon his father's death several years ago.

"I found that books were in my blood and that I would never be really happy if I abandoned the business."

Kenneth Gloss is a member of the Antiquarian Booksellers Association of America, the New England Antiquarian Booksellers Association, the Bostonian Society and the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Antiquarian Booksellers. He serves as a member of the advisory board of the U.S.S. Constitution Museum and is a member of the advisory committee of the Boston Public Library.

Recently Kenneth Gloss was presented with an award by The Historic Neighborhoods Foundation for making a definitive contribution to the design and social heritage of Boston.

The Brattle Book Shop is also proud to have been a contributor to the WGBH Annual Auction each and every year that the station has held its fund drive.

Gloss will bring to the lecture several examples of interesting books, magazines, and ephemera from the store's private collection, such as a 1912 World Series scorecard and examples of old Life magazines.

Don't miss Ken Gloss at the library June 3.

We must begin by saying happy belated birthday to a super lady...Mary Williams celebrated her 80th last Saturday. Although she has moved from Cohasset to live with her son, Bruce, and his wife, Claire, she certainly will always be remembered for the kind, generous, wonderful lady that she still is.

Happy birthday, Mrs. Williams, and here's to many more!

If you haven't been listening to "Sports Huddle" recently, be sure you make the time to do so from now on! As most know, Cohasset's own Jim McCarthy is running the show now, and he has had some of the most celebrated superstar speakers around! He sure tops any other program, so if you are a sports buff, tune in!

After the wonderful weekend we just experienced, do we need to tell you spring has arrived (finally)? I have another sure sign that summer isn't far behind. the South Shore Music Circus schedule is due out any day now, and the lineup promises to be dynamite! Watch for the events that are coming, it will be real soon.

If you are looking for the perfect present for your CHS grad, Clark Chatterton has the solution. He has ordered reverse weave Champion sweatshirts with Cohasset Skippers embroidered on the front...navy blue, natch, with white letters. Call him for more information; you and yours will be happy that you did.

We certainly hope that Claffy Williams will let us know all about her trip to Paris, where one of her paintings is in a show. Claffy is one of only 14 artists invited to participate. The artists come from all over the world! Tell us all about it upon your return!

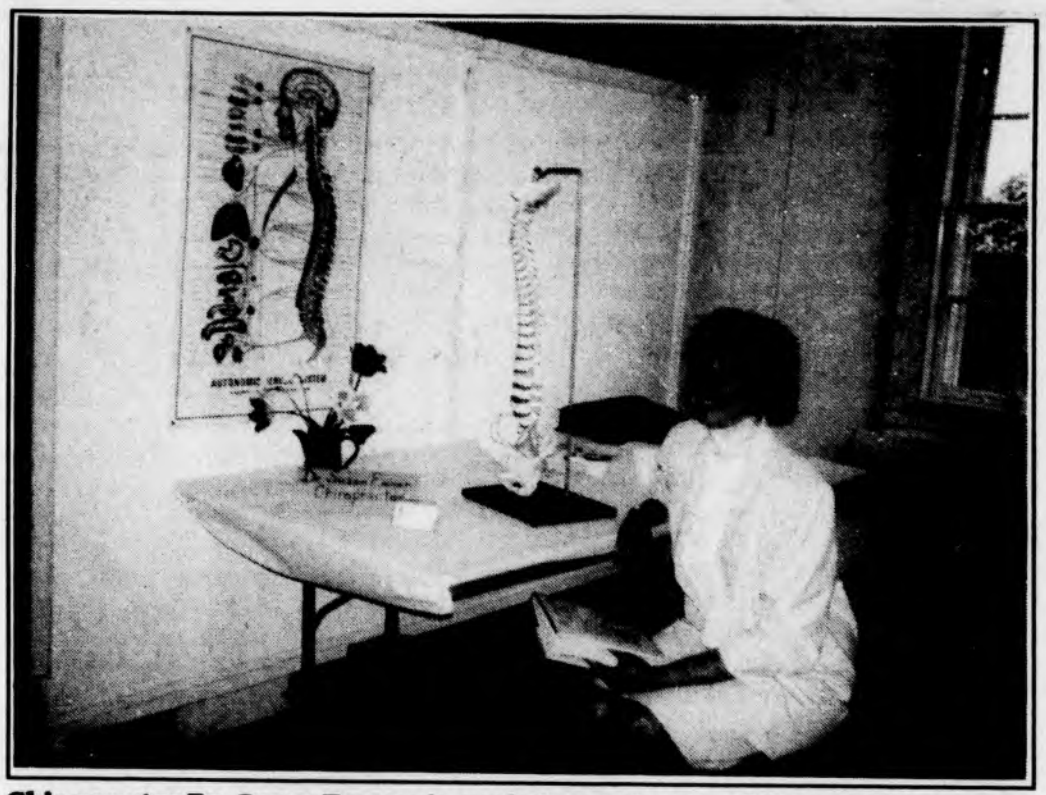
They are looking for you...The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society is begging for drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatments. The agency serves patients by giving free transportation to Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth. All you need to do is one trip per month! For more information call the Hersey House (headquarters "hot line") at 749-2535.



Chiropractor Dr. Susan Emmer is ready to greet some of the 110 citizens who attended the annual Health Fair, May 6 at the Second Congregational Church. The popular event, which featured health-care information and testing in many areas such as podiatry, dermatology and chiropractic care, was sponsored by the Social Service League in conjunction with the Cohasset Council on Aging and the Board of Health. (Lynne Layman photo)

Happy birthday to Kristen Litchfield.

Out of more than one million students who took the 1992 PSAT/NMSQT last October and entered the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program, five Cohasset students placed among the 50,000 highest-scoring participants. Hats off to Christa R. Ansberg, Brian D. Duffy, Bonnie L. Krueger, Anne G. Lindgren and Michael A. Riley, the students who will be considered for the semi-finalist stage, then will have an opportunity to continue in competition for scholarships to be awarded in 1994. Congratulations.

Happy anniversary greetings go to John and Kim Litchfield this week. They will be celebrating their fourth anniversary on the 13th of May, and we hope that each year that follows is better than the last!

Have a great day.

All who have seen it love the performance that Joe Hochkeppel does in "Sugar Babies"...You can still see him – the production will be on May 16, 22 and 23 at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy. Call 843-5862 for more information.

Now is certainly the time for college graduations. Be sure you get in touch with me with the details of your grad! Everyone is interested, and loves to read about it.

Nicholas Gianibas & Martha Maynard

Maynard/Gianibas

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Maynard Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Maynard, to Nickolas Gianibas. He is the son of Mrs. Peter N. Gianibas of Hull.

Miss Maynard graduated from Cohasset High School and will graduate in June from Aquinas College in Milton. She is employed by Stop & Shop Supermarket.

Mr. Gianibas is employed by Star Market Supermarkets.

A July 31 wedding is planned.

Geddes/Manton

At an October 24 wedding at the First Congregational Church in Hingham, Sasha Anstis Manton, daughter of Dorothy M. Manton of Cohasset and the late Joseph P. Manton III, became the bride of Marc Vincent Geddes.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Berberick of Hull.

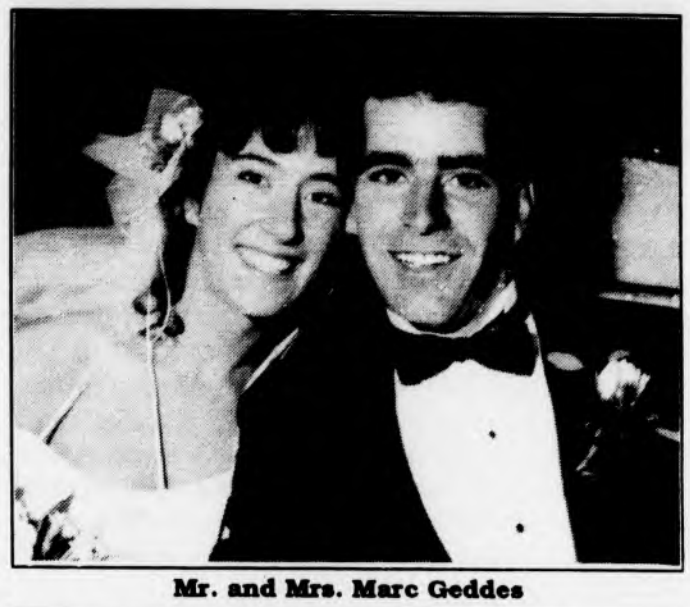
The Rev. Martin officiated. A reception followed at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The bride was given in marriage by Brian Sullivan. She was attended by Erin Marie Hunt of Cohasset as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Jennifer Duff of Hull, and Amy Lincoln, Susan Young and Jennifer Lagrotteria, all of Cohasset.

Christopher Maull of Hull served as best man. Ushers were Joseph Leonard and Dean Driesphoon, both of Hull, Jeffrey Eno, of Moosup, Connecticut, and Edward Figueiredo, Jr., of Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Lasell College in Newton. She is employed at Vinfen Corp. in Hingham.

The groom is a graduate of Hull High School and is employed at D'Angelo Remodelling in Hull.



Mr. and Mrs. Marc Geddes

After a wedding trip to St. John, the couple is residing in Hull.

"Killer" Kowalski to appear on Pierson to Person May 13

Thursday, May 13, Host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be professional wrestling legend Walter "Killer" Kowalski and two professional women wrestlers, Brittany Brown and "The Princess of Pain" demonstrating tough wrestling holds and techniques, discussing wrestling today and reviewing professional wrestling history from the time "Killer" Kowalski tore off Yukon Eric's ear, his professional debut in 1948 and his NWA title which he captured six times.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham and on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

Through the cracks

If you're baffled by the dispute over ownership of the crumbling high school tennis courts — you're not alone.

It's hard to understand and almost impossible to believe that courts old enough to crack can exist in no-man's land in Cohasset.

To hear selectmen talk — they do. It's still not completely clear who owns the courts, which are on town land as all publicly owned buildings and structures are. But because of what we were told is conflicting information on plot plans and tax maps, just who has responsibility over the courts is in doubt. So in a majority vote, selectmen claimed the courts last week for the town — but if turns out they are on school-controlled land — selectmen probably can't claim the courts legally.

Yet what has gone on behind the scenes puts a positive spin on this tennis story.

It all started when a high school tennis Mom took matters into her own hands when she saw the condition of the courts. She called this official and that official.

And what she got was a lot of excuses, some public grandstanding, and little real action.

So she took her broom and swept up the litter and debris in the parking lot. She brought down planters and flowers. And she called more officials.

The high school tennis season is just about over so it's too late this year for her son to benefit from refurbished courts. But thanks to the tennis Mom — we'll bet next year's team will.

She wasn't afraid to stir things up, to keep calling, and to prove something could be done right away by getting her broom out. She's got the whole town talking.

And now the school committee and selectmen are talking.

Of course, the real issue here is money. Fiscal times are tight and they have been for a long time. So no one really wants jurisdiction over courts which can be costly to an already strapped budget especially if they are the other guy's responsibility.

So as School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said, "the courts fell through the cracks" in a system that relied on goodwill between people and not on things that are spelled out clearly.

In a spirit of cooperation Mrs. Sandell, Selectman Jane Goedecke, and Supt. Stephen Hart met last Friday to work the matter out.

And we're certain it will be resolved positively, thanks to a tennis Mom that wasn't afraid to take a page from John McEnroe's book and complain loudly to officials.

Kids' drink, a recycling nightmare

To the Editor:

As a member of Cohasset's recycling committee, I feel I should draw people's attention to "Kool Aid Kool Bursts." This is a repackaged version of Phillip Morris Kool Aid drinks. Instead of the familiar paper packets Kool Bursts have water already added in a plastic bottle. These are sold in six packs, bound by another layer of plastic.

One package of Kool Burst costs ten times more than the original paper packet, provides one-third less drink and produces over 50 times more waste.

In a day and age when landfills are overflowing and closing, when trash disposal has reached crisis proportions, these drinks represent a recycling nightmare.

I urge you to boycott Kool Bursts. Boycotting shows you reject companies that spend their profits to stop needed legislation and wasteful packaging as Phillip Morris did on Question 3.

Imagine the waste from Cohasset's three schools in just one week of Kool Bursts and box juices. Make the move to a reusable container — a thermos. Remember those? No waste. Flex your consumer muscles, show you care and boycott Kool Bursts.

Sincerely,
Robin Grinnell
63 Sohier St.

Kraft responds to letter on container

(The following statement from Kraft General Foods is in response to Mrs. Grinnell's letter to the editor appearing this week.)

As a leading consumer products manufacturer, Kraft General Foods is always seeking to strike the right balance between the wants and needs of our consumers and a concern for the environment. These factors are vital to everything we produce, including Kool-Aid Bursts.

Kool-Aid Bursts is a fun, flavored liquid beverage for children. The bottle is unbreakable and therefore safe as well as portable, making it great for kids. It is convenient for busy parents because it is a single serving and ready to use. Our ongoing research indicates that the convenience, squeezability and vibrant flavors of these beverages are very important benefits for consumers.

The packaging, a monolayer low density polyethylene (LDPE) bottle (#4), is designed to deliver these benefits to consumers in a manner that is safe, economical and which guarantees the best freshness and quality. The plastic over-wrap around the Kool-Aid Bursts bottles is necessary to protect the freshness and integrity of the product. Without the over-wrap, the flavor of the beverage dissipates.

Of course, for consumers who prefer to prepare Kool-Aid beverages in their own containers at home, General Foods USA continues to offer a large variety of powdered Kool-Aid beverages, in both envelopes and convenient canisters.

As a responsible corporate citizen, we are always exploring new packaging concepts and alternatives to try to balance both consumer and environmental needs. We will continue to pursue the development of the safest and most environmentally efficient packaging for all our products.

Thanks for cleanup help

To the Editor,

I would like to thank everyone who helped with the cleanup at Black Rock Beach May 1. It was wonderful to see so many people give up a Saturday morning to make the beach a more pleasant place. With so much help, it took us only two hours to clean the beach, and we had a lot of fun.

Peter Laugelle of the Cohasset Tree and Park Dept. helped again this year by providing a truck and hauling the trash away. Thank you, Peter.

New crosswalk was a team effort

(The following letter about the new crosswalk at Smith Place was sent to Selectmen.)

Dear Martha and Board of Selectmen,

Many thanks for your time and efforts on behalf of the re-design of the Smith Place — Ripley Road crosswalk. The meeting of "many great minds" is an exciting and dynamic process to watch. With the input of Greg Doyan, Safety Officer Jones, Chief Noonan, and interested citizens, I believe that this crossing will be much safer for all Cohasset citizens.

I'd also like to thank Peter Laugelle for his prompt response in removing a tree which would pose a safety issue with the new crosswalk.

This was truly a stunning co-operative effort. Three cheers for all of you!

Linda Keller

Community Lights

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Anyone, who has trade skills, willing to donate their time and/or simply wants to physically help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Renovation Project, please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505. Donations of building supplies are also needed.

• The town moderator is seeking applicants for the advisory committee, capital budget committee, drainage advisory committee, government structure committee and personnel committee by May 15. Applicants can leave their name at the town clerk's office or send a letter of interest to the Town Moderator, P.O. Box 203, Cohasset 02050.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers needed to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

• There's a vacancy on the Cohasset 911 committee. Anyone interested should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

• Homeless families need your help. In the past several weeks, 18 families who have become homeless have been placed in temporary shelters in Hull. Most of these families are from Boston where their extended families and friends are. In Hull, they have no car, extremely limited cooking facilities, a dormitory-sized refrigerator, and a single room in which to live and sleep. The typical family includes a single mother with one or two pre-school age children and one child in school. To help ease their time in crisis, the Hull Interagency Council is seeking volunteers for the following:

Wellspring food donations are needed particularly food that can be microwaved like beef stew, corned beef hash, soups, canned spaghetti, baked beans, and canned vegetables.

Volunteer drivers are needed to transport people to the Wellspring Food Pantry on Wednesday mornings. Food Pantry volunteers are also needed to staff the pantry and to make weekly trips to Boston for supplies. Training will be provided. Contact Pam Cooney, 925-3078.

A dedicated individual with good interpersonal skills is needed to volunteer as a facilitator for regular weekly meetings of homeless women sheltered in Hull. The purpose of the weekly meetings is to encourage the women to share information and solve problems they might have in common. This requires a time commitment of two hours per week. Experience in counseling, social work, or social services is helpful but not necessary. Contact Marguerite Haider, 925-3211.

Volunteer tutors are also being sought to provide one-to-10 hours a week tutoring a small group of students one-on-one in reading and math or other subjects for older students. Some tutor training will be provided. Contact Pam Cooney 925-3078 or 925-0773.

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Cohasset Common — one of New England's finest

By David Wadsworth
Senior Curator
Cohasset Historical Society

Cohasset's Common often is considered to be one of the most picturesque examples of a New England Town Common. It also is an original Common; constituted of land left over when the uplands of Cohasset were divided up and apportioned among Hingham landowners in 1670. At that time, Cohasset (or "Conahasset" as it was called) was the east part of Hingham, and was used for grazing of farm animals or harvesting of salt hay. It was part of the "Undivided Common Lands" of the Town of Hingham, owned in common by all, in undivided fractional shares.

When Hingham settlers needed more land to start new farms and homesteads they decided to divide up the upland areas of Conahasset and convey them to qualified Hingham residents. In 1670 Lieut. Joshua Fisher of Dedham was hired to survey the uplands, and Hingham assigned the newly divided land among its townspeople based largely upon their existing wealth, or their personal status within the community. In order to see that each person would receive some usable land along with whatever swamp or ledge might be in the parcel received, the uplands of Conahasset were divided into four large sections called the First, Second, Third and Second Part of the Third Land Divisions. The First and Second Divisions were in the easterly part of the town, near the ocean, while the two parts of the Third Division were in the south and west interior area; part of which today is called Beechwood.

The First Division ran roughly north and south along the existing cart path that connected the Hingham settlement with that of Scituate (today's North and South Main Streets). Many of the parcels of the First Division extended one mile to the southwest of the cart path and were laid out in strips of various widths. The Second Division parcels extended in strips from the cart path easterly to the ocean, and the division bent inland to Lily Pond at its north end. Lieut. Fisher, surveying the area, left a gap between the northeast ends of the First Division lots and the southwest ends of the Second Division lots, on a line extending from Little Harbor to Ship Cove or Cohasset Harbor. Fisher's map or Plat of the Land Division labels this gap "Plain", or "Great Neck Plain", and it is the location of today's Town Common. The strip of land left by Lieut. Fisher remained a part of the Undivided Common Lands of the town; reserved for the use of all and owned by all. Thus the early Town Common came into existence, and, as the Joshua Fisher Plat shows, it was considerably larger than today's Common.

The old cart path from Hingham to Scituate became a highway before 1680, and by about 1700 houses were being constructed along its length. In 1713 new residents of Conahasset built their first Meetinghouse on Lieut. Fisher's "Plain", and shortly later their first schoolhouse nearby. Seafarers and Merchants of Cohasset continued to build homes along the edges of the old "Plain" through the 18th and 19th centuries, and some of the town's most stately homes are to be seen along the edges of today's Common. Georgian, Federal and Greek Revival houses abound.

In 1747 the Parish and Precinct replaced its original Meetinghouse on the Common with a larger one that still exists. The public school moved elsewhere, but in the last years of the 1700's a private Academy was founded at the east side of the Common. The Cohasset Academy remained there until 1857 when its building was moved to Beach Street, where today it can be seen as a private dwelling. The site of the Academy at Highland Avenue became the site of the 1857 Town Hall that still serves as the town's municipal office building and as a center of many community activities.

In 1824 the town's original Parish was torn asunder, causing the building of a new church across the street from the old; the new church built in that year is the 2nd Congregational. Together the two adjacent church buildings provide a striking look at two early New England architectural styles; the Georgian of the 1747 Meetinghouse and the Federal of the Congregational a few yards away. Third of the trio of large public buildings at the Common's center, the 1857 Town Hall, reflects architecture of its time; with Greek Revival and Italianate elements combined in a New England setting. In 1900 a third edifice joined the two early parish churches at the Common as St. Stephen's Episcopal Church was built atop the hill at the Common's south end. Gothic in architecture, it was designed by Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson of Boston, and built by Lyman D. Willcutt of Cohasset. St. Stephens' set of 56 carillon bells are world famous for their summer Sunday concerts begun in 1924.

Cohasset's Town Common, having its origins in earliest Colonial days, remains a unique focal point for its community, some three and a quarter centuries after it first appeared on Lieut. Fisher's Plat of Conahasset's uplands, made in 1670.

Perot pollster speaks

Republican leaders from Bristol, Barnstable, Plymouth and Norfolk Counties will hear Frank Luntz, TV commentator, Perot Pollster, now fellow at Harvard University Kennedy Institute of Politics, on how the GOP can win and enlist support from Perot followers Wednesday, May 19, at a dinner meeting at Handlebar Harry's Cordage Park, North Plymouth Division Chairman, Polly Logan of Cohasset, announced.

The meeting is open to the public with reservations and a social hour will be at 6 p.m. followed by dinner and meeting at 7 p.m. Logan added that candidates who ran at the local level, which she said is the GOP farmteam, will be special guests and commended for being involved in local government. Plans and dates for the 1994 State convention and future campaign schools to be held in Division 5 will be announced.

State House leaders, including House Minority Leader Peter Forman of Plymouth, also have been invited to update civic leaders on current legislation.

Logan noted that in addition to polling for candidates, Luntz recently completed a poll of college students who did not know names of Supreme Court judges, of their United States Senators or Congressmen. Luntz currently is a professor at the University of Pennsylvania and a frequent commentator on television and workshop moderator.

For reservations please call Donna Bowman of Yarmouth, 398-3079, Rita Kechejiam of Brockton, 588-7277, George Decas of Wareham, 947-4433, Margaret Perry of Dartmouth, 994-3858, or Polly Logan, 383-0031, or Mary Erwin, 696-3113.

Taxpayer group meets

The Statewide Association of Taxpayers (SWAT) holds its third regional conference in Duxbury Saturday May 15 at the Old Town Hall next to the First Parish Church on Route 3A, mid-way through Duxbury. The two part regional agenda runs from 2 to 5 p.m.

Barbara Anderson, executive director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, will discuss Term Limits II, developments in the graduated income tax initiative, and impacts from the education reform bill on Prop 2 1/2. Barbara will also discuss linkage among growing local taxpayer groups to enhance leverage.

Jayne Hanley will conduct a Prop 2 1/2 workshop with an analysis of new growth, revaluation, and setting the levy. Sample problems will demonstrate how property tax over-collection can occur. Participants will learn methods for reviewing tax rates and billings in their own towns. A pocket calculator is recommended.

A SWAT cookout will follow nearby for conference participants desiring to meet Barbara and Jayne informally. The public is welcome. Reservations are not required. For further details contact Tom Andrews at (617) 934-0409 evenings.

Putting polish on 'Congo Capers' on stage at CHS

The 50 or more performers and a sizeable backstage crew have entered an almost nightly rehearsal routine as director Jo Ann Fichtner and musical director Bob Leavitt put the finishing polish on "Congo Capers of '93," the musical-dance-variety show being presented by Cohasset's Second Congregational Church at Cohasset High School Saturday evening, May 22.

Kicklines, jitterbuggers, singers, World War II nostalgia generators are all going through their routines at the high school auditorium to make sure that everything is perfect when the curtain moves aside on one of the most ambitious shows attempted in town in recent years.

From her years of experience as a performer and director of many such shows locally and for other organizations, director Fichtner is adjusting dance moves, gestures and ensemble routines nightly as the cast patiently runs through the individual numbers countless times.

Some 25 singers and dancers will open the show with the World War II number which will feature some in original uniforms and all joining in songs and dances of the period. This will segue into a "Matchmaker" skit featuring songs by an octet of performers.

Other numbers to follow include "My Favorite Son" from the Will Rogers Revue, a raggy clothes routine, and a soloist presenting a Camelot medley. After a "Fugue of Tinhorns" by three singers and the entire company abjuring each other to "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat," the company will return for the finale song, "I Am But a Small Voice."

Tickets to the show, at $4 for adults and $2 for children and seniors, are available from a group headed by Margaret Bates, or from cast members or by calling the church, 383-0345. With the natural interest of families of cast members and the opportunity to see prominent local residents displaying various theatrical talents, a standing-room-only crowd is expected.

The ensemble in the dance number to the song, "La Jazz Hot" from the movie "Victoria Victoria" practice finale as they ready for the show on stage next Saturday.

Satin-clad ladies of "La Cage Aux Folies" number in "Congo Capers of '93" rehearse for the show which will be presented in the high school auditorium May 22. Left to right, Joanne Lehr, Dottie Myers, Pam DeLorenzo, Betty Ripley, and Sue Cunningham.

Doing the star turn of the song "My Favorite Son" in rehearsal for "Congo Capers of '93" are Gary and Debbie Anderson, backed by the ensemble. Number is from the "Will Rogers Revue." The show will go on at the Cohasset High School auditorium, Saturday evening May 22.

The Robert S. Pape Charitable Trust established by Robert S. Pape, a lifelong resident and graduate of Cohasset High School who died in 1991, is offering its second annual scholarship awards to Cohasset High School graduates. Mr. Pape created the trust to assist graduates of Cohasset High School in their pursuit of further vocational or professional training.

Eligible candidates must be graduates of Cohasset High or members of the 1993 graduating class. Financial assistance will be given for tuition, room, board, books and other expenses incurred in post high school training programs at a college, university, technical or vocational school. Applicants must also demonstrate financial need.

A written request for an application should be sent to:

A threat on both sea and land

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Third in a four-part series of local residents participating in the Senior Olympics in Quincy from May 10-15.

Jack Hubbard admits the location of his Beach Street home has much to do with his athletic preference. With a house on the bank of Little Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean beckoning just past Cunningham Bridge, is it really any wonder that the 68-year-old Hubbard is an avid boat racer? In a matter of minutes he can have his sliding-seat, rowing shell out of his garage and in the water for an hour workout.

"No way," said Hubbard when asked if he would have become a rowing enthusiast if he didn't have close access to the cozy inlet and ocean. "Having this water right here makes rowing such a natural thing. I'm just very fortunate to have it."

The solitude of a one-man boat also drew Hubbard, who still has the original Kayak he bought in 1960, to the sport. He likes the idea of not having anyone to rely on but himself for success and even failure. The solo rowers have a mutual admiration for each others' talents and effort in competition.

"Rowing in a single," he said, "everything's up to you. That has an appeal to me. Rowing with other people (in competition) in singles, there's a real comraderie that builds up. Men, women, it doesn't matter. I like the challenge of racing."

When rowing on the ocean, Hubbard keeps his eyes peeled for the wildlife he frequently encounters. In December, however, he was thrilled to see nearly one dozen Black Gillimont birds. Because the birds breed in Labrador they are rarely seen on the South Shore. Just last Wednesday Hubbard spotted several Harbor Seals in The Glades in North Scituate. He said it is rare the seals are in the area so late in the season, but expects they'll soon be swimming back north to Maine for the summer months.

Not only does Hubbard row but he is also has been running for several years. Last year he finished the Cohasset Roadrace-By-the-Sea. Hubbard covered the 10K course in an impressive 53 minutes. He finds that the rowing and running complement each other. The variety of two activities also keeps Hubbard motivated.

"When you get older," he said, "you find you don't have the energy to train every day in the sport of your choice."

With the cross-training he is currently doing, Hubbard believes he should do well in the one- and three-mile walks, as well as the half- and one-mile runs. The rowing exercises almost all the muscles in the body, particularly the upper thighs, back and arm muscles. Both activities also increase endurance which is essential in the events.

Hubbard has won his fair share of medals in the distant events over the years. But rather than putting them in a display case or on a wall in his upstairs study, he gave them to his five grandchildren.

"Kids are funny these days," he said with a smile. "They get a real kick out of them."

Hubbard will begin to prepare for a summer's worth of boat racing after the Senior Olympics. He is a member of the Alden Ocean Shell Association and spends much of the summer entering competitions along the New England coast. He especially likes the longer races, particularly the 21-mile BlackBurn Challenge, which winds its way around Cape Ann on the North Shore.

"It's the granddaddy of all long-distance races on the east coast," Hubbard said.

He has also had success in the prestigious Head of the Charles event. Hubbard generally finds river and lake racing boring, preferring instead the open sea. But the races on the Charles River attract so many local, national, and International racers, he can't stay away. Hubbard's best performance was when he finished fifth in the veteran's division of the singles in 1985. He not only races, but also finds the time to serve as race director of the popular Minot Light Round-About in September. The five-miler generally has a field of 25 rowers.

While learning to row is not that difficult, gaining efficiency at the sport is.

"It something anyone can learn in a couple of days," Hubbard said, "but it takes a lot of practice to do well. And it's something you can do at any age.

"There's a lot of finesse. It's not just brute force. If the stroke isn't done smoothly, you don't travel straight. You don't see where you're going so you really have to look around."

On the alternate days when he runs, Hubbard usually heads for Wampatuck State Park for a five- to six-mile training session. Wampatuck, he explained, has several roads which meander throughout the woods which serve as perfect routes for runners. Hubbard has seen an influx of wheelchair athletes, bikers and rollerbladers since he began training in the park. "It's so beautiful and peaceful," said Hubbard, who prefers running on the trails than the narrow streets around Cohasset.

Still, Hubbard appreciates the opportunity to run in a town as picturesque as Cohasset. While he enjoys the competition in both rowing and road racing, he looks forward to the solitude of the runs and the chance to observe the surroundings.

"You see a lot of people running with walkmens," Hubbard said. "There's so much to enjoy, especially around here with the ocean and woods. It can be so relaxing. I do a lot of thinking and planning."

When it comes to competition, however, Hubbard is all business and has a great desire to do well. Much of it he says has to do with his Irish heritage. He remembers watching the effort Clarence DeMar gave in winning an unprecedented seven Boston Marathons.

"I think it's (tenacity) a trait of the Irish people," Hubbard said. "They just don't give up, whether it's a Kennedy or (Boston Marathon great, Johnny) Kelley."

Hubbard may not be as famous as the Kennedys or Kelley, but he displays the same competitive nature. That should be enough to ensure his grandchildren a few more medals next week.

Jack Hubbard prepares for a rowing workout in his single-man shell. Hubbard's combination of rowing and running has paid off in the past with several medals in the distance walks and runs at the Senior Olympics competition in Quincy. (Photo by Lynn Lyman)

There are two high school winning streaks that deserve mention.

At Silver Lake, the boys' tennis team won its 50th straight Old Colony League match last week against Falmouth.

The streak stretches back almost three full years.

"I attribute the streak to our players," said Laker coach Terri Rakauskas. "Our captains Dana Gleason and Lou Nali have provided good leadership and it has rubbed off on the program. And I think when you keep on winning, you breed a winning atmosphere. People want to come out for the team and belong to a winner."

An even more impressive streak is held by the Norwell High girls' track team.

Monday May 10, the team goes for its 100th straight victory in a meet against Hanover.

While the Silver Lake winning streak has stood for three years, Norwell is closer to ten.

Norwell High has always had a strong track program and coach Bob Littlefield deserves credit for a job well done.

What UCLA is to college basketball, Norwell is to high school girls' track.

Friday night was prom night for many high schools.

For most teens it is a long night full of fun and excitement.

However, about the last thing anyone wants to do early the next morning is participate in a grueling athletic event.

That fact didn't deter the schedule makers as the State Coaches track meet was held in Norwell and the State Individual tennis championships were held in Hingham and Bridgewater.

Imagine the fun when you have to roll out of bed, probably still dressed in your tux or prom dress, and run the final leg of the two-mile relay.

Personally, I'd rather sleep late and forget about hurling on the principal's hush puppies the night before.

The first home run of the season is always the toughest, but Adam Sasso of the Cohasset Pony League squad Pirates has the monkey of his back. The 13-year-old slammed round-tripper No. 1 against Scituate last Saturday at Beechwood Field.

Hitting is a big part of softball but the Whitman-Hanson squad has learned this season it takes more than solid bats to win games. The Panthers, currently sporting a 2-9 record (2-7 in the Atlantic Coast League) have seven players with batting averages at .300 or better. Jen Tolson (.441), Katie Cruise (.429), Heather Raftery (.368), Arlene Wright (.345), Jill Hennelly (.333), Amanda Ransom (.321) and AnneMarie Melia (.308) have no reason to hang their heads with their performances at the plate. Unfortunately W-H won't be around come tournament time to unleash its bats in the South Sectionals.

Improved softball squad looking for pitching

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset head girls' softball coach Mike Gill likens pitching to shooting a basketball. The easy part of the two skills is learning the basic technique of throwing a softball to home plate and tossing a basketball towards the hoop. But to really excel and become a driving force at either, takes practice and more practice. Without it, an athlete stands little chance of reaching his or hers' full potential.

And it's pitching which has been the weakest link in the Skippers' 3-8 season. Gill has a rotation with little control problems, but it is the staff's velocity that needs improving if Cohasset is going to move up in the South Shore League ranks.

"We can play the same in the field with other teams," Gill said, "but they hit our pitchers pretty well when they come to bat, whereas we have to hit against fast pitching.

"That's the difference between the top of the division (SSL) and the second half."

Gill has used eighth and ninth graders on the mound this season in the hopes of developing them for the future. He said the best pitchers are those who work hard, prior to the spring in perfecting their velocity and motion to the plate. Gill would like to see the same from his pitching staff.

"Hopefully," he said, "they will choose to work on it during the summer and offseason."

While Gill is still looking for a consistent pitching staff, he has no qualms about Cohasset's hitting and fielding. Jenn Knowles, Bridgette Corkery, Becky Golden and Vicki Maynard have led the team offensively. The overall defense of the squad has improved drastically since the beginning of the season.

Take the Skippers' play against Norton for example. The Lancers had absolutely no problem with Cohasset in the opening game of the season, dragging the Skippers through a 22-0 nightmare. The second game between the two SSL squads was a different story altogether. A rejuvenated Skipper club punched out several key hits and played tight in the field. Cohasset eventually lost the game, but the final was a clear indication the team is moving in the right direction.

The same held true when Cohasett played Abington. The Green Wave beat Cohasset by more than 15 runs in the first meeting of the two teams, but the Skippers whittled the score to 12-7 in game No. 2.

"The defense has been improving all along," Gill said. "The games have definitely been more competitive."

Don't be surprised next season if the Skippers improve dramatically, when and if the team returns with an improved pitching staff. Cohasset's schedule could go as easy as a 3-point shot that hits nothing but net. Practice makes it possible.

Golf tourney set for Cohasset

Join Honorary Chairmen John Dennis, Sean McDonough, Will McDonough, and Glenn Ordway when the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will be fighting cancer from the fairways by hosting its First Annual Golf Tournament Monday, May 17 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The tournament will be a four-person scramble format, and both individual and foursome entries are welcome. Tee-off time is 12:30 p.m.

The entry fee of $150 per player includes a box lunch, greens fees, cart, prime rib or swordfish dinner, gifts and prizes. A Chevrolet S10 Blazer sponsored by Best Chevrolet will be awarded to anyone who gets a hole in one on the designated par 3 hole. Other prizes will include closest to the pin, longest drive and teams with lowest (net) scores. All proceeds from the tournament will go directly to the American Cancer Society.

The Committee Co-chairmen for this event are Julie Lacy, James Cox, M.D. and Barbara Nermoe. Committee members include Cheryl Barnes, Marianne Glassanos, Osborne Ingram, Fran Matthews, Justine Palmieri and Jane Strone. For further information, please call Julie Lacy at 749-9175 or Barbara Nermoe at 749-6439.

Little League is off and running

Opening Day's game between the 1992 Regular Season Champion Dodgers and the 1992 Post-Season Champion Pirates followed the annual inspirational talk by our own Ken Coleman, the exhilarating sound of Lily Sesito's Star Spangled Banner and the fine toss-in by Representative Mary Jeannette Murray. Fast action began when Matt Lewis pitched a one-hitter for the Dodgers, striking out 10 opponents for the win. Greg Bilton and Dennis Rooney chipped in with a two-run homer each. Ben Roine had the Pirates hit and Derek Bugley showed some smooth pitching for the patch-eyes.

The Dodgers along with the Red Sox hold a 4-0 record for the season to date. They are followed by the 3-2 Cardinals and 2-3 Pirates. The A's and the Met's have a win each. The big news this year is the expansion league Rangers. They are a team to watch and to watch out for this season.

Games are held most week nights at 6 p.m. at Barnes Field. Forget supper — there's plenty at the snack shack. Come out and watch a town full of talented kids have fun and play well. You might see (as was seen in the Dodger-Mets duel last week) Chris Pratt deliver a fine pitching performance for the Mets while well-known hurler Greg Taylor lends defensive talents at short stop. You might see once again "Big Al" Schwerin and "Steady Steve" Baker work the mound to steal the Pirates bounty for a win. You could catch sight of Ben Smoot, who covered the plate so well in last year's playoffs, hurling strikes into the ready glove of Andrew Kinch. You could watch for the outstanding fielding performance of rookies Andrew and Will McAuliffe. There's plenty to see, but if you miss a game, game reports submitted by coaches will be published here weekly.

Gymnastics courses continue

Session VI Gymnastics began Monday, May 10, and will continue Thursday May 20, and Friday May 21.

Call the center at 383-0088 for more information.

Classes are taught by Ruthann Sargent, Pattie Donahue, Tiffany Zaniboni, Susie O'Brien, and Karen Clemente.

Boating course accepting registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department is pleased to announce that telephone registrations will be accepted for a Spring, Safe Boating Course, to be conducted by Flotilla 1208, of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 383-6791.

The six-lesson Safe Boating Certification Program will commence on Tuesday evening, May 18, at 7:30 p.m., in Room 206, at Cohasset High School and meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m., through Tuesday, June 8. The program is open to both youth and adults and is essential, under Massachusetts Law, for the youth aged 15 and under, who plan to operate a craft powered by 25 H.P. or more. The cost for the Safe Boating Course is $15 per person, for textbook and materials supplied by the U.S.C.G.A. and town expenses. Children age 10 or so may take the course, however, it is suggested that they be accompanied by an adult. Adults who pass Safe Boating are eligible for insurance premium reductions on their boat insurance.

"Dance Into Summer," May 29

Mark your calendars today! The Cohasset Little League Dance will take place once again Saturday, May 29.

"Dance Into Summer" will feature the live band J.D., Billy and Ken at the Broad Cove Ballroom, Route 3A, in Hingham, from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. Tickets are $30/couple and will be available shortly.

There will be an organizational meeting Monday, May 10 at 8 p.m. at the home of Susan and John Carr. Anyone interested in helping on the dance committee, please call Susan Carr at 383-0331 or Jodi Caron at 383-9705.

Track team lacking numbers, not talent

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset's acting boys' track coach Tom O'Neil knew just what to expect from his team this spring. He was aware the Skippers, with their small turnout, would be hard-pressed to win a meet this season in the South Shore League. But on the same token, he was excited by the talent he had among his 22-man roster.

"My philosophy is to develop the kids I have," said the personable coach. "Kids can do pretty much what they want. I try to show them they are stronger and have more endurance than they think."

The work O'Neil and girls' coach Ron Emmons have done with their squads is commendable. Unlike the girls' squad, which has had a team for several seasons, the boys' team is still struggling to build a following after being resurrected for the 1992 campaign.

O'Neil has worked feverishly in trying to get the numbers up, but has been hurt by the fact that several athletes play sports outside of school in the springtime. He also understands, however, the kids have to make the choice. To try and play both would spread them too thin.

"It's really abusive to a kid to run him in two sports and expect him to carry a workload in school," O'Neil said.

Led by Ray Jones, the most versatile track athlete on the South Shore and one of the best in the state, Cohasset has received several key performances from different individuals.

Jones, who became the first male track athlete in school history to win a state championship during the '92 season, has qualified for the Class D Meet in the 220 (22.3), high hurdles (14.9), triple jump (45' 4") and the high jump (6' 2") has become an example for the other team members in what they can do if they work hard enough. O'Neil plans to try using Jones in the decathlon after the state meet.

"He's a very disciplined and focused kid," he said. "There's no limit to what kids can do."

Jones may be the best known athlete on the team, but there are several others having fine seasons for themselves.

Nick Terry ran a strategic race in the two-mile against Norton to take the victory. Terry positioned himself in third for seven laps before making his move on the gun lap and cruise in for the win.

O'Neil was as happy with Terry's tactics as the victory itself.

"It was a smart racing technique and an exciting race to watch," he said.

Miler Kevin Kilroy has shown he can also move down two laps and be effective, as his 2:15 in the 880 proved, while Brian Duffy and Ryan Sawchuck have been solid in the low hurdles. Jason Piersall has begun to pick up a handful of firsts and seconds in the 100 and long jump. Junior Parriss Cook's shot put and discus throws have also improved.

Cohasset Sailing Club applications available

Applications are now available to Cohasset residents for 1993 membership in the Cohasset Sailing Club. Family and senior citizen memberships are available. The Sailing Club offers junior and adult training on its fleet of 10, 15-foot Cape Cod Mercuries, six Turnabouts, and two Lasers.

Applicants for junior training need not have any prior sailing experience but must have completed fourth grade or be at least 10-years-old by Labor Day, 1993. Junior Training spans five levels, from basic to the more advanced, including Sailor, Mate, Skipper, Captain, and Sailing Master. The learning process includes a combination of classroom instruction and sailing. At the junior level, two-hour classes are given three days a week. Junior classes start Monday, June 28. Adult Training includes two levels: Basic and Intermediate Sailing. The adult training is given once a week Saturday or Sunday for three hours.

The Club's fleet is available for free sailing to any member who has the necessary sailing knowledge. Free sailing is 5 p.m. to sunset Monday through Thursday, 3 p.m. to sunset Friday, and 12 p.m. to sunset on weekends.

Dock spaces are available at the Sailing Club for individuals who would like to tie up their dinghies. Boats up to 12 feet in length and up to 5 feet in beam can be accommodated. There are also some float berths for board boats.

This year's calendar of special events includes a Hot Dog Jamboree to get acquainted Tuesday, June 29; the Lobster Festival Saturday, August 7; and the Awards Ceremonies with clam chowder Saturday, August 29.

Applications have been mailed out to residences of all Cohasset voters. If you did not receive an application, one can be picked up at the Cohasset Library, the Recreation Department office at Town Hall, or by calling Kevin O'Connor at 383-1290.

Membership applications should be mailed to the Cohasset Sailing Club, Inc., P.O. Box 111, Cohasset, MA 02025 and are due by June 1, 1993.

Hockey boosters to hold yard sale May 15

The Cohasset Hockey Boosters will have a spectacular yard sale Saturday, May 15 (rain date Sunday, May 16) at 482 Jerusalem Road from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

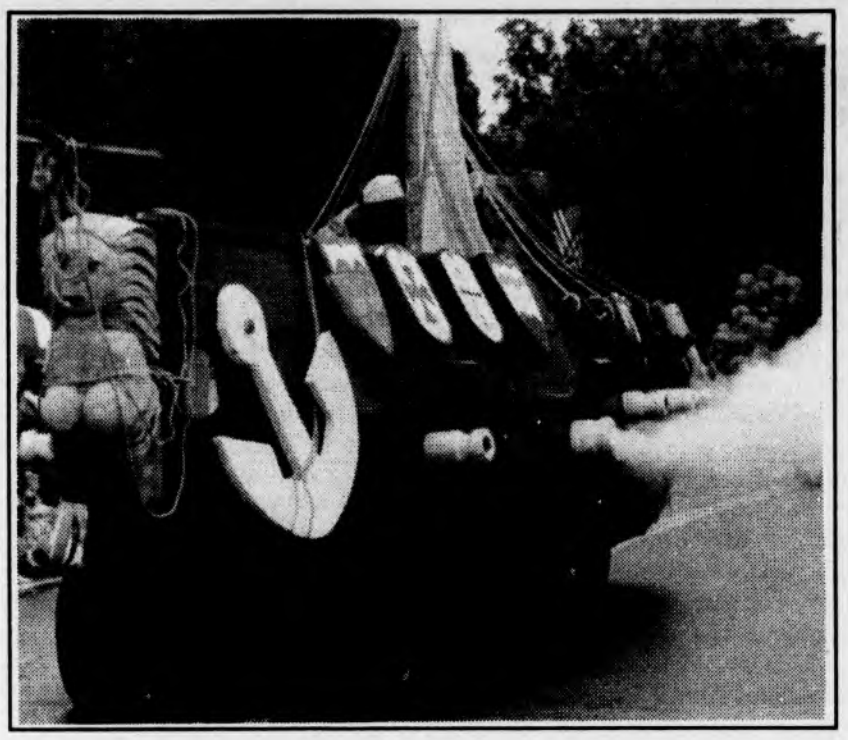
Art festival/harborfest scheduled for June 18-20

Upholding its tradition as the oldest, consecutive running art festival in the country, the 38th South Shore Art Center Art Festival is June 18-20 along with the third annual Cohasset Harborfest on Cohasset Common.

A regional celebration of creativity, community spirit and cooperation, Art Festival/Harborfest opens from 1 to 8 p.m., Friday, June 18, and continues from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday, June 19 and from noon to 5 pm., Sunday, June 20.

Art Festival/Harborfest features five art exhibitions and a distinctive artisans market all three days, a pancake breakfast at 8 a.m. Saturday morning ($4). Blessing of the Fleet at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, followed by a parade at 2:30 p.m. and chowder tasting contest at 3 p.m. ($4). The Festival gala reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday evening in the Art Center's Bancroft Gallery, which will feature the President's Choice Exhibition, Bits & Pieces: Artists Using Computers. Tickets are $15; proceeds benefit the Art Center's educational programs.

Several new attractions have been added this year, including a Young Artists Exhibition for four to 18 year olds. The new art exhibition will be displayed in a tent outside the Art Center at 119 Ripley Road. An entertainment stage on the Common will host a full schedule of concerts, skits, and demonstrations. Among those performing will be the Granite City Jazz Band, Frank Shooshan Big Band, Cohasset High School's junior and senior choruses, the South Shore Men of Harmony, and the Cohasset Community Center's ballet and jazz, gymnastics, aerobics and street dancing groups.



Jim Lagrotteria fires off a canon in the 'Nina, Piñta and Santa Maria' during last summer's Harborfest parade.

Continual art demonstrations will be held in four locations over the three-day period illustrating a variety of art mediums and techniques. Paint-along opportunities will also be scheduled on the Common.

This year's Family Model Boat Building activity, sponsored by Ernst and Young, will culminate in a race of the boats on the Common pond. The boat building will start at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Creativity Tent on the Common with the race at 3:30 pm. Pre-registration is required by Friday, June 18; please call 383-9548.

Festive trolleys will provide free transportation to and from Art Festival/Harborfest activities at the Common and 119 Ripley Road and the South Shore Music Circus parking lot, where parking is free.

Entrance to Art Festival/Harborfest is free as are most activities. Buttons, offering discounts on some activities with fees, are being sold for $10 at the Art Center and various Cohasset businesses who will also offer discounts during Art Festival/Harborfest week. For more information, please call (617)383-9548.

Dance company tryouts

An audition will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 15 at the Workout Club of Hingham for Dance Visions, an amateur dance company based on the South Shore.

The director and choreographer, Donna Joyce, invites all levels to participate from beginner to advanced. Both males and females are welcome but participants must be at least 18 years old. Some experience in jazz, ballet, modern and/or funk is preferred, but not required. Rehearsals are held Tuesday nights and/or Saturday afternoons.

For more information you may contact the Workout Club of Hingham at (617) 740-4909 and ask for Donna, Daryl or Dave.

Dance into summer

Cohasset Little League presents "Dance Into Summer" with the fantastic live band, J.D., Billy and Ken, Saturday, May 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Broad Cove Ballroom, Route 3A in Hingham.

Tickets are $30 per couple. Anyone interested in helping on the dance committee, please call Susan Carr at 383-0331 or Jodi Caron at 383-9705. Tickets may be purchased through coaches or at the Cohasset Community Center.

Appalachian tales heard

Imagine an audience of wide-eyed kids, an energetic, spiky blond storyteller, mixed with dramatic tales and song. You'll have an evening to remember, when Master Storyteller Jennifer Justice, named in "Boston Women's Magazine's" list of "100 Most Interesting Women, transports children and adults alike to her native Appalachia and elsewhere. Please come Sunday, May 16 at 7 p.m. to the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall, for a delightful evening of wild imagination.

Tickets are $8, or $5 for children 12 and under. The performance will last about 45 minutes, followed by refreshments. Tickets may be available at the door, but seating is limited, so buy your tickets now, by calling Rev. Gary Ritts (383-0345) or Ami Argus (383-9325).

Bring the whole family. Jennifer Justice's storytelling performance appeals to children and adults alike. All proceeds will benefit the Cohasset High School student service project in Appalachia this summer, so if you come Sunday, you'll be a part of this worthwhile project too.

Don't miss storyteller Jennifer Justice, at 7 p.m., May 16 at the Second Congregational Church.

Saturday fun slated

Sign ups have started for a Saturday morning program for kids ages three, four, and five, meeting from 9 to 10:30 a.m., Saturdays May 29 through June 19 at the Osgood School.

The fee is $20 for the first child and $10 for each sibling.

The program is designed to help develop and reinforce both social and motor skills through play and peer group interaction.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791 to register.

Smoke-free dances set

South Shore Singles, a non-profit social and support group sponsored by the First Parish Unitarian Church in Norwell, will host two smoke-free dances in May, at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St. in Hingham.

The first dance will be Friday, May 14, and the second dance, our "14th anniversary dance," will be Friday, May 28. Both dances will be smoke-free and will feature D.J. music from 8:30 p.m. until 12:30 a.m.

Society museums to open for summer season

By David H. Wadsworth
Senior Curator of The Cohasset Historical Society

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset center will open for their summer season Tuesday, June 1. The Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House will be open from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays through September. Admission to the Elm Street historical buildings is free of charge, and donations will be accepted.

A costume exhibit at the Lothrup House will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., May 31, and on June 18-20 from 1 to 3 p.m. or by appointment from May 17-June 21 by calling Martha Hurtig, chairman of the costume committee at 383-0530.

The Maritime Museum, an 18th century building once Samuel and John Bates' ship chandlery, contains unique exhibits recalling Cohasset's long seafaring heritage during the great "Age of Sail" with collections related to the town's era of mackerel fishing and foreign trade when the town's mariners traveled far and wide to seek wealth and adventure on the oceans of the world. The town's 19th century mackerel fishing fleets and merchant vessels together formed a vital part of the town's economy and industry during the Age of Sail and the Maritime Museum gives an unusual glimpse into that unique era now long past. Ship models and decorative carvings, gear and equipment of the mackerel fleets, mementos from distant lands brought home by Cohasset's world traveling seafarers can be seen at the Maritime Museum. The story of shipbuilding, shipwrecks and lifesaving on our shores is portrayed in pictures and artifacts, as is the unusual story of the two lighthouses on Minot's Ledge just off our shores. Both the ill-fated first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse and the present second lighthouse are shown in the fascinating saga of this famous sea - rock light. Charts, documents, prints and pictures of Cohasset's seafaring centuries also are on exhibit.

The Maritime Museum also includes general historical collections of numerous types from early Cohasset. Its second floor features Indian tools of stone, early housewright's and cordwainer's tools, Cohasset school desks of the 17th, 19th and early 20th centuries, memorabilia of Cohasset's Lincoln family who were ancestors of President Abraham Lincoln, and many other fascinating historical artifacts related to early life in this small New England seacoast village.

Next door to the Maritime Museum on Elm Street at Cohasset the Capt. John Wilson Historical House, built by housewright David Nichols in 1810 for Capt. Wilson, was the first historical museum in Cohasset and represents an early Cohasset seafarer's house. Furnished with early household items, toys, prints and artworks from other early Cohasset homes it presents the ambience of an early 19th century family dwelling. The Capt. Wilson House itself remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw, who presented it to the Historical Society in 1936. Its post and beam construction is typical of the early era of home construction and can be clearly seen. Unique to the house is its second floor kitchen with original cooking fireplace. Capt. Wilson is said to have maintained a small chandlery store in the first floor, with family living quarters above. A unique built-in early 19th century "corner clock" seen on the second floor originated in a nearby home and was presented to the Society to furnish its museum. Unusual windows having sashes of 10 above 15 panes are among other unusual features of this early "Sea Captain's" home.

Additionally the Historical Society's Costumes Committee will be presenting an exhibit of antique wedding gowns from the Society's extensive collection of 19th and early 20th century clothing, at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset beginning Tuesday, May 17 and running through the month of June. An exhibit of gowns representing styles of the past has been prepared by Marjorie Ladd, Tinka McLean, Polly Blanchard and Amy Golden of the Costumes Committee. The Caleb Lothrop House is a brick-ended Federal home dating from 1821 and is maintained as an historical house and headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society. Admission to the special exhibit at Lothrop House is free of charge. The Society's telephone is 383- 6930.

Farmers Market opens

The Hingham Farmers Market will open for its 17th season Saturday, May 15. The market, located on Station Street between North Street and Water Street, is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays only through June 16, when it will also be held on Wednesdays until the last Saturday in October.

The market features locally grown produce from gardeners and growers in this area. Growers may call Dave Sturgis at 749-4643 for selling information.

Concerns of elderly

South Shore Elder Services, Inc. (SSES) in cooperation with the Cohasset Council on Aging is taking aim at identifying the most pressing concerns of older Cohasset citizens by convening a Community Focus Group Meeting to discuss elder needs.

The Community Focus Group Meeting takes place Wednesday, May 19, from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Council on Aging, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset.

A light dinner will be served promptly at 5 p.m., immediately followed by a discussion of the most pressing needs of Cohasset elderly.

"The primary reason for these meetings is to identify the needs of elders living in Cohasset and to begin developing strategies to help meet those needs," said Edward J. Flynn, Jr., Executive Director of SSES.

"We have seen the Cohasset elderly population increase by over 11 percent during the past decade," explained Kathy Bryanton, director of Cohasset Council on Aging. "As this population continues to grow, it becomes even more important to identify and target Council on Aging services towards the most pressing elder needs."

Participation in this community meeting is open to anyone with a sincere interest in the concerns of Cohasset elders. Invited participants include Cohasset elders and their families, caregivers, elder service providers, selectmen, legislators, and local Cohasset community and business leaders.

As the South Shore Area Agency on Aging, SSES has taken the lead in facilitating this exciting community event and plans to convene similar focus group meetings in each of the 11 communities in its service area. SSES will prepare a written summary report of needs identified through these regional community meetings.

Anyone planning to attend the Cohasset Community Focus Group Meeting must call the Cohasset Council on Aging, 383-9112 by May 12, to make a dinner reservation. For more information on this event, call Kathy Bryanton, 383-9112 or Jenny Vanasse, SSES, at 848-3910.

Contestants wanted

Len Kaplan, President of the Ms. Senior Sweetheart of America Pageants, recently announced his plans for the fifth statewide Massachusetts Pageant. The pageant will be in October or November in the beautiful 1400-seat Nagle Auditorium of B.M.C., Durfee High School in Fall River, Massachusetts.

Contestants must be 59 years of age or older and residents of Massachusetts. The 1992 pageant consisted of 18 ladies from throughout the state ranging in age from 62 to 90.

Ladies with a zest for life, a possible talent, willing to make an appearance in an evening gown and who have outgoing personalities, would make great contestants.

The winner is presented with flowers, a trophy and is crowned with a beautiful tiara. She will also win a trip for two plus the title of Ms. Senior Sweetheart of Massachusetts 1993-94.

Proceeds from the show will go to the Massachusetts Lions Eye Research Center which has become the pageant's official charitable organization.

Contestants will have the opportunity to spend a week at one of our lovely, local motels which will become the official headquarters for the pageant. They would be taken to some of the areas finest restaurants for meals, and, time permitting, will visit some of the areas many local points of interest.

The ladies will be carefully prepared for the pageant and will gather memories that will last forever.

The whole concept of the pageant is to enforce the fact that life doesn't have to wind down as you approach 60 and that there's a whole new world out there for the senior if she will reach out for it. The golden years can be beautiful.

A luncheon for all prospective contestants will be held sometime in late July.

Anyone interested and desiring more information can contact Jean Moffett, Ms.Senior Sweetheart of Greater Fall River 1987-88 and now Assistant to the President, at 1 (508) 672-7746 or Len Kaplan, President at 1 (508) 675-0249.

Council on Aging news

SERVICES FOR SENIORS JOB REGISTRY: Services for Seniors is a job registry that maintains a list of private pay workers offering in-home support services to seniors. Workers' names are provided free of charge to elders or family members caring for elders at home. Rates are directly negotiable by the client with the workers. Workers include homemakers, home health aides, and private duty nurses. Their services include assistance with personal care, meal preparation, light housekeeping, companionship and/or respite care. To learn more about the program, call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

VISION FOUNDATION INC.: Are you experiencing problems with your vision that make it difficult for you to read your mail, cook your meals, or perform other tasks? If so, a rehabilitation teacher from Vision Foundation can visit with you to help you make the most of your usable sight. This help is for seniors 60 years or older. Vision Foundation is a nonprofit United Way Agency. For further information please call 1-926-4232.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Council on Aging provides transportation to the Senior Center for lunch Tuesdays and Thursdays. A hot, nutritious meal will be served to senior citizens for a donation of $1.50. Lunch reservations must be made before noon the preceding day. Those in need of transportation should notify the Center. To make lunch reservations, call the center at 383-9112.

Volunteers are needed to help Lindsay in the kitchen on Thursdays. If you can spare a few hours, please call Lindsay at 383-9112.

GO TO THE RACES! One-day trip to Rockingham Park. Leave the center at 9:30 a.m., come along and enjoy a great day including an all-you-can-eat buffet. Cost $39. Return home about 5:30 p.m. Make checks payable to the Friends of Cohasset Council on Aging. Payment due before June 1.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Homestead Exemption for those under 65 years of age and not disabled is $125,000. For anyone over 65 or disabled, it is $200,000. If you want to learn more about this act, please call the Council on Aging and ask for Kathy or Sue at 383-9116.

HEALTH CARE PROXY FORMS:

These forms are also available at the center. A Health Care Proxy is a legally recognized document which allows you to appoint someone you trust to make medical treatment decisions for you if you lose the ability to decide for yourself. There are many interesting points to this law, so call Kathy Glenzel at 383-9116.

TRANSPORTATION SERVICE: The shuttle is available to all residents who are 60 years or older. Monday, Wednesday and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for grocery shopping. Sunday mornings you can ride to church by calling Marion Smith at 383-0431.

MEDICAL TRIPS: Call FISH at 545-7073. Volunteers are available to drive Cohasset residents to medical appointments.

AARP to meet

The next meeting of the South Shore Hingham Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons is 1:30 p.m., Thursday, May 27 at the Sons of Italy Hall, Rte. 3A, Hingham.

This is the annual meeting when officers and directors will be elected for 1993-94. The guest speaker is Robert A. Pozniak, director of public affairs, who will discuss programs and services at the South Shore Hospital. Refreshments will be served.

Senior tribute slated

Massachusetts Association of Older Americans (MAOA) and the University of Massachusetts at Boston, are co-sponsoring a 25th Anniversary Tribute and Public Policy Forum Saturday, May 15, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the main ballroom of the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

This event will commemorate the 25th anniversary of the Senior Power Rally which was held at Suffolk Downs Race Track in 1968 and to pay tribute to the late Frank J. Manning, one of the founders of MAOA and chief organizer of the 1968 event. As a result of the rally and Frank Manning's tireless efforts, Massachusetts established the country's first State Office on Aging, now known as the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

Keynote speaker will be Senator Edward M. Kennedy. Other featured speakers are: Congressman Barney Frank, Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, former Governor Michael Dukakis, Hubert Jones, of Boston University School of Social Work; Franklin Ollivierre, Secretary of Elder Affairs; former Senators Jack Backman and Patricia McGovern; Chancellor Sherry Penney of University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Mistress of ceremonies will be media personality, former Representative Marjorie Clapprood.

The public is invited to attend. Admission is free and a free box lunch will be served. To make a reservation call 617-426-0804.

CHARITABLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust is accepting applications from charitable organizations which provide nursing care, day care, respite care or home care for low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm. To be eligible for the grant award the charitable organization must be exempt from taxation and must be able to use the funds in Plymouth County and contiguous towns. Priority will be given to those programs which offer direct aid to eligible individuals in their homes by maintaining such individuals in his or her home so as to improve the quality of home life.

Funds are also available to assist in the design, construction and equipment of facilities for use by low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm so as to improve the quality of their living arrangements. Individuals are not eligible for funding. The deadline for submitting a completed application is June 15, 1993.

Applications are available by sending a written request to:

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust, c/o Deborah A. Montgomery, Trust Administrator, Roche, Carens & DeGiacomo, One Post Office Square, Boston, MA 02109

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 93P1100E1

Estate of AMBROSE CRAY late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that PHYLLIS M. CRAY of CHARLOTTESVILLE in the State of VIRGINIA and PIERCE O. CRAY of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on June 9, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-eighth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

SHERIFF'S SALE
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold by Public Auction on Wednesday the 9th day of June A.D. 1993 at 11:00 o'clock A.M. at the Deputy Sheriffs Office at 630 High Street in Dedham in said County of Norfolk, all the right, title and interest which Richard LaFountain aka Richard LaFontaine had (not exempt by law from attachment or levy on execution) on the 22nd day of March A.D. 1993 at 9:00 o'clock A.M., the time when the same was seized on execution in and to the following described real estate:

The following described land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts:

The land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, being shown as Lot 1 on a plan entitled "Redivision of Land in Cohasset, Mass.," Surveyed for D.S. Kennedy and Co. Scale: 40 feet to an inch. March 17, 1953, Lewis W. Perkins and Son, Eng'rs., Hingham, Mass., recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 3158, Page 463. Said Lot contains .84 acres, according to said plan.

Said parcel is hereby conveyed subject to the twenty foot wide right of way as shown on said plan and subject also to all other encumbrances of record.

Being the same premises conveyed to me as Trustee by Russell D. Burbridge and Nancy W. Fitzgerald by deed dated February 28, 1990, recorded with said deeds in Book 8376, Page 129. Said deed incorrectly referred to the Trustee as Noel F. Collins instead of F. Noel Collins. Also see resignation of Sally L. Hennessey as Trustee, recorded herewith.

Barbara A. Chiasson
Deputy Sheriff

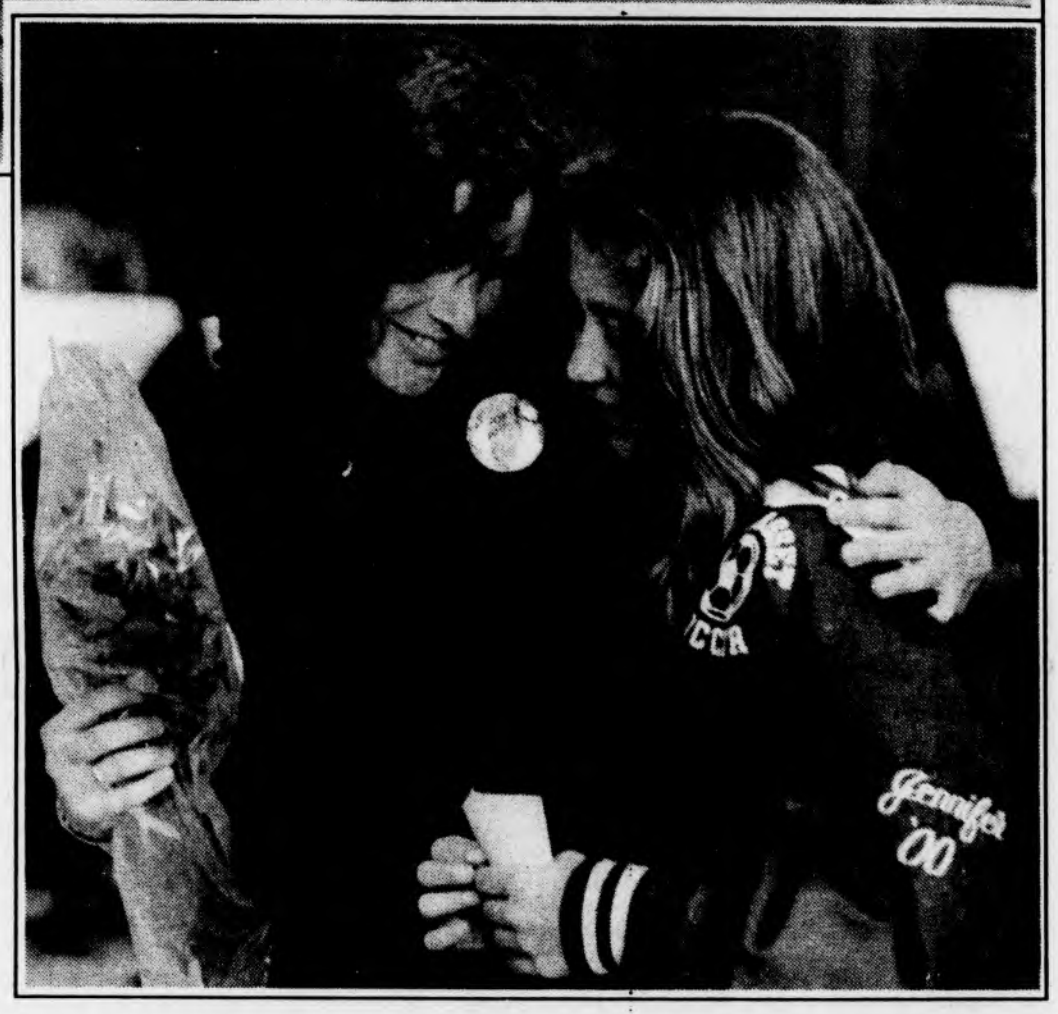
Staff photos/Alan Chapman



Above, fourth-grade teacher Dorothy McDonald gets applause from her fellow teachers during a special ceremony honoring the staff at Deer Hill last week. The event was planned in conjunction with "Teacher Appreciation Week." A student from each home room spoke about what makes his or her teacher special and then each teacher was presented with a rose. Right, art teacher Ann Berman hugs Jennifer Chastain after receiving her rose during a special ceremony honoring the teachers at Deer Hill last week.

Release day update

The Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill teachers used release day last month to begin the student placement process for next year. The staff met by grade level to review each student's progress and to develop heterogeneous homerooms for the next grade. There are several other stages in the placement process and this release day was an important element of that process.

Throughout this year, the Jr./Sr. High School teachers have focused on the school culture themes of Experimentation, Reaching Out to the Knowledge Bases and Collegiality. They are continuing a year-long exploration of innovative strategies of instruction and assessment in order to meet these objectives. Staff members have chosen specific topics and have used In-Service time to develop those topics.

For example, members of the Social Studies Department, Patricia Keenan, Scott Newkirk, Don Kelly, Ted MacDermott and Joe Bouchard, have been reviewing strategies for teaching critical thinking, writing and citizenship skills throughout the curriculum.

Jack Buckley, the Alternative School director, is investigating the use of portfolio assessments for his students. Also, he is developing a new social studies curriculum for the Alternative School.

Gail Givale and Florence Ely, special needs teachers, have used release time to create computerized lists of profiles, quarterly reports, assessments and Individualized Educational Plans. This new system will customize, for Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, the paperwork required for Chapter 766.

The next Early Release Day is May 13.

Art Favorites 1993

Deer Hill School will host a Gala Art Opening, at 7 p.m., Thursday, May 13 at the school. The show entitled "Favorites 1993" represents the artwork of all Deer Hill students. Each one has chosen his or her favorite artwork of the year to be included in this exhibit.

All are invited to attend. For more information, please call Ann Berman, art teacher, at 383-6115.

Arts double-header

Thursday, May 20, Cohasset High School hosts a grand opening for the new Writing Lab, before their annual Arts Recognition Night from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., all parents and students grades six through 12, are invited to tour the Writing Lab, with special demonstrations by teachers and students. In addition, exhibits of innovative student work, blending art and technology, will be displayed in the Senior Study.

After the Arts Open House, the CHS Arts Boosters Club will host the annual Arts Recognition Night in the cafeteria. Approximately 200 Senior High School students, their parents, and teachers will gather to honor CHS artists, dramatists, musicians, writers, and all the wonderfully creative students involved in the arts.

Individual invitations are mailed to each parent of students to be recognized by arts teachers Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Colleen Wheeler, and Jo-Ellen Wood.

business notes

Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker recently held its annual awards ceremony at the Vista Hotel in Waltham to honor sales associates for their achievement in residential sales in 1992.

Laurajean McDonald and Claire Watts of the Cohasset office were awarded company's Silver Circle for achievement in sales.

Martha Freeman, Joyce Hoffman, and Penny O'Brien of the Cohasset office were awarded the company's Bronze Circle for achievement in sales.

In addition O'Brien was named a member of the President's club, which honors those sales associates who have been involved in 10 or more listings sold.

William E. Kiley, Jr., president of Hunneman, presented the awards.

Cohasset Savings Banks reported April 12 net income of $184,000, of 18 cents a share, for the first quarter ending March 31, marking the seventh successive profitable quarter.

The 1993 first quarter results compare with net income for the first quarter of 1992 of $312,000, or 31 cents per share, of which all but $12,000, or one cent per share resulted from the cumulative effect of a change in accounting principle. The 1993 first quarter net income came from operations.

Net interest income, after provision for loan losses, was $766,000 for the quarter ended March 31, compared with $539,000 for the 1992 first quarter. Total operating expenses increased from $571,000 in the 192 first quarter to $596,000 for the quarter ended March 31, 1993, largely as a result of foreclosed real estate expenses, while general and administrative expenses have declined.

Claire Shields

Shields is also a past president of the Women's Council of Realtors and past treasurer of the state chapter of Certified Residential specialists.

"Claire is a natural addition to our Cohasset office," says Chris Ford, president. "Over the years we have seen many of the area's top performers move to Hallmark 100 Properties Ltd. where they can experience the highest levels of independence and the satisfaction of being part of a true 'all-Pro Team' and Claire Shields certainly fits into that category."

❐ Cathy Dwyer, vice president of Dwyer's Cleaning Spot, with nine locations on the South Shore, has been elected to serve on the board of directors of the North East Fabricare Association (NEFA). NEFA's membership is comprised of 100-plus owners of dry-cleaners and laundries throughout New England and New York.

Dwyer resides in Randolph with her husband Sandy, and her nine-month old son, Jamie. She is concluding a one-year term as vice president of the Cohasset Rotary. In June she will take over the reigns of the Cohasset Rotary as its first woman president.

Dwyer's Cleaning Spot, which Dwyer co-manages with her brother, Robert, has nine locations on the South Shore including Cohasset.

❐ Kim Harrington of Cohasset has been named retail manager of Hingham Business Center, Inc., 86 North St., Hingham. Her duties include overseeing the day-to-day operations of the store, including sales and marketing promotions.

Kim Harrington

Harrington studied business management at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, Daytona Beach, FL and at the Harvard Extension School.

❐ Romas T. "Sonny" White, advertising director of Coastal Cruising announces the appointment of John K. Bryant of Cohasset as Northeast advertising manger.

Bryant is an experience yachtsman with many years in the advertising field. He will develop new accounts and build circulation of Coastal Cruising, "The Magazine of Achievable Dreams" which is published in Beaufort, N.C. and is enjoyed by yachtsmen on the east coast.

❐ The Mediplex Group, a national provider of subacute health-care services based in Wellesley, recently appointed Edmund A. Steimle, Jr. as director of operations for long-term care services in Massachusetts.

A Cohasset resident, Steimle holds a bachelor of arts degree from Hamilton College and a master of business administration degree from Suffolk University and is affiliated with numerous health-care associations.

❐ Tanna Kasperowicz of Cohasset has joined the staff of Dubin Advertising/Public Relations, Weymouth as an account executive. Her duties include arranging publicity opportunities for clients, writing and placing news releases and development of marketing materials.

Tanna Kasperowicz

Prior to joining Dubin Advertising, Kasperowicz served as a sales representative for The Mariner Newspapers. Kasperowicz lives in Cohasset with her husband, Ray, and their two sons.

❐ Cohasset resident Richard E. Horn has joined BayBank Boston as senior vice president in Capital Markets. In this position, Horn is responsible for corporate and public finance, funds management, and investment sales.

Horn holds a masters degree in business administration from Northeastern University and a bachelor of arts degree in economics from Bowdoin College. He serves as treasurer of the Cohasset Yacht Club.

❐ Matt Trask, the founder of Communica, Inc. a consulting and design services company based in Bourne, MA that includes both software and hardware development, was recently featured in the cover story of Midnight Engineering magazine. Midnight Engineering is a nationally distributed computer industry journal.

Trask grew up in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High School. His parents, Harry and Joan Trask, still live in town.

Grassroots support urged to fight tax change

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Anyone who thinks the statewide tax watchdog group Citizens for Limited Taxation has lost any of its resolve should think again.

CLT — best known for its ongoing fight on Beacon Hill to safeguard the tenets of Proposition 2-1/2 a law enacted more than a decade ago out of citizen anger about soaring property taxes — is gearing up for another statewide battle.

There's a very good chance that the 'graduated income tax initiative' — will be on the ballot in 1994, says CLT director Barbara Anderson.

Saying it will be sold under the "flawed sales gimmick" of fairness, CLT opposes the graduated tax proposal claiming it will increase taxes for all wage earners and weaken their political leverage as a united block which exists under the current single-tax rate structure.

CLT is starting now to garner grass roots' support across the state. Through local organizations and individual anti-tax activists, CLT hopes to spread the word about the graduated income tax and win enough 'no' votes in 1994 to defeat the ballot question.

Anderson spoke at a regional conference Saturday in Duxbury, hosted by the year-old, Plymouth-based

Lacrosse squad carrying hot hand leading to tourney

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They're just a small group out of a little over 100 boys, but at 12-1 on the season, the Cohasset High School lacrosse team carries a big stick they plan to unleash on the rest of the state when the post-season tournament starts on May 29.

The Skippers still have three games to play, but have long since qualified for the tournament, which requires that a squad win 59 percent of its games. Cohasset has been victorious in 92.3% of its contests. A tournament bid never really was a worry to head coach Ken Ekberg.

What the team does in the elite meetings is, however.

"I hope we could get beyond one game in the playoffs," Ekberg said. "Beyond that, it's let the cards fall where they may.

"This week and next week will determine a large number of the entries."

Cohasset has shown marked improvement through the course of the season and appear to be peaking at the opportune time. After a strong, double-overtime loss to

Local library is a public relations winner

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is on a roll!

It put its stuff up against the likes of the Boston Public Library and libraries in places like Lexington and Wellesley and left them behind.

Cohasset's library recently competed against more than 100 other libraries to win first place in the 1993 Massachusetts Library Association Public Relations Awards Contest in the 'coordinated campaign' category.

The coordinated campaign was the perfect category for the Friends whose efforts to keep the library in the public eye include a weekly column in the Cohasset Mariner as well as new library card and book bag which both sport the new weather vane logo.

The Friends' portfolio, which included photographs of the library, cupola and weather vane; and copies of the weekly column, was delivered to the MLA for the contest enclosed in one of the new book bags.

Library Director Richard Hayes says libraries need to reach out to the public.

"Libraries usually don't do a very good job of letting people know what the library is up to," he says. "With so much competition for people's time, libraries need to be more aggressive."

Worms, moths hatch

The Tree, Park and Cemetery Department announced that Canker Worms and Gypsy Moths have hatched. They will defoliate the trees shortly. It is suggested that you hire private contractors to spray your trees as the town does not spray.

Lead and copper testing

In cooperation with the Department of Environmental Protection and in compliance with the State and Federal Safe Drinking Water Act of 1986, as amended, the Cohasset Water Department has completed the first round of mandatory lead and copper testing.

Level-one testing was conducted throughout the towns distribution system to include both private residences and public buildings that may or may not have had a high possibility of lead and copper contamination due to construction techniques, age, material etc.

Testing sites were selected through historical data and the need to canvas all areas of the town.

Sites as diverse as North and South Main St., Beechwood St., Atlantic Ave., Jerusalem Road, Beach and Border streets and the downtown area along with the three school systems were selected. All the samples tested by an independent laboratory, Oliveira Environmental Laboratories Inc., contained levels of lead and copper that were undetectable or well below the maximum contamination level as set forth by the Safe Drinking Water Act. These results are available for public review at the Cohasset Water Department treatment facility located at 339 King St., Cohasset.

Cohasset blood drive

The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Blood Drive is Tuesday, June 1.

The drive takes place at The First Parish House on Cohasset Common from 2 to 7 p.m. Past donors will receive a scheduling call from their group promoter.

New donors are invited to call the Cohasset Blood Drive chairpersons, Shirley and Jack Cibelli, at 383-2974.

The Red Cross blood supplies are getting low. Cohasset was recently honored by the Red Cross for having the most successful community blood drives in the area. Let's continue the record and give the precious gift of life June 1.

Ready to serve — Volunteers on the opening day of the new Cohasset Food Pantry, May 4, display some of the foodstuffs available at the counter of the pantry in the basement of the Second Congregational Church. L-R, are Margie Steele, who is chair of the Pantry's steering committee, and Annette Sawchuk, Bob Thompson, and Eve Sedell. The Food Pantry is open every Tuesday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 7-8 p.m. to provide food assistance to Cohasset residents. For information, please call 383-0345.

Temp. sergeant named

John C. Conte is the town's newest police sergeant.

Selectmen appointed him as temporary sergeant Monday. The Civil Service Commission supplied a list for a temporary appointment because there's an appeal pending on the list for a permanent appointment. Conte's name is on both lists.

Conte, 36, was the only name on the temporary appointment list.

During the interview, Conte said he would bring his experience in dealing with people to the job. He said the supervisory skills required for a sergeant come from experience.

Conte, whose father Carmelo Conte recently retired from the Cohasset Police Department, joined the force in 1983 and is a graduate of Cohasset High and Northeastern University.

The sergeant vacancy was created when former Sgt. Brian W. Noonan was recently promoted to police chief.

Harbor board applicants

Selectmen have their work cut out for them.

So far, five fishermen have applied for one spot on the harbor committee.

Monday the board interviewed Scott Herzog, Herbert Jason, and Matthew Marr. At a prior meeting, they quizzed applicants Manuel Salvador and Paul Figueiredo.

Herzog said he was concerned with the future of the harbor and harbor safety. He said he had a good rapport with other fishermen and therefore could provide a voice for them on the committee.

Herbert Jason said he'd like to see tourism at the harbor encouraged. He was concerned about litter that is thrown overboard and would help organize a clean up effort.

Matthew Marr said he was concerned about the lack of trash pick up at the harbor, parking problems, and boats being left unattended at the fishing pier.

Selectmen took the matter of selecting one applicant to fill the harbor committee vacancy under advisement. Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said the board would make a decision at its board meeting in two weeks.

To interview or not

There was some confusion in the selectmen's office Monday about whether or not the board needs to interview applicants for the new Hagerty Property Acquisition Committee.

Keith Knowles, 15 Border St., said he was interested in serving on the committee and was interviewed by the board Monday.

"I think it's one of the most challenging and interesting projects in town," Knowles said. He added that because the property is being purchased with taxpayers' money it should benefit everyone."

Selectmen tabled a decision to officially appoint Knowles saying they first needed to decide how many people should be on the committee.

Then after some discussion, selectmen voted to limit the committee to 15 members.

That decision was followed by debate about whether or not the board needs to interview the applicants for the Hagerty committee at all. The board voted 2-3 not to interview the rest of the applicants because the Hagerty committee's charge is short-term, although that fact was disputed by Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, who said the charge could be long-term.

Laugelle also said the board should interview everyone because that is the established policy with other town committees.

"If you interview one, you should interview all," he said.

Laugelle stressed that he was personally against the policy because the interview process may intimidate some able and willing people from applying to boards.

He moved the board interview the applicants for the Hagerty committee. The motion failed 2-3, with Selectman Merle S. Brown supporting Laugelle's view.

Fritz Pfaffman, who was in the audience, then asked how an appointment to the committee is to be made. There was no answer.

In the meantime, Knowles who went through the rigors of the interview, was not officially appointed and it is not clear at this time if he is on the committee or not.

Alewives returning to Cohasset waters

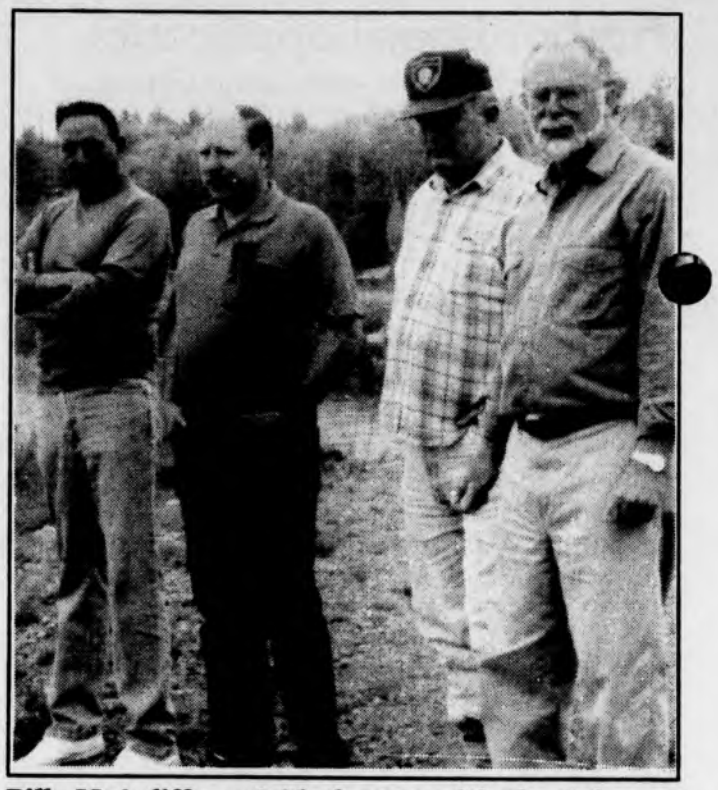
(The following article was submitted by the Gulf Association, Inc., a local conservation group.)

What you see in the accompanying photograph are several hundred alewives (river herring) pouring into the Cohasset Reservoir from a Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries (DMF) tank truck. This stocking of the reservoir, which took place Wednesday, May 12, is not primarily for the good of the area's anglers, although they, too, will benefit. It's mainly an effort spearheaded by The Gulf Association, a local conservation group, to restore the age-old biannua migration of alewives up and down the Gulf River and connecting streams

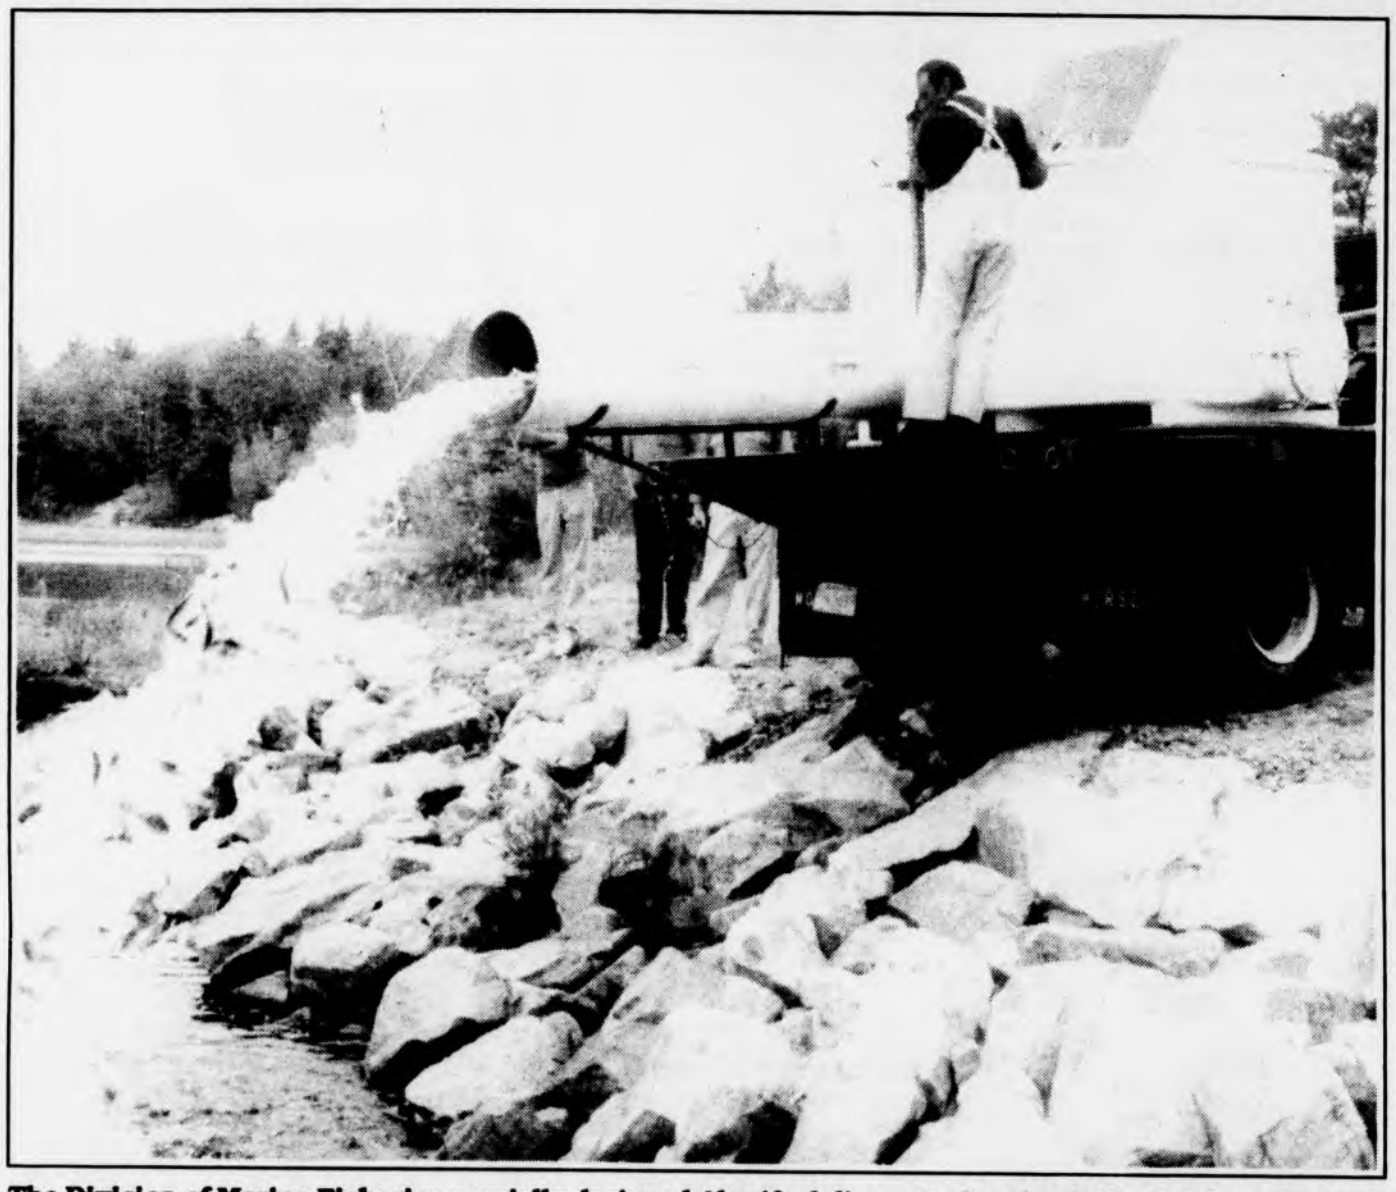
River herring find their way from ocean depths to freshwater streams and headwater ponds to spawn. In one of nature's miracles, most fish return to spawn in the same watershed in which they were hatched, finding their way mainly by sense of smell, it appears. If anything blocks their way upstream or down, the generational cycle is broken and no fish will return to that watersource in succeeding springs.

This is probably why no alewives have been seen in recent years in the traditionally abundant Gulf River-Bound Brook-Lily Pond-Aaron River passage to the Cohasset Reservoir. DMF experts believe some mechanical problems at the fishladder in the Bound Brook dam at Mordeca Lincoln Road, plus some silting and debris upstream, have blocked the alewives' passage and broken the migratory cycle.

DMF's willingness to restock the system demonstrates their belief that these problems are correctable and that there are interested citizens in the area to keep them corrected. Interested citizens include The Gulf Association and, in particular, one of its directors, Cohasset resident Jack Hubbard. Also vitally important is the knowledge and interest shown by Mark Trask of Trask Tackle in North Scituate and by Michael Daley of Scituate. They have volunteered to check water levels daily at key points in the run during spring and fall migration seasons.



Billy MaAuliffe, outside forman with the Cohasset Water Dept., Duncan McCromick, supt. of the Cohasset Water Dept., and Al Campbell and Ken Reback, who are both the the Mass. Div. of Marine Fisheries were on hand while the town reservoir was stocked with Alewifes.



The Division of Marine Fisheries specially designed Alewife delivery tank unloads the fish into the town reservoir.

Another important role in this collaborative program is performed by Cohasset's Water Department, which regulates water flow out of the Reservoir to Lily Pond and out of the Pond down Bound Brook to the Gulf. Water Department Superintendent Duncan T. McCormack says "This fish stocking project will be of long-range benefit to the entire watershed, and we will support if wholeheartedly."

Ken Reback, DMF's Senior Marine Fisheries Biologist, says the Division plans to add to the Reservoir alewife stock in coming weeks and for the next three years, if necessary to ensure a plentiful supply of spawn and fish to resume migration. He promises to keep in close touch with the project, having already made numerous inspection trips here from Division headquarters in Sandwich.

Gulf Association Director Jack Hubbard and Mark Trask would welcome broad public participation in the project. As means of mobilizing public support, the Association plans to apply for membership in the State's "Adopt-a-Stream" program, which is run by the Department of Fisheries, Wildlife & Environmental Law Enforcement to help citizens protect and restore rivers and streams.

Erla Esposito

Name: Erla Esposito.

Occupation: Owner, Esposito's Nursery.

Best day of your life: The day I met my husband.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was left stranded — in curlers— at a toll-booth in Florida. My husband and I were travelling in a motor-home through Jacksonville with two other couples and our children. My husband, who was driving up front, yelled back for me to get our daughter a drink at the next rest stop. The next time we stopped, I got out — thinking we were at a rest stop. My husband had really just stopped to pay a toll, and no one knew I got out. About five minutes later, they came back for me.

Goal: To have the most unique nursery and best customer service in the area.

Favorite season: Summer.

Best vacation: Going to Venice with my husband in 1972.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: Rude people.

Favorite book: "Master of the Game," by Sidney Sheldon.

Favorite movie: "Beaches."

Biggest worry: I really don't have any.

Favorite place: I follow the sun, so any warm climate with a beach.

Favorite junk-food: Rasperry truffle ice-cream.

Person you would most like to meet: Elizabeth Taylor.

Graduated income tax opposition sought

Statewide Association of Taxpayers (SWAT). About 40 citizens from South Shore towns like Hingham, Cohasset, Marshfield, Pembroke, Scituate, Weymouth, Quincy, were on hand as well as people from Swansea, Walpole and other towns.

Some, clad in T-shirts depicting a skull and crossbones saying 'don't tax me to death,' represented local organizations like the Association of Concerned Taxpayers (ACT) in Hingham.

Others like Ray Kasperowicz of Cohasset stole time away from painting his boat on a beautiful spring day to stop in and listen to Anderson discuss a range of issues including education reform and its affect on Prop.2-1/2 and the graduated income tax initiative.

Before the legislature can levy 'graduated' income taxes — taxing wage-earners at different rates according to income — the Massachusetts Constitution must be amended, Anderson explained.

By Mariner press-time Wednesday, the state legislature had not taken the graduated tax initiative up in Constitutional Convention this year. The initiative passed 132-39 at the Constitutional Convention — which is a joint session of both the senate and house of representatives — Nov. 16. By law, the issue must pass in two Constitutional Conventions held in different legislative sessions.

Once the graduated-tax initiative passes joint legislative muster — something Anderson expects will happen this month — it will appear on the ballot in 1994.

Thirty-five states have graduated income taxes. The single tax-rate is Massachusetts is 5.95 percent.

The initiative is sponsored by the Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts (TEAM), which asserts the graduated tax will increase fairness. TEAM is a lobbying organization whose goal is to change the way the tax system works to make it fairer, Paul Capizzi of TEAM explains.

The real crux of the issue is that with constitutional change in the tax structure, the balance the power switches to the legislature, Anderson explains.

The proposal for constitutional change states that taxes should be levied at graduated rates so that higher rates are imposed on taxpayers in higher income brackets and lower rates on those in lower brackets. No taxpayer protections or rates are included in the proposed constitutional text, those will be dealt with in separate legislation.

It's sold as soaking the rich, but it doesn't. It soaks people like me.'
— State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Anderson warns that the ability to set tax rates according to income brackets should not be handed over the the state legislature, which could then raise rates on a particular income bracket in the middle of the night.

In CLTs official statement opposing the graduated income taxes, it says "only the constitutional text has any shelf life — separate legislation is absolutely worthless."

TEAM says CLT's argument does not give the voters enough credit.

"CLT's argument plays on voters' fears," Capizzi says. "The graduated income tax allows the legislature to raise revenue in a more progressive, equitable way.

"The current system of asking voters to pay the same rate across the board is antiquated," he says. "For someone making $18,000/year paying 5.95 percent is a greater burden than someone at the top of the scale."

But because all taxpayers with incomes of more than $8,000 must file a Massachusetts tax return and pay the same rate on taxable income — if the legislature wants to change the tax rate it has to deal with nearly all wage earners at once, Anderson says.

Once graduated rates are enacted — the only wage earners that get upset with changes — are the ones affected, she claims.

Anderson points out that graduated income taxes don't necessarily mean that anyone pays less than they currently do.

Anderson used California's graduated income tax brackets as an example.

In California in 1991, those with incomes between $16,436 and $22,816 paid 6 percent; the next bracket of $22,817-$28,835 paid 8 percent; those with incomes from $28,836 to $100,000 paid 9.3 percent; those over $100,000 paid 10 percent; those with incomes over $200,000 paid 11 percent.

TEAM says it will spell out the rate structure in an initiative petition, which will be a separate ballot question from the graduated income tax. The rates TEAM proposes will be revenue neutral. In other words, they will not increase the amount of tax revenue coming in, Capizzi explains.

If the rates structure passes on the ballot, then those rates would be law just as Prop. 2-1/2 is. He points out that the legislature can change any law now including Prop. 2-1/2.

In literature passed out at the conference, CLT says the 'fairness' issue can be addressed under the current tax structure without constitutional tampering through changes like extending sales tax exemptions and establishing new income tax deductions for dependents under six years old, the infirm, and disabled.

In interview following the conference, Anderson said President Bill Clinton's waffling on his tax proposals — which started out as promises not to increase taxes on the middle class — could help CLT convince voters to kill the graduated tax initiative.

Voters defeated graduated income tax proposals four times in the 1960s and 1970s, Anderson said.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said she is personally opposed to a graduated income tax but will vote yes so in order to put it on the ballot.

"I think the people should have the opportunity to vote on it," she said.

But Murray said she doesn't think the graduated tax initiative will fly with the voters.

"It's sold as soaking the rich, but it doesn't. It soaks people like me," she said.

Bill Ryan, chief of staff for state Sen. Brian McDonald, said McDonald will also vote to put the initiative on the ballot. But unlike, Murray, McDonald is leaning toward supporting the change to a graduated income tax.

"He certainly supports considering it," Ryan said. "He believes in tax fairness and does not think there is tax fairness in Massachusetts."

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

One of the things that makes Cohasset unique is the special care that its residents take to make their homes and yards beautiful throughout the year. Starting this week, the Cohasset Mariner will spotlight those particular features whether it's a unique planting, pretty wreath, brimming flower boxes, a clematis climbing a lantern post, or a display of pumpkins and corn husks that make a walk or drive through Cohasset neighborhoods delightful.

Pictured is the Chisolm home at 605 Jerusalem Rd. which features lovely front-yard planting along the path and near the steps to the front porch with a carpet of pink and purple phlox with a mass planting of red, yellow, white and purple tulips, hyacinths and purple azaleas.

This house has a beautiful porch and the residents have suspended an oar under the front eaves of the porch which displays the address of the home. They also have a very unique wire trellis to the right of the house in the side yard that during the summer months is planted with cascades of ivy with a blanket of red and white begonias in bloom alongside the house.

(Editor's note: Over the years Ginger, who lives on Windy Hill Rd., has enhanced Cohasset's beauty herself by organizing the mural painting on the wall of Tedeschi's in the Village through the Village Renaissance group and Ms. Lucas, the high school art teacher and some of her students. She also called on each of the merchants and took orders for hanging plants which were hung along Main St. She also planted the 'circle' in the vacant lot next to Tedeschi's and French Memories. And recently, she supplied the planters and plants at the high school tennis courts. Ginger hosts art classes from the South Shore Art Center in her lovely yard each summer. Please call Ginger at 383-2863 with news tips for The Grand Tour).

around town

There is one happy family in Cohasset these days, the Pratts!

Lisa and Jeff Pratt are the parents of a brand new baby daughter, Logan Ann Pratt! And you can imagine how thrilled Logan's grandparents are...Carleton and Ruth Pratt and Herm and JoAnn Fichtner are beside themselves with delight.

They all live in Cohasset, so you can well imagine that little Logan will have plenty of attention and lots of love!

Enjoy Logan everyone, and keep us up to date on her progress.

Speaking of JoAnn Fichtner, she is one busy gal these days! She is directing "Congo Capers of '93", a musical dance-variety show presented by Cohasset's Second Congregational Church. The show will have kicklines, jitterbuggers, singers, World War II nostalgia! More than 50 singers and dancers are taking part in this extravaganza. They expect a standing-room-only crowd!

Tickets to the show are $4 for adults, $2 for children and seniors. It will be held at the CHS auditorium Saturday, May 22, at 8 p.m. Call the church at 383-0345 for tickets, or see a cast member. You will love seeing Cohasset's finest display their various theatrical talents. By the way, the musical director is Bob Leavitt, you know that means it will be spectacular!!

We want to wish Tanna Kasperowicz success in her new job as an account executive for Dubin Advertising/Public Relations, located in Weymouth. Tanna will arrange publicity opportunities for clients, write and place news releases, and develop marketing materials. Tanna is known for her writing prowess and her go-get-'em style. We know she will do an outstanding job and be a real asset to the agency.

Mary Edmonds certainly is a world traveller. This time she went to London! Mary and her friend, Betty, had a wonderful time, and Mary's daughter, Joan, was there also.

Get this folks, there was a bombing a few blocks away, but that didn't deter that happy gang. They had a marvelous time. Joan even went to Dover and took the ferry to France where she spent a few hours.

Obviously they all had a great trip, and we are sure that there will be more to come.

Denison University's dance department seniors produced a spring dance concert recently and Cohasset's own, Erin Monaghan, performed in it! Erin was part of a trio that played the ups and downs of relationships. The piece, performed in silence, created its own sound score through the phrasing and ascents of the movements and the natural sounds that they made. Sounds super, doesn't it?

Hopefully, Erin will be able to tell us more about it when she gets home!

More honor roll news, this time from Thayer Academy. Marisa Verrochi, daughter of Paul and Junemarie Verrochi, made upper school high honors for the second term of the 1992-1993 school year.

Marisa is a member of the class of 1996. We know she will continue her hard work, it certainly pays off.

Happy to report that Russ Reidy is due home this week and feeling great! Watch for him to be "around town" soon!

obituaries

Amelia Gunville

Amelia (Silvia) Gunville, 88, of Cohasset, a homemaker and a nurse's aide at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home for many years, died in Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, Mrs. Gunville was a communicant of St. Anthony's Church.

She retired in the late 1960s.

Wife of the late Francis D. Gunville; she leaves three sons, Francis W. Gunville of Weymouth, Robert P. Gunville and Richard P. Gunville and Richard P. Gunville, both of Cohasset, 12 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church by the Rev. John Keohane. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be for resident activities at Cardigan Nursing Home, 59 Country Way, Scituate, 02040.

Josephine Peterson

Josephine A. (Fahey) Peterson, 71, of Cohasset, formerly of Weymouth, a retired secretary and bookkeeper for B.E. Peterson Inc., died May 13 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Peterson was born in Roslindale and grew up in Medway where she attended school. She lived in Weymouth 30 years before moving to Cohasset in 1980.

She leaves her husband, Robert Peterson; a son, Stephen R. Peterson of Duxbury; three daughters, Jean Reardon of Marshfield, Ann Horrigan of Norwell and Christine P. Schucker of Lakewood, Colo.; two brothers, John Fahey of Venice, Fla.; two sisters, Helen Glennon of Dennis and Margaret Curley of Milford, and six grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to charity.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

LOCATION—FROM BUYER'S VIEW

QUESTION: What effect will it have on a sale if a house is priced much higher or lower than others in the same neighborhood?

ANSWER: The classic advice is to buy a modest house on a more expensive street. Such a house is easy to re-sell, and its value will hold up well. Remodeling or adding to it is possible because alterations normally won't push it out of the price range.

On the other hand, the most luxurious house in a rundown area probably won't ever repay the owner for the money invested. No matter how elegant it may be, it will be harder to re-sell. Buy with location in mind. Remember, eventually, you'll be a seller.

Ponderable

Proposition 2-1/2 — a law which protects all of us from soaring property taxes — is looked on as the enemy by many unions and public officials. And who can blame them in a recessionary time when dwindling local aid from the state has meant that the local services we depend on are paid for in larger and larger part by our property tax dollar.

But if we take a moment to think about how high property taxes might be today without Prop. 2-1/2 — it's hard to make a case to change it.

So what can we do?

Barbara Anderson, director of Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT) the watchdog group that lobbies to protect the 13-year-old law, has an interesting proposal.

"Take education out of the property tax," she says.

The education reform bill is currently stalled in conference committee in the legislature. She noted that CLT is opposed to the bill because in its current form it would mandate a certain level of per-pupil spending for education on to the cities and towns.

She claims it's a back-door assault on Prop. 2-1/2.

If the state takes away a town's autonomy over its budget by mandating that a certain amount of the budget go to the schools it could be at the expense of other town departments. Departments like police and fire would be squeezed, forcing override votes just to pay for those services.

Anderson suggests enacting a system in which the state gives all parents a voucher to spend for the school of their choice. The money could be dedicated for education from the sales tax, for example.

"Every kid would have an equal amount of state money given directly to the parents (in the form of a voucher)," she explained.

She said this type of voucher system would help parents escape from a school system they find inferior or one that doesn't teach the values they support. It would also bring competition into the school system and take education funding off the back of the property tax.

Anderson, who made her remarks Saturday at a taxpayer conference in Duxbury, says there's currently a case before the state Supreme Court which may determine that education spending has to be equalized — a decision which will force the state to come up with some kind of equalizing formula.

"Of course choice is a good thing," Anderson notes. "Without it the bill is nothing but a requirement for some sort of funding."

So for a moment, let's take a look at school choice from one end of the periscope — the parents' end.

Many parents in the state already exercise school choice. Many, who can afford it, choose private or parochial schools. And many, who can afford to go elsewhere, choose to send their kids to their local public schools.

And still others have no choice — they are locked into their local schools because of income.

So think for a moment if all parents in the state were paying customers — where would they choose to send their children to school?

What empowerment would a voucher for $5,000 per child for example, give to every parent regardless of income?

We don't have the answers. But it is something to think about.

Common sense safer than signs

letters

(The following letter was sent to selectmen with a copy to the police dept. and Cohasset Mariner.)

To the Board of Selectmen:

I suggest that these signs, rather than enhancing pedestrian safety, tend to compromise safety. Some pedestrians may put unwarranted trust in their efficacy and step into danger, without realizing that some drivers don't stop. I've witnessed such failure to stop many times, at the Depot Court crossing by the Community Center nursery school of all places! Fortunately, the children's guardians were alert enough to avert tragedy. But that may not always be the case.

For an example of foolish trust: one day I observed a man and woman pulling a child on a wagon and stepping confidently into the crosswalk and into the path of an oncoming vehicle, pointing smugly at the sign as if to say: "state law is protecting us"! The driver did stop well short of them, even though his attention seemed to have been concentrated on something happening on the other side of the street. But what if he'd been less attentive, or a reckless cowboy prone to run stop signs, or a parent trying to drive while keeping three unruly kids in line? These are real-life situations, and I couldn't help but wonder at the people with the wagon putting their child at risk. They put "principle" before safety of the child.

Many of the cars which failed to stop by the nursery school crosswalk were driven by women with children, or by other solid looking citizens that didn't seem to be careless scofflaws. People are accustomed to stopping only at stoplights or at conventional stop signs, and expect pedestrians to watch out for cars and to yield, as common sense seems to dictate. State law and gaudy signs announcing the law won't easily change habit which is grounded in common sense.

Should pedestrians, especially children, be put at risk in an attempt to change those habits? I suggest not. The old rule of "Look both ways before you cross the street" makes more sense, especially because vehicles have momentum and don't stop as easily as can a pedestrian. Most of us are both drivers and pedestrians, and it makes sense for pedestrians to continue to regard vehicles as the larger force and behave accordingly.

Requiring vehicles to stop at crosswalks that aren't normal stopping places, whenever it appears that someone might step into the vehicle's path, is another example of the national plague of inanities foisted on us by coercive utopians. It's not the only state or federal law that is unwise and/or impractical and deserving of benign neglect. But it's a good place for the Town to return to the practice of common sense, instead of vainly attempting to change natural and sensible public behaviour.

As suggested at the beginning of this missive, the signs may well contribute to injury by encouraging a false sense of security in pedestrians so naive as to believe that the "state law" precludes being harmed by a vehicle. Sporadic police enforcement is a gesture unlikely to have lasting effect.

Better to abandon this futile experiment in behaviour modification before somebody gets hurt as a result of it.

Lightkeepers' project is low on funds

(This is an open letter to residents from the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp.)

Dear Cohasset Resident:

Two years ago, we began the difficult process of turning a defeated override article into a victory for all the townspeople.

Thanks to your donations of time, skills and money the historic Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence will soon be available to the public while its distinguished past will be preserved.

At the same time, we have saved the town the dilemma of expending approximately $250,000 to save the building, or the unpalatable choice of seeing it fall down.

Please stop by to see the marvelous progress. Each Saturday, 10 a.m. to noon, a Lightkeeper will be on site to escort you and answer questions.

However, we urgently need your help — NOW. We are out of money and short $75,000 to finish the project. There is great concern about on-site control. Wouldn't it be better to finish the project, enjoy it, and make it self-sustaining by renting the two upstairs apartments?

We need big, medium and small tax-deductible donations mailed to Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, P.O. Box 514, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Joseph R. McElroy
President

Thanks from PSO

The Cohasset PSO again thanks all who responded so generously to our annual PSO Phone-A-Thon in March. PSO asks that all who pledged a donation but have not yet sent it in to please do so at their earliest convenience.

The PSO depends on your generosity to provide many of the wonderful opportunities for our students and teachers at the Osgood, Deer Hill, and Junior/Senior High Schools.

These include curriculum enrichment, informational programs, special projects such as computers and software for the Writing Lab, and teacher grants.

Community Lights

Cohasset residents are among more than 400 South Shore Hospital volunteers to be honored recently at the seventh annual volunteer recognition luncheon. South Shore Hospital volunteers welcomed 19,000 patients, greeted 32,000 visitors, answered 60,000 phone calls, and contributed more than 108,000 hours of service to the hospital this year. Pictured are Cohasset residents (standing L to R) Susan Grant, Alicia Seavey, Mildred Woomer, Mary Keating, Eileen Tyeryar, and Martha Douglas; (seated L to R) Virginia Anderson, Mary Migliaccio, and Dorothy Roberts.

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Anyone, who has trade skills, willing to donate their time and/or simply wants to physically help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Renovation Project, please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505. Donations of building supplies are also needed.

• The following town committees currently have vacancies: Cable-TV Council (2). Government Island Study Committee (1), Government Structure committee (1), Harbor Committee (1), Mosquito Control Committee (1), Personnel Committee (1), School Facilities committee (3), and Zoning Board of Appeals (1). Any citizens interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office at town hall.

• Although the following town committees do not currently have openings, any citizen interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office and you will be contacted when an opening comes up: by-law committee, cultural exchange committee, design review board, registrars of voters, public works garage study committee, South Shore Regional School District Committee, computer study committee, conservation commission, water resources protection committee, Straits Pond committee, Wompatuck State Park advisory council, historic commission, recycling committee, cemetery study committee, 911 committee, council on aging, drug and alcohol committee, arts lottery council, housing partnership committee, insurance advisory committee, handicapped commission, Cohasset Common historic district commission, regional refuse disposal planning committee, capital budget committee, public safety study committee, solid waste study committee, solid waste committee, regional school district planning committee, and Title 5 transition committee. All applications will be kept on file in the selectmen's office.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers needed to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

• Homeless families need your help. In the past several weeks, 18 families who have become homeless have been placed in temporary shelters in Hull. Most of these families are from Boston where their extended families and friends are. In Hull, they have no car, extremely limited cooking facilities, a dormitory-sized refrigerator, and a single room in which to live and sleep. The typical family includes a single mother with one or two pre-school age children and one child in school. To help ease their time in crisis, the Hull Interagency Council is seeking volunteers for the following:

Wellspring food donations are needed particularly food that can be microwaved like beef stew, corned beef hash, soups, canned spaghetti, baked beans, and canned vegetables.

Volunteer drivers are needed to transport people to the Wellspring Food Pantry on Wednesday mornings. Food Pantry volunteers are also needed to staff the pantry and to make weekly trips to Boston for supplies. Training will be provided. Contact Pam Cooney, 925-3078.

A dedicated individual with good interpersonal skills is needed to volunteer as a facilitator for regular weekly meetings of homeless women sheltered in Hull. The purpose of the weekly meetings is to encourage the women to share information and solve problems they might have in common. This requires a time commitment of two hours per week. Experience in counseling, social work, or social services is helpful but not necessary. Contact Marguerite Haider, 925-3211.

Volunteer tutors are also being sought to provide one-to-10 hours a week tutoring a small group of students one-on-one in reading and math or other subjects for older students. Some tutor training will be provided. Contact Pam Cooney 925-3078 or 925-0773.

(Please send your volunteer opportunities to Community Lights, the Cohasset Mariner, PO Box 71, Cohasset 02025).

Reflections on a 20-mile wonderful walk for charity

By Susan Diaz
Special to the Mariner

Good Friday 1993, a day of cool weather touched by breezes, made to order for walking. Willing feet from all over the South Shore gather at Hingham Junior High School to register, be encouraged, and start the 20-mile trek on behalf of Sharing, Inc. The sense of community and high spirits is strong as I set out at 7:40 a.m.

I make this journey alone by choice, because for me this day belongs to the Lord, a day to withdraw from everyday concerns and worries and try to listen to His voice. I also prefer to go at my own pace, which is undoubtedly a changeable thing as the day moves along.

The first four miles are peaceful, with stops at the church waystations for hugs, cards stamped, oranges and stretching. At Stop Three, genial "nurse" Earl Maple inquires, "Any foot problems? Bunions? Blisters?" (I am to see Earl later on!) An inspired soul starts to play show tunes on the old upright piano in the church hall. Fortified with herb tea and oranges, I press on to Wompatuck Park, meeting a group of young teenage girls on the way and stepping aside for youth.

It is now 10 a.m., a mere two hours, 20 minutes since I left the starting point. A big blonde kid in his late teens comes running briskly down the hill from Wompatuck, wearing the familiar purple cross on his shorts, on his return trip already. As he races by, he informs me he started out at 8 a.m. My feet hurt.

And so up the hills and into Wompatuck proper. Now begins the sociable part of the trip. At Stop Four, one of the lady volunteers remarks that they don't have a dog dish. For some reason, I find this hysterical. With all the detailed preparation and forethought which goes into the support system for this walk, somebody still didn't get his dog fed! Up to Stop Five, where the most accomplished huggers wait for us to congratulate us for making it this far. Here I stop to apply ice to my knee joints, remembering last year in the rain. A volunteer gives me a block of frozen orange juice to ice up my knees. It works. I wrap the ace bandages around the now ice-cold knees and off I go again.

This part of the journey involves two round trips up and down the hill. I see friends I have not met in a long time. I pass Father John Reardon from St. Paul's Parish, looking as fresh as though out for a morning stroll. I fall in with new friends I haven't met before, walking part of the way with them. I see the disabled gentleman, for whom every step is an effort; if I did not need my knees for walking, I would be down on them in front of him. There is a lady with a walking stick; there are parents pushing strollers; people with dogs on leashes; bikers, skaters. One group of adolescent girls is singing "On Eagles' Wings." I pass my daughter energetically bounding her way back down the hill with friends. I meet Kay Doherty, the splendid lady who organizes this annual event. I walk up the hill backwards to let another muscle group take the flak in my legs.

I pass innumerable teenagers wearing their ubiquitous sports hats and plugged into their walkmen; a few are all alone. My already strong belief in the next generation is shored up once again. At the peanut butter sandwich stop (halfway point) I meet a young mother with a gorgeous Maya Indian baby named Rima (for the bird girl in Green Mansions). One gift after another keeps coming my way.

Now it is time for the trip back, which is downhill for me (though not geographically). I take my shoes off at Stop Eight and discover the oversized blisters making themselves at home between my toes. Onward and upward. Fatigue sets in, and people pass me from behind. The two teenage girls who dejectedly sit on a wall in seeming weariness are leaping up and running along the route two minutes later. The welcoming and applause given by officials and police officers at the crosswalks all along the route empowers me to keep going.

Stop Nine (aka Three) and I make a visit to Earl Maple to have my feet attended to and ice my knees again. Earl remarks how he retired several times, and started new jobs. I wonder where the energy is coming from to get up off my chair — maybe Earl will give me some of his. Off again.

Next to last stop. It occurs to me to be glad that a tiger won't jump out of the bushes; I would not be able to run away. At Stop Ten I give in and pop two Tylenol, have card stamped, stretch legs once more, and here come the last two miles.

Much of this section includes gentle slopes, which look like Everest. By now, stretching my muscles doesn't put a dent in them. I use it as an excuse to stop for a minute. Often. South School, and one more mile to go. Walking backwards again, which makes no difference, I think of my sponsors. I mentally call for Simon of Cyrene, but he does not choose to appear, so I can't stumble. Other triumphant walkers return to be welcomed amid joy and congratulations, and I receive yet another affirmation: This is the community. This is the moment. THIS IS WHY.

political notes

Lobby for schools

Citizens from Hingham and Rockland, fed up with the Legislature's stalling on the School Reform Bill, have banded together to form the South Shore Citizens Coalition for the Public Schools. The Legislature's delaying tactics have blocked state funding badly needed by the local schools. The Coalition is now contacting citizens in Duxbury, Plymouth, Hull, Cohasset, Hanover, Holbrook, Norwell and other area towns to join in a campaign of letter writing, phone calls and direct lobbying to get the Legislature moving on school reform.

June 3, the group will travel to Beacon Hill for a face to face meeting with its Senators and Representatives. A bus caravan will leave Rockland High School at 2:45 pm, with a stop in Hingham. For more information on the June 3 trip or any of the Coalition's activities, call Judy Wilson, 749-0159.

Local farmers mix plants with the personal touch

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Dave Sturgis may not teach in the classroom anymore — but that doesn't mean he's given up teaching.

The retired teacher-turned-farmer practices his profession at the Hingham Farmers' Market where shoppers pay for plants and vegetables but get plenty of advice for free.

Saturday, the Mariner caught up with a Newton woman who was in Hingham to do an errand. She happened upon the Hingham Farmers' Market where she checked out the tomato plants.

And after just a few minutes, she knew she'd come to the right place.

She got an ear full about Super Sweets, Pixies, Supersonics, and more.

"The Supersonic is a late tomato," explains Sturgis, who is market master.

"And this one is good tasting and good looking," he says while picking up a plant.

Hingham Farmers' Market — a local tradition for 17 years and apart from Quincy is the only one of its kind on the South Shore — is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays only through June 16. After June 16, it will also be held Wednesdays until the last Saturday in October.

When the growing season is in full swing, 12 farmers occupy the far end of the parking lot on Station Street between North and Water Streets.

Not only do customers get produce several days sooner than they would in a supermarket — but the prices are comparable because there's no middle man involved.

Sturgis' asparagus was picked that morning.

"It's a sure sign of spring when you get asparagus," Sturgis tells another shopper. "That's fresh cut this morning and will stay in your ice box a week."

In addition to plants and vegetables, participating farmers have their own specialities. Sturgis sells bread and jam — and gives credit for recycled jars and caps. Others sell herbs or honey.

Cohasset farmer Allen Hiltz shared a little growers' philosophy with the Mariner.

"We lost a couple of generations of gardeners," he notes. "The 60s were the flower children who wanted to smell them rather than grow them — then came the 'me' generation of yuppies who said 'look there's a pretty flower' but would rather go to the club than garden.

"And now we're back to basics," Hiltz says. He adds than gardening can be a family activity.

The Hingham Farmers' Market is never the same place twice.

"Every week it's a different market, it changes constantly throughout the season (as the crops come in)," Sturgis says.

As market master, Sturgis collects a nominal fee from each farmer which is used to pay for advertising, signs, and paint for the lines on the blacktop at the site.

The town does not charge the farmers to use the area.

Sturgis says giving advice is part of the fun.

"If you're not sure how to grow something — I'll always talk to someone," he says. "At the farmers' market, you'll get the information you need."

Cohasset Garden Club to host 80 delegates

The Cohasset Garden club members are busily getting ready to play hostess to more than 80 registrants from New England as well as other parts of the country with delegates coming from as far away as Texas and Hawaii, for the Garden Club of America Zone I meeting, May 25-27.

Meetings will include educational subjects such as conservation with David Clapp, director of the South Shore Sanctuaries of Massachusetts Audubon Society, and Horticulture with Paul Martin Brown from Harvard University's Arnold Arboretum. Along with planned stops at several members' gardens, delegates will also be treated to a Captain's walk along Cohasset's historic waterfront as well as a guided tour of World's End in Hingham.

Joining the Garden club of America in 1927, the Cohasset Garden Club's purpose is the same, namely to stimulate the knowledge and love of gardening, to restore, improve and protect the quality of the environment through programs and action in the fields of conservation, civic improvement and education.

Local continuing projects include design and maintenance of the Cohasset Historical Society gardens, the design & plantings at the entrance to the Joseph Osgood School, seasonal plantings for the Beach Street Horse Trough, and a new design for the parking lot entry to the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Cottage.

Members complete plans for Garden Club of America Zone I Meeting next week: from L to R: Arabella Dane, Zone I chairman from Centre Harbor; Ann Vanderweil, co-chair Zone I Meeting; Carmen Schramm, president, Cohasset Garden Club; and Patsy Rabstejnek, co-chair Zone I Meeting, all of Cohasset.

First place!

The Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are happy to announce that the Library has won First Prize in the Massachusetts Library Association Public Relations Awards Contest!

With a record number of 101 impressive entries, three judges selected Paul Pratt's Coordinated Campaign entry for shared first place honors.

The entry consisted of the design and logo for the library and extensive newspaper publicity—both aimed at enhancing public recognition and regard for the library.

A portfolio was developed and submitted to the Mass. Library Association which depicted the Friends volunteer efforts to heighten the library's visibility within the community. The entry included original graphic designs, photographs of the weathervane, the new library weathervane logo, the new computerized library card, a book bag, the Friends letter to the community and extensive newspaper publicity.

Entries were judged on Ideation, Imagination, Implementation, Library image enhancement, and impact.

The awards ceremony took place at the Sheraton Tara Hotel, Framingham May 4 during the Annual Conference of the Massachusetts Library Association. Richard Hayes, Sue Killilea and John Hartshorne were present at the Awards Ceremony and accepted the First Place Award Certificate on behalf of the Friends of Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The Award Certificate and Contest Entry Portfolio are on display at the library. Congratulations to Sheila Evans, trustee, Paul Pratt Memorial Library, John Hartshorne, executive board, Friends of the Cohasset Library, Sue Killilea, Publicity Chairman, executive board, Friends of the Cohasset Library and Patience Towle, trustee, Paul Pratt Memorial Library!

Library director Richard Hayes; newly appointed Library Trustee and former president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Patience Towle (holding the library bag with logo); Trustees president Sheila Evans; Friends publicity chairman Sue Killilea (with the award certificate); and John Hartshorne, member of the executive board of the Friends (with the Friends' portfolio) are pleased the library is a winner! More money needed for Minot Lightkeepers' project

Government Island hasn't been this busy since the 1850s when the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was under construction.

Since the arrival of good weather, lots of activity has begun to transform the Lightkeeper's residence. South Shore Vo-Tech high school students have completed framing the upstairs apartments, have replaced windows, and are currently completing framing of the downstairs.

During off-duty time, the career Cohasset firefighters removed old siding to prepare the building for re-clapboarding. Volunteers have begun work on plumbing, heating, and electrical services.

The exterior is getting equal attention with important improvements being made to drainage and the start of a major landscaping and beautification project by the Cohasset Community Garden Club. Efforts which include construction of a patio and retaining wall with plantings along the slopes in front of the house.

Once construction equipment is removed from the work-site, the Cohasset Garden Club and Amateur Garden Club will begin their own projects to beautify the area. An integral part of the overall plan is to create a small picnic area behind the residence.

Enthusiasm and support for the project has gained momentum despite the usual challenges that confront large community service efforts. The difficult winter, skyrocketing costs for construction supplies, and additions to the scope of work have been major factors in causing a 25 percent escalation in estimated costs.

CLC directors have consistently voted to support doing a first-class renovation despite the added cost implications which have included major add-ons such as the decisions to replace all the windows and re-clapboard the entire building.

The sluggish economy and competition for the same dollars to support many other worthy local projects have made fund-raising difficult, but about $85,000 has been raised to date with another $75,000 still needed.

The Plankowners' Program is the focal point of fund-raising efforts and donations can be made by calling Bob Martin at 383-0787. A $50 donation will include your name on the Plankowners' wall and you'll also receive a 1-4-3 (I-Love-You) plank and cap.

Peter and Jane Goedecke will host a benefit 'Under the Tent' at their Nichols Rd. home June 13. The event will feature the Mark Kross Trio. For information on the brunch, please call Polly Logan at 383-0031.

There are lots of changes at the Lighkeepers' residence including new windows, re-clapboarding, and a stone wall. To get a first-hand look, stop by Saturdays between 8 and 10 a.m. for a tour with a CLC board member who will answer questions. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Lightkeepers' tours set

The Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence is open for tours each Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers' Board of Directors will have someone on-site to answer questions. Inside/outside renovations are in progress and landscaping/beautification work is beginning.

Residents are encouraged to see the progress of this community service project which is intended to make the building available to all Cohasset residents while preserving an important aspect of Cohasset's seafaring heritage.

Jazz bunch benefit

A jazz lunch is planned from 12 to 2 p.m., June 13 at the home of Peter and Jane Goedecke, 100 Nichols Rd. to benefit the restoration of the Minot Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island.

The internationally known jazz group Mark Ross Trio will play Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington, New Orleans Jazz and other favorites.

Donations of $100 per couple ($75 per person) or more includes brunch. Please call Polly Logan 383-0031, Ann Whelan 383-0034, or Sue McNamara 383-6845 for more information.

Improvement, fun are key to future of girls' track team

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Ron Emmons concedes that getting girls to sacrifice their afternoons for the Cohasset High School track team is no easy task. And he really can't blame them.

"It's hard to get commitments when they go out and run on a dirt track with grass growing out of it," said the head coach. "The bleachers weren't even moved off the track this season.

"We're not a Norwell. We don't have the numbers or the facilities."

The Skippers' 2-6 record was no match for Norwell's undefeated, South Shore League Championship season, where they recorded their 100th consecutive dual meet victory with a win over Hanover last Monday.

Still, you can't keep good athletes down. While, the Clippers proved beyond a doubt they are the superior team to Cohasset, the Skippers showed they have personnel good enough to qualify for the State Class D Meet — the same meet in which Norwell will send a host of their athletes to defend the title they won last season.

Claudine Johnson, Kate Murray and Faye Menis all qualified for the invitational meet, which draws the best track runners and jumpers from around the state. Johnson met the standard on Monday when she threw the discus 91' to take third place in the SSL Meet at Norwell. Menis set a personal best of 31'7" in the long jump to also claim third. She snuck into sixth place in the 440 with a time of 66.9 to round out a successful SSL season.

Murray showed her talents in the sprints this season after coming off an injury by qualifying in both the 220 and 100, but won't be able to compete because of prior commitments.

With the dual-meet season now behind Emmons and the Skippers, he is more motivated than ever by the younger athletes moving through the school's track system. In the distance events Emmons has eighth-graders Rebecca Jenkins, who ran a 6:28 four-lapper and Andrea Grew, whose personal best of 13:41 in Monday's meet was good for eighth overall in the talent-ladened two-mile field. Lis Kidder should be a force in the hurdles next season and ninth-grader Heather Little is the most likely to head the shot put and discus.

Emmons said he is slowly trying to build the program up, but the only way to do that is for the girls to leave the track season with a positive attitude that will stay with them through the start of the '94 campaign.

"I just want to continue for the individuals to improve and have some fun," he said.

That's all a coach of a growing program can really ask for.

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Bill "Spaceman" Lee, former Boston Red Sox pitching ace, was playing softball Saturday against the Hingham Police Association with his traveling all-star team.

His team, which includes former Sox Bob Stanley and Rick Miller and former Patriot Steve Nelson, dropped a 4-1 decision to the boys in blue.

After the game a distraught Lee met with a member of the Extra Points Crew for an exclusive interview.

EP: "Can I ask you a few questions?"

Lee: "Four unearned runs. I never thought I'd see the day. What was that? A few questions, shoot.

EP: "What would you do if you were named the next commissioner of baseball?"

Lee: "I'd get rid of all the new expansion clubs. Then I'd bring back the old flannel uniforms. And of course get rid of the DH."

EP: "Did you ever hit a home run in the big leagues?"

Lee: "Yeah, I hit one in each league. I think I'm the only pitcher to do that."

EP: "Why haven't the Red Sox won a World Series since 1918?"

Lee: "Don't ask me. You would have to dig up the bones of Babe Ruth and ask whatever is left of him. I said the exact same thing to (Boston Globe reporter) Dan Shaughnessy seven years ago and he went and wrote the book "The Curse of the Bambino." I didn't get any royalties but I was in the acknowledgments."

EP: "Would you like to get back into baseball?"

Lee: "I would love to manage a team in the big leagues."

EP: "How do you think your former teammate Butch Hobson is doing as manager of the Sox?"

Lee: "Butch is doing the best job he can with the material he has."

EP: "What do you think of players charging for autographs?"

Lee: "I don't agree with charging money. I sign them for nothing. Signing autographs is like cigarettes, you just keep doing one after another. I've never collected an autograph in my life. You know why? I don't stand in line for anything. At USC I took all these hard courses because no one would stand in line for the really tough professors. I've always read a lot. In fact, I know more about the Bible than David Koresh. Which isn't that much."

EP: "Any advice to young players who want to be future baseball stars?"

Lee: "I believe in building a good foundation. I think all parents should have a jungle gym in their backyards. Each morning the kids must go through it twice before they can eat breakfast. I believe in the boot camp approach. I also believe everyone should have to join the army after college."

EP: "Why are you called the "Spaceman?"

Lee: "I'm not from this planet, that's why."

EP: "One final question, do you still keep in touch with Stan Papi, the Expo player the Sox traded even up for you?"

Church wins UMass award

Amanda Church, a native of Cohasset and senior member of both the UMass/Boston women's basketball team as well as men's tennis team, was named the recipient of the William Puerto Award by the University's Athletic Department.

The William Puerto Award is bestowed on a graduating senior or person who has completed all of his or her eligibility, was a three- or four-year participant in intercollegiate sports, displayed an exemplary level of sportsmanship and leadership and made an overall contribution to the department and respective athletic program.

Church was a three-year member of both the UMass/Boston women's basketball team and men's tennis team. As a member of the women's basketball team, Church averaged 10.0 points and 7.6 rebounds per game in her three-year career. As a senior co-captain, she led the team in both scoring and rebounding with 14.4 points and 8.7 rebounds per game. As a member of the men's tennis team, Church amassed a three-year record of 13-29 in singles play and a 13-22 record in doubles play while competing against men in nearly all of her matches. In her three years with the tennis team, UMass/Boston has compiled a 24-11 record, including a second-place finish in Division 3 at the 1993 New England Championships, the school's best-ever finish at the event.

In addition to her athletic accomplishments, Church has volunteered as tennis instructor for the Special Olympics. She also volunteers her time at the Cohasset Teen Center, chaperoning teen events. Church also teaches tennis at Cohasset Community Center.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Church was a four-year member of the basketball team, earning two varsity letters. As a senior, she helped her squad to a 24-1 record and the Division 3 State Championship. Church also earned four varsity letters in tennis and was a league all-star.

Church will graduate from UMass/Boston with a bachelor's degree in physical education.

Cohasset gymnasts take top honors

Cohasset Community Center's Julie Smith and Erica Hettstrom took top honors at Kathy Corrigan's Saturday, May 1, in an Optional AAU Meet.

Erica Hettstrom placed first in the All-Around with a score of 30.60, as she swept every event. Hettstrom's scores were: Balance Beam (8.0), Floor (8.0), Vault (7.30), and Uneven Bars (7.30).

Teammate Julie Smith placed second in the All-Around with a score of 28.50 and individual scores of Balance Beam (7.10), Floor Exercise (7.60), Vault (7.0), and Uneven Bars (6.80).

Both girls qualified for the Finals to be held at Merrimack Valley on May 22 and 23.

Upcoming events include: Session IV Gymnastics Begins (Call the Center for days and times for all ages and levels).

Falmouth, the Skippers played their best game of the campaign in a 10-9, come-from-behind win over B.C. High and a 15-5 thrashing of Bedford.

"We are considerably better now than we were in the beginning of the year," Ekberg said.

B.C. High looked to have the Skippers dead on their heals after taking a four-goal lead at the half. Cohasset roared back, however, to outscore the Eagles 7-1 in the second, while goaltender Brandon Devoe came up with six huge saves in the final period to keep B.C. from closing the gap.

The Skippers' characteristic of getting goals from an array of players continued as Doug Ellinger scored a hat trick and Chris Goodman and Chris McKenna netted a pair each. McKenna also had two assists, while Charlie Endris had a single tally and assisted on two others.

Goodman continued his persecution of Bedford with five goals in the Cohasset rout. He led the Skippers' attack earlier in the season by firing six goals past the Bedford goaltender.

Cohasset finishes up the season with three consecutive home games against Wellesley on May 20, Salem on the 22nd, before closing out with Waltham on Tuesday.

That 92.3 winning percentage should go up a few notches by Tuesday evening.

Little League season off and running

Opening Day's game between the 1992 Regular Season Champion Dodgers and the 1992 Post-Season Champion Pirates followed the annual inspirational talk by our own Ken Coleman, the exhilarating sound of Lily Sesito's Star Spangled Banner and the fine toss-in by Representative Mary Jeannette Murray. Fast action began when Matt Lewis pitched a one-hitter for the Dodgers, striking out 10 opponents for the win. Greg Bilton and Dennis Rooney chipped in with a two-run homer each. Ben Roine had the Pirates hit and Derek Bugley showed some smooth pitching for the patch-eyes.

The Dodgers along with the Red Sox hold a 4-0 record for the season to date. They are followed by the 3-2 Cardinals and 2-3 Pirates. The A's and the Met's have a win each. The big news this year is the expansion league Rangers. They are a team to watch and to watch out for this season.

Games are held most week nights at 6 p.m. at Barnes Field. Forget supper — there's plenty at the snack shack. Come out and watch a town full of talented kids have fun and play well. You might see (as was seen in the Dodger-Mets duel last week) Chris Pratt deliver a fine pitching performance for the Mets while well-known hurler Greg Taylor lends defensive talents at short stop. You might see once again "Big Al" Schwerin and "Steady Steve" Baker work the mound to steal the Pirates bounty for a win. You could catch sight of Ben Smoot, who covered the plate so well in last year's playoffs, hurling strikes into the ready glove of Andrew Kinch. You could watch for the outstanding fielding performance of rookies Andrew and Will McAuliffe. There's plenty to see, but if you miss a game, game reports submitted by coaches will be published here weekly.

Christie's Lions vs. VFW Eagles

May 16, at Cohasset High School, the Christie's Lions came from behind, climaxed by a base-clearing home run by Lions' clean-up slugger Casey Andenson. This nail-biting finish was made necessary by the feisty and heavy-hitting VFW Eagles.

Brian Bilton, the Eagles version of Ted Williams, and Robbie "Back 'em Boys" Carpenter both slammed huge "four-baggers." In not-too-distant supporting roles were Will "Willie-Say-Hey-Mays" Maitch and Andrew "The Power is in the curls" Sullivan.

Supporting the "Beefo Batters" was some spectacular fielding, led by Paul "The Mitt" Cotter at first base and "Just try and get it past me" Jake Kovac. Equally thrilling was the heads-up base running of Mark "The Dart" Donovan and Marissa "Don't blink or I'm by you" Miello.

But the Lions were not to be denied. With "Glue Glove" Ashley Faber complementing the magnetic moves of Courtney Caron, the sometimes sieve-like defense tightened up to maintain a respectable score. In the closing moments of this thriller, "Slammer" Joe Durkin and Tim "Boom-Boom" Pilczak combined with Jeff "The Babe" Barrett to rescue the almost slumping Lions from the jaws of defeat.

The game was complete due entirely to the constant and friendly—although sometimes ferocious—roar of the "hillside" grandstanders!

Dodgers perfect record continues

Last Wednesday night, in a battle of the Cohasset Major League's two undefeated teams, the Dodgers took the Red Sox and claimed sole possession of first place. Greg O'Keefe was the winning pitcher, supported in the field by the entire Dodger team. The game featured a rare triple play executed by Dodgers' Greg Bilton and Matt Lewis. Mark Equi, Sean Chase, Dennis Rooney and Mark Verrochi played extremely well in the field, as did Adam Leahy, Bob Morgan and Jake Motley. Jimmy O'Sullivan looked good at the plate. The Sox pitching staff of Evan Murphy, Jake Nohe and Justin Golden combined to strike out seven Dodgers.

Last Monday night, this year's newcomers, the upstart Rangers, met the 1991 expansion team. The Cardinals offered an all-out team performance with virtually everyone in the act. There were 10 hits. Charlie Dean had a double, as well as a fine pitching performance with two strikeouts. Both Andrew and Will McAuliffe, as well as Mike Kennedy, Al Schwerin, Steve Kovach, Ryan Hubley and Steve Baker, had singles. Kovach impressed with his first-ever big league pitching performance, striking out five while giving up one hit in the two innings worked. Rookie Andrew McAuliffe worked the fifth with one strikeout. In the field, Ted Goff had a nice pickup on a hot smash to second. Dean, Baker, A. McAuliffe and Schwerin had fine fielding moves. Coach Baker gave the whole team an "A" grade for heads-up base running and advancing. The Rangers had four runs, but could not hold back the Cardinals' victory.

Thursday night the A's offense got off to an early start by scoring four runs early. Mike Rossi rattled the park with a solid shot off the fence and turned it into a homer. Evan Cutler and Jeff Flanagan both added hits. The A's defense held the Pirates until late in the game with big plays like Cutler's over-the-shoulder catch in center field and Eric Hanlan's heads-up double play at first base. Rossi challenged Pirates' base runners with sharp throws to third base as they tried to advance on the base paths. A's pitcher Peter Minnar threw five innings of great baseball and was relieved by Hanlan, who struck out two batters to end the game. The Pirates challenged to the end, coming back with six runs, but the night belonged to the A's.

In Friday night's game against the Cardinals, the Mets, trailing 1-5 in the sixth, came from behind to win, 6-5. Greg Taylor on the mound had a one-hitter with 12 strikeouts, retiring the last six Cardinal batters in a row to end the game. Mets' hits came from Andrew Ross, a fielder's choice with an RBI, Justin Maitland with a double to center, Greg Taylor, who doubled left and had 2 RBI, Matt Pitzak's single to center, and Mike Baird's sacrifice RBI. Baird defended the plate, Ryan Story and Maitland covered first and third well and Ross lent a hand at shortstop.

Steve Baker kept pace with Taylor in a 5-1/2-inning pitching duel, also earning 12 strikeouts, and giving up only one run and one hit. Rookie Andrew McAuliffe got the Cards only one hit, a nice double in the two-run third inning.

Coaches reports, submitted to the snack shack at Barner Field by 6 p.m. Sunday night, will appear here weekly.

We're still trying to figure out the lack of motivation of certain coaches who refuse to talk to us when we call for game results and feature stories. One coach in particular has yet to return a single phone call the entire spring. When reached at his home following the April vacation, he said he was away and had no idea of the status of the team. He said to call back the next evening and hung up. On another occasion the same coach was reached during the evening and was heard in the background telling his wife if we wanted to reach him we would be free the next morning — at 7:30 a.m.

Just a little information for you coach: We don't work for you. You're just one of dozens of coaches we try to get in touch with during the school year. Needless to say, we don't chase coaches down just to be hung up on. We have to answer to the newspaper's editor, executive editor and publisher, not you. The sports staff has oftentimes gone out of its way to contact coaches who take the time to talk with us and give us detailed accounts of games and meets. Likewise, these coaches, who incidentally, represent the overwhelming majority, have gone out of their way several times too, to give their athletes the credit they deserve.

So coach, don't be surprised if you see your assistant coach or a team captain or two quoted in the paper.

Bridgewater-Raynham's Evelyn Ferrioli is taking no chances in revealing what changes will be made regarding her first-doubles squad of Danielle Shevelier and Amy Perkins, who qualified for the State Tennis Finals at Longwood on June 12. Ferrioli knew a scout from Dover-Sherborn, a possible opponent in the finals, was scouting the match. Ferrioli declined to elaborated on what the practice sessions would entail this week. Better safe than sorry.

The East Bridgewater girls' track team had quite an afternoon at last Saturday's Class D State Coaches Relay Meet. The Vikings won one event and established five new school relay records during the competition. So far, EB has 11 individuals and three relays which qualified for the State Class Meet.

Cohasset Sailing Club accepting applicants

Applications are now available to Cohasset residents for 1993 membership in the Cohasset Sailing Club. Family and senior citizen memberships are available. The Sailing Club offers junior and adult training on its fleet of 10, 15-foot Cape Cod Mercuries, six Turnabouts, and two Lasers.

Applicants for junior training need not have any prior sailing experience but must have completed fourth grade or be at least 10-years-old by Labor Day, 1993. Junior Training spans five levels, from basic to the more advanced, including Sailor, Mate, Skipper, Captain, and Sailing Master. The learning process includes a combination of classroom instruction and sailing. At the junior level, two-hour classes are given three days a week. Junior classes start Monday, June 28. Adult Training includes two levels: Basic and Intermediate Sailing. The adult training is given once a week Saturday or Sunday for three hours.

The Club's fleet is available for free sailing to any member who has the necessary sailing knowledge. Free sailing is 5 p.m. to sunset Monday through Thursday, 3 p.m. to sunset Friday, and 12 p.m. to sunset on weekends.

Dock spaces are available at the Sailing Club for individuals who would like to tie up their dinghies. Boats up to 12 feet in length and up to 5 feet in beam can be accommodated. There are also some float berths for board boats.

This year's calendar of special events includes a Hot Dog Jamboree to get acquainted Tuesday, June 29; the Lobster Festival Saturday, August 7; and the Awards Ceremonies with clam chowder Saturday, August 29.

Applications have been mailed out to residences of all Cohasset voters. If you did not receive an application, one can be picked up at the Cohasset Library, the Recreation Department office at Town Hall, or by calling Kevin O'Connor at 383-1290.

Membership applications should be mailed to the Cohasset Sailing Club, Inc., P.O. Box 111, Cohasset, MA 02025 and are due by June 1, 1993.

Brother smashes brother home to tie

Liam Martin hit his brother Jari home for the tying run for the Twins in Saturday's game against the Yankees. Ashley Van Hartesfeldt also pounded out two hits with two at bats as she continues to make the opposing pitchers nervous.

Mike Sadler turned in five innings of superb catching. He was nailed by foul tips again and again, but hung tough the whole way. Adam Friedman made the catch of the game at shortstop. He pulled down a high fly with the bases loaded and two outs to save the tie for the Twins.

Once again, Kevin Hanlan provided the Twins with three solid innings of pitching, striking out eight batters while walking only one, and allowing one run.

Introduction to step training

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a 60-minute co-ed class designed for newcomers to step training or for those who haven't exercised recently. It includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning. The class is taught by Normandie Nigh, Monday and Wednesday nights at 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall beginning May 10. Fee schedule for this class is $28 for five classes in May and will be $36 for nine classes in June.

To register please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, or you may register at class time.

Fat burner workout taught at town hall

This 60 minute coed class consists of stepping, stretching, and toning exercises to make your body stronger and more efficient at burning fat. It's lots of fun, appropriate for all fitness levels, and great results are guaranteed. Toning is done with Exertubes which are available for purchase at $6 each. The class is taught by Normandie Nigh, Monday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Call 383-6791 for more information. Drop-ins welcome.

Cub Scouts are winners!

The results are in. With the completion of the grueling one-mile run last Monday, the participating Cubs are hereby declared winners of the President's Challenge. The results have been submitted to the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, and the awards will be presented at the Pack 38 Bike Rodeo June 8.

For achieving top scores in all fitness categories, Cub Scouts Tim Baird, David Krueger, Peter Maitland, and Mickey Palone have won the Presidential Physical Fitness Award and Certificate from President Clinton. This award is given in recognition of the outstanding level of physical fitness that these boys have exhibited.

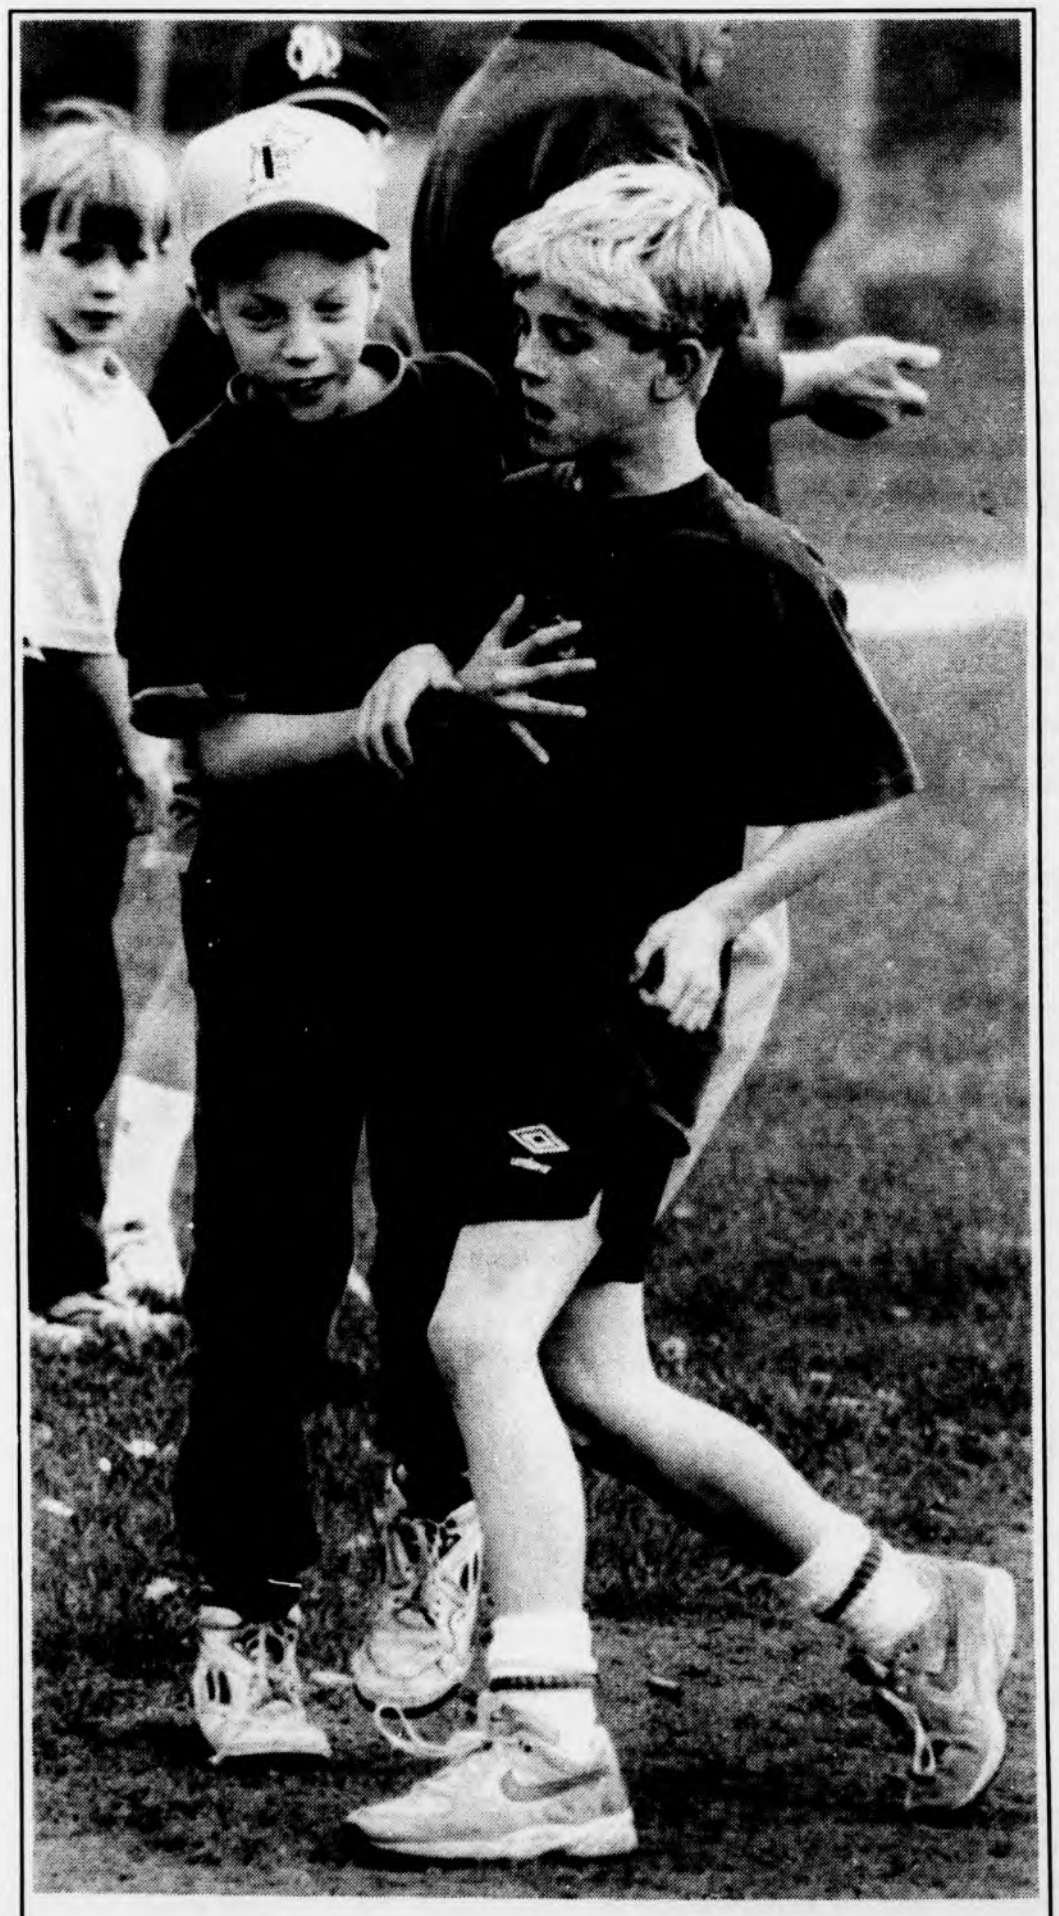
The National Physical Fitness Award has been won by Chris Carr, Andy Dennis, David DeVito, Johnny Dwyer, Greg Ernst, Alex Etkind, John Friedman, David Ingber, Ian Kidder, Andy Kinch, Ben Kinch, Phillip Kreycik, Brian Krupczak, Jared Krupczak, Ross Lieb-Lappen, Daniel Littauer, Matt Meikleham, Paul Previte and Brian Wasp. This award is given to those Cubs who attained scores above the national average in all events.

The Participant Physical Fitness Award is presented to the following Cubs who participated in all events of the President's Challenge:

Connor Avery, Bobby Camacho, Mike Casey, Mark Chapman, Trey Curry, Scott Faber, Lane Forrer, Ryan Johnson, Robby Lehr, Brian Litchfield, Will McArthur, Joe Nicynski, Evan Pestone, Jody Roach, Mike Snowdale, Nick Spirito and Nathaniel Wilcox.

The top scorers for the individual events were:

Andy Dennis, 48 situps in one minute; David Krueger, 37 cm sit-and-stretch; Peter Maitland, 10 pullups; Mickey Palone, 9.8-second shuttle-run; Brian Wasp, 6:57 mile run.



Peter Maitland (left) glances over at his competition before going on to post his best mile time in the Presidents Physical Fitness competition. Deer Hill physical education teacher Dennis Kuntz looks on in the background.

Tennis tourey set

The Cohasset Community Center will host the 4th Annual Benefit Tennis Tournament June 25, 26, and 27. Open to the public, this tournament will benefit the Nursery School Nardo Scholarship Fund and the center. For youths, seniors, and adults, the tournament offers round-robin play on private courts in Cohasset and Scituate. Call the center at 383-0088 for more information. Registration ends June 10.

Dance Into Summer

Mark your calendars today! The Cohasset Little League Dance will take place once again Saturday, May 29.

"Dance Into Summer" will feature the live band J.D., Billy and Ken at the Broad Cove Ballroom, Route 3A, in Hingham, from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. Tickets are $30/couple and will be available shortly.

There will be an organizational meeting Monday, May 10 at 8 p.m. at the home of Susan and John Carr. Anyone interested in helping on the dance committee, please call Susan Carr at 383-0331 or Jodi Caron at 383-9705.

Safe boating course

The Cohasset Recreation Department is pleased to announce that telephone registrations will be accepted for a spring safe boating course, to be conducted by Flotilla 1208 of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 383-6791.

The six-lesson Safe Boating Certification Program commenced Tuesday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m. in room 206 at Cohasset High School, and meets each Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. through Tuesday, June 8. The program is open to both youth and adults and is essential under Massachusetts Law for youth aged 16 and under who plan to operate a craft powered by 25 H.P. or more. The cost for the Safe Boating Course is $15 per person for textbook and materials supplied by the U.S.C.G.A. and town expenses. Children aged 10 or so may take the course. It is suggested, however, that they be accompanied by an adult. Adults who pass Safe Boating are eligible for insurance premium reductions on their boat insurance.

Cohasset Sailing Club is for you

Junior Training at the Cohasset Sailing Club will span five levels this year, from basic to the more advanced, including Sailor, Mate, Skipper, Captain, and Sailing Master. Last year a number of junior members requested an alternative to the racing orientation in the Junior Training Program. Starting this year, students at the Skipper level can choose between Cruising or the traditional Racing program. Cruising instruction will include an introduction to navigation, use of the spinnaker, rules of the road, and teamwork for cruising. In addition, a Teen Cruising Program will be offered.

The learning process in the Junior Program includes a combination of classroom instruction and sailing. At this junior level, two-hour classes are given three days a week. Junior classes start Monday, June 28. Applicants for junior training need not have any prior sailing experience but must have completed fourth grade or be at least ten years old by Labor Day, 1993.

If you have any questions on the program, please call Larry Mitchell at 383-9888 or Bob Davenport at 383-1932. Membership applications can be picked up at the Cohasset Library, the Recreation Department office at Town Hall, or by calling Kevin O'Connor at 383-1290.

There is limited sign up. No drop-ins are accepted.

A gymnastic camp will be held the weeks of Aug. 2, Aug. 9 and the week of Aug. 23. The camps are for girls ages six to 18 years old with all levels of skill.

Call the center at 383-0088 for more information.

Classes are taught by Ruthann Sargent, Pattie Donahue, Tiffany Zaniboni, Susie O'Brien, and Karen Clemente.

Wah Lum Academy wins trophies at youth tournament

Students from the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset recently competed at the New England Academy of Karate Youth Tournament, held in Hanson. Participation in Form, Weapons Form, and Fighting divisions was determined by age and experience. In their respective Form divisions trophies were won by the following students; a third-place to Jordon Fiore of Cohasset, and first and second-place trophies went to brothers Nathan and Andy Schomer of Hingham. In the Weapons Division Jesse Miller of Scituate won second place. In the Fighting divisions fourth-place went to Jordon Fiore. A third-place went to Scott Owen of Hingham and a second-place was earned by Jeff Ciulla of Scituate. A first and second-place for fighting also went to Nathan and Andy Schomer. For further information on Wah Lum Academy please call 383-6822.

Social Service League, another busy year

The Social Service League of Cohasset recently held its Annual Meeting and Luncheon. Out going President, Ginny Riley, presented the five officers and Board members. There are seventeen Board of Directors. The officers for 1993-1994 are: President: Annette Sawchuk; Vice President: Ann Mitchell; Treasurer: Mary Hartwell; Assistant Treasurer: Eleanor Smith; Secretary: Lanny Bacc[illegible]. New members on the Board of Directors are: Mar[illegible]cCarthy; Carol Meers; Connie Noon, Jane Russell; Peggy Soltesz and Margie Steele.

It has been a very busy 81st year for the league as it continues to serve clients in town and in area communities thru its Nursing and Family Service Committees, its social worker and the Cohasset Consignment Shop.

The Board of Health Nurse, Judy Fitzsimmons, and her colleague Corinne Cahill, R.N., made over 1,147 nursing visits as well as numerous referrals to other agencies. They vaccinated 590 people at the annual flu clinics, provided by the league and the Board of Health. During the monthly Keep Well conferences 319 people were seen. They provided TB testing and sponsored the Mobile Diagnostics Van for mammography screenings. The largest program this year was the the Annual Health Fair. Merle Graham, chairman of the Nursing Committee, and her volunteers did a tremendous job this year and over 125 people took advantage of the various free screenings and health services. The Second Congregational Church and several local businesses once again provided much appreciated support.

Other programs organized by the Nursing Committee included a program on menopause and estrogen therapy; immunology update for children and a joint program with family service on eating disorders held at the Cohasset High School, in cooperation with Mike Gill, health education director.

Pat Carleton, LICSW, works closely with Judy Fitzsimmons, R.N. and the Family Service Committee. She provides counseling to all age groups and to residents of Cohasset (majority are from Cohasset), Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Norwell. A significant portion of her work includes family consultation regarding frail parents. She can see clients in their homes as well as in her office. In addition to self-referrals, she receives referrals from Judy Fitzsimmons; outreach workers; visiting nurse organizations; churches, schools and medical centers.

She also served on the Board for the Teen Depot, Drug-Free Weekend Committee, and oversees along with the program coordinator the New Friends Program. The newest addition to her responsibilities includes collaborating with Marguerite Haider of Wellspring in forming the Intervention Project, a supportive service for battered women.

Adriane Thompson and Jane Russell attend the May 11 annual meeting of the Cohasset Social Service League.

Corine Cahill, R.N., Merle Graham, chairman of the nursing committee, and Judy Fitzsimmons, board of health nurse chat during the annual meeting of the Social Service League last week.

(Lynne Layman photos)

The Family Service Committee, chaired by Ruth Wilcox, had various programs as well. The Meals on Wheels program has volunteers delivering as many as thirty hot meals a day to Cohasset residents. The Friends Program is coordinated by Diane Saleski and provides a vital link for those in need; and the Student Job Bank is starting its second year. The eating disorders' program was very well attended as well as a workshop on financial and legal issues for women. Family service is also working with the high school on getting a public service requirement as part of the curriculum. Members on the committee are helping out with the food pantry and at Thanksgiving time, some of the members organized a turkey dinner with all the fixings for some residents at Harborview.

The Cohasset Consignment Shop is managed by Andy Merrill. It is staffed by over 110 volunteers from various towns, not just Cohasset. It was founded thirty eight years ago by three league members and today is probably the largest, non-profit consignment shop in this 75 mile area, open eleven months a year. The profits from its sales provide over half of the Social Service League's revenue. This in turn enables the League to extend its services to Cohasset residents and to the several continguous towns on the South Shore. The shop is well managed and a fun place to volunteer.

As the Board of Health nurse said recently, "The Social Service League is an enduring institution whose mission is as relevant today as it was 80 years ago when founded."

The league's success is made possible by the continued, energetic support and commitment of its staff and many, many volunteers.

Mammography screening

The Cohasset Social Service League sponsors the Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. (MDI) mobile mammography service. The mammograms are performed on the fully equipped MDI coach, which is convenient, comfortable, private, and staffed by registered female certified mammographers. The X-rays are read by board certified radiologists, and the result will be sent to you and your physician.

This service is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

WHEN: Saturday, June 5, 1993 from 9:15 a.m. to 3 p.m.

WHERE: The van will be located in front of the Congregational Church (near town hall).

WHO: American Cancer Society recommends that women: 40 to 49 years of age have a mammogram every one to two years; over 50 years of age have a mammogram every year; and under age 35, a doctor's order is required.

COST: The total cost with Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. is $107, which is billed to your insurance company. You also have the option of taking advantage of MDI's discounted fee of $85, payable on the day of the exam only, by cash, check, Mastercard or Visa.

As a provider of the following plans, MDI can bill them without a referral form from your primary care physician:

- Bay State Health Care
- Blue Cross and Blue Shield
- Tufts Associates Health Plan
- HMO Blue
- Pilgrim Health Care

You would need to get a referral form from your primary care physician if you are covered under U.S. Healthcare.

Medicare will pay for a screening mammogram only every other year.

Private indemnity plans such as Prudential and John Hancock will pay when the appropriate age guidelines are followed and the deductible has been met.

It is each woman's responsibility to know the extent of coverage through her health insurance plan. If your insurance company does not pay for your screening mammogram, MDI will bill you the full charge of $107.

To schedule your appointment call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771.

Tour the writing lab

Cohasset High School hosts a grand opening for the new Writing Lab tonight from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. All parents and the general public are invited to tour the Writing Lab, with special demonstrations by teachers and students.

In addition, exhibits of innovative student work, blending art and technology, will be displayed in the Senior Study.

Want your portrait done digitally? Interested in Turbo tax or Quicken Checkbook? Can you imagine Lego TC Logo? Come tonight, and see how our students are learning to master computer technology. You will also see displays of student art, original student music compositions using MIDI technology, climbing equipment for the CHS Ropes Course, and a student set design for "The Glass Menagerie." Don't miss it!

CHS artists honored

The Arts Boosters Club hosts the annual Cohasset High School Arts Recognition Night at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the high school cafeteria. Approximately 200 senior high school students, their parents, and teachers will gather to honor CHS artists, dramatists, musicians, writers, and all our creative students involved in the arts. Individual invitations have been mailed to parents of students to be recognized by arts teachers Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Colleen Wheeler, and Jo-Ellen Wood.

Teachers present awards for individual achievement, an Undergraduate Study Scholarship, and recognition for Outstanding Senior in the Arts. Students and parents will say "fare well" to beloved Art Teacher Colleen Lucas, who will be on maternity leave next year. Please come tonight to celebrate the arts, and the artists, at Cohasset High School.

Release day update

Thursday, May 13, the faculty of the Joseph Osgood School used this Early Release Day to present lessons and activities developed this year under a literacy theme. As a school goal, the teachers have found new and exciting ways to incorporate writing into the curriculum. This afternoon's demonstration was based on the Cultural Norm of Appreciation and Recognition.

In one classroom, Deborah Webster, the teacher, had students read stories then write their own story but in a different format. By reading a lot of literature, students get their own ideas on what to write. After the students' stories were completed, they were "published" in the Publishing Center provided by the P.S.O.

In Marian Atkinson's classroom, the students read a book together, then wrote a letter to the author. It seems the children were wondering why the author ended the book the way he did. The class compiled a list of questions and sent them off. A few weeks later, the author answered the children's letter with his reasons for writing the book the way he did.

Other techniques used by teachers were guided questions, a book written by the class to be displayed in the library and even how to incorporate literacy into math lessons.

The Deer Hill teachers used the Cultural Norm of Reaching Out to the Knowledge Bases as the theme for this in-service day. Each teacher presented an activity or lesson that she/he had found to be particularly valuable to her/his teaching. Ideas on homework, note taking, vocabulary, reviewing techniques for math and grammar, parent conferencing tips and many others were presented.

Later on, Polly Gallagher and Judy Ritts, Special Education teachers at Deer Hill, discussed 'Inclusion'. Inclusion is a new concept in addressing the needs of special education students. This method has the classroom teacher and special education teacher, team teaching in the regular education classroom. Also, Liz Leonard, the computer teacher, conducted a demonstration of some new software in the computer lab.

The last Early Release Day for this school year is June 10.

Philately puts its stamp on Deer Hill

Budding philatelists, Brooke Baker, Kelly Lordan, and Patrick O'Hayre are the winners of an essay contest presented in coordination with Mrs. Horigan's fourth grade class at Deer Hill and the Cohasset Post Office. Each essay was written on a particular stamp researched by the students.

First-place winner, Kelly Lordan, did her research on the newly issued Elvis stamp. Brooke Baker, second-place winner, reached back into history and wrote about the 1853 Gadsden Purchase. Third-place winner, Patrick O'Hayre, researched the commemorative Hoover Dam stamp. For their hard work and enthusiasm, the children received certificates and collector stamp packets.

Bruce Wescott, the Hull Postmaster, and Ann Adams, a Cohasset postal worker, introduced Mrs. Horigan's fourth-grade class to stamp collecting.

During the afternoon, they spent at Deer Hill, Wescott and Adams shared with the students a video on the history of stamps and donated several texts and a game to get the children started in their research.

Since then, the entire class has gone "hog wild" over collecting and trading stamps! The rule is, if you like the stamp, then it's okay to collect it. Cancelled, uncanceled, decorative, domestic, and foreign stamps have been piling up in Room 10.

Parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, older brothers and sisters, are passing on their collections to the next generation of philatelists. Stamps are also used during class to motivate the students to do their best. Getting 100 percent on a weekly spelling test not only earns the student a sticker, but also a chance to pick from the "stamp jar" and add to his or her collection.

Mrs. Horigan initiated this activity so that her students would become more aware of the history reflected in stamps. She hopes many of the children will adopt researching, collecting, and trading stamps as a life-long hobby.

Brooke Baker, Kelly Lordan, and Patrick O'Hayre are congrautlated by Ann Adams from the Cohasset Post Office. These budding Philatelists are the winners of an essay contest.

Summer learning program

Are you looking for a program to enhance your child's readiness for school next Fall, or to reinforce what he or she has learned about writing or math and will not be able to practice all summer? Once again The Academic Express is preparing for their summer tutoring/enrichment program. Courses in reading and writing or math will be offered to students who have completed grades K-6. The program features individual tutoring and small group instruction. Sessions run for two weeks beginning August 2 and August 16 and classes meet daily from 8:30 until 10 a.m.

The children will be introduced to exciting and interesting books and will work on strategies for learning. Writing activities will be in response to literature and will be process-oriented including work on revision and editing. Techniques to aid organization and comprehension such as mapping and vocabulary development will be taught and applied. Math concepts will be reinforced through the use of manipulatives. Math facts will be practiced for understanding and mastery. The Academic Express seeks to increase academic skills and help children gain confidence for learning.

Staff for The Academic Express is headed by Joy J. Turpie and Mary G. Aucoin. Turpie had been a special education and elementary teacher in Hingham for more than 10 years. She is currently a doctoral fellow at Boston University. She has a masters degree from Lesley College, and an undergraduate degree from Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois. Aucoin has more than 20 years of teaching experience in the Hingham schools. She has a masters degree in education from the University of Massachusetts at Boston, and an undergraduate degree from the University of New York at Cortland. Both are Horace Mann scholars and have extensive backgrounds in teaching children at many different levels of need. Mrs. Turpie and Mrs. Aucoin are both residents of Hingham.

For further information, call The Academic Express at 749-1703.

school's in

by Ed Leary

I just came from a celebration, a celebration of the professionalism that surrounds me in the faculty at the junior/senior high school. For the final in-service day activity, the teachers at the junior-senior high school gathered to present the results of the projects that they had been working on throughout this year.

But first some background. The in-service day program took a new turn this year. In September members of the faculty established professional goals to pursue either individually or in workgroups. The theme of the year was "Go HOGWILD!" (Help Others Grow With Involvement Leadership, and Direction). This is not to trivialize what happened; I have nothing but pride for what I witnessed at the meeting as each individual and group shared their accomplishments with us.

For example, the seventh-grade team reported on the various interdisciplinary projects that they have been developing. Every speaker and every field trip involves the cooperation of the four teachers. For instance, an excursion to Boston last month followed the trail of Johnny Tremain to coincide with reading of the novel in English, while math skills involved scale drawings of Boston. A trip to the Cape Cod Canal finds science classes studying tides and wind effects; while a guest speaker describes the construction of the canal, and English classes develop the vocabulary necessary to read and write about the history of the area. Social studies classes compare the history and construction of the Panama Canal as a similar engineering feat.

This brings up another point: the team has made a concerted effort to cooperate with the PSO in order to bring the world into the classroom with a series of visitors, ranging from a Civil War soldier to a man who held the freshmen absolutely spellbound with his tales of climbing Mount Kilimanjaro. The speakers not only captivate the students but also provide the opportunity for important note taking and listening skills development. For example, the winners of a listening skills contest received an autographed copy of the speaker's book, The Breach.

As an English teacher, I was thrilled when four teachers banded together to explore the writing process in their subject areas. Dissatisfied with the quality of student writing in their classes, the art, music, biology and technology education teachers met with an English teacher in order to share concerns and explore a variety of methods to improve the way in which they use writing as a student outcome.

First, they developed a set of coherent expectations for their writing assignments; then they examined different techniques for improving critical thinking skills as an adjunct to the writing process. They tried "modeling," "cubing," "looping," and a host of other approaches. The outcomes included biology research papers that tapped into the life experiences of the students, an art teacher who researched and wrote alongside her students, and students who investigated and wrote about career opportunities in their chosen fields.

Writing seems to be a motif here for the entire social studies department spent the year establishing a sequential description of the types of writing that occur at every level of the curriculum. Thus, each teacher can base his or her instruction on the knowledge of prior writing experiences that the students have had. The result is a truly impressive array of skills and activities that coordinate across the curriculum and reinforce the work that is being done in the English classes.

There's no doubt that writing has become an interdisciplinary focus that removes it from the English class and into the arena of a life skill necessary for survival in a complex world.

One other teacher spent her time communicating with members of English departments at the collegiate level. The goal was to investigate the perceived needs of college students from the point of view of the instructors. Conversations with professors from Boston College, the University of Massachusetts and Nazareth College revealed some interesting information. First, colleges want their students to read, read, read, and then read some more! Furthermore, the writing emphasis at the college level now seems to focus on a direct response to the reading rather than upon personal experience. Interestingly enough, while the research paper is of prime importance in the academic setting, colleges assume that students already possess research skills, and feel that it is incumbent upon high schools to provide these skills.

In view of the above discussions, it should surprise no one that Cohasset is taking its commitment to writing very seriously and that the students can only benefit from this commitment.

Another area that attracted quite a bit of attention is the increased role of technology in the educational process. To begin with, members of the math department spent the year preparing to set up the new math lab/network proposed for this summer by visiting Harvard University, as well as other high schools, and by completing course work on the various applications. Physical education teachers are reviewing several programs that assess individual student fitness, help students set goals for improvement and provide a long-term record of student performance. The special needs department also experimented with various record-keeping and reporting options.

At the risk of slighting many people, I must move on. Suffice it to say, I have nothing but admiration and praise for all those professionals that devoted this year to the improvement of the educational process in Cohasset.

Of course, I have to stop and brag about the new computer lab that is now fully functional in the north wing of the high school. With 18 new LC 11 computers, 2 Classics, 6 Mac plusses, 7 printers, and a laser writer, we now offer a tremendous resource to help students with their writing. Included is not only hardware but also software intended to aid in the revision process. Other departments also make use of the lab: technology classes have been in to work on graphic design, the business department has scheduled modules in the lab, and music students will be exploring computer-assisted composition.

Please attend the Arts Boosters' Open House tonight, May 20, where we will be showing off our new facility from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Finally, a hearty congratulations to the seniors; they (and their parents) made it! Around the building the word is that this is a great group of young men and women with tremendous potential. The list of accomplishments is impressive: the years of community volunteer service, the enthusiasm, and friendliness displayed in their classes are all qualities that demand recognition. Aside from their personal qualities, this class has set a standard for excellence in other areas as well, containing a State Champion, two National Merit Scholarship recipients, a National Scholarship for Outstanding Negro Students recipient, three acceptances to Harvard as well as a multitude of the Ivies; in fact, 94 percent of this year's graduates are going on to college. Again, BRAVO!!!

As I look back at the article before I put it in the mail, I realize that it begins with the excellence of the teachers and ends with the excellence and accomplishments of the students. It's no wonder that I'm proud to be a member of this profession.

Childrens' summer art

The Children's Creativity Workshop accepts registration for the evening series beginning in August. Boys and girls ages eight to 12 years meet from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. once a week for five weeks.

In Native American Art young artists explore the natural materials found in masks, pottery, jewelry and sand paintings. At each session a descriptive history of the particular art being focused on will be given.

The sports and action figures series is geared for young people interested in learning how to portray the human figure in realistic action poses.

For more information on the summer program call Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453.

What's the big deal?

You are! When you decide to have your baby at Quincy Hospital, you receive the special attention you deserve.

Right from the start, we can help you select one of our fine, private obstetricians. And we also have the largest nurse midwife group in this area.

You'll have a private room during labor, and after your baby is born. Relaxing decor. A private bath with a tub. A partner's chair that converts to a sleeper. All the comforts of home during your labor, in the security of the hospital. And later, having your own room gives you the space and freedom to get comfortable with your new arrival without a lot of unnecessary interruptions.

Your family and friends will appreciate the free parking and the fact that Quincy Hospital is only minutes from Routes 128, 3 and 93.

After you go home, what you'll remember most is the nurses. Their personal attention and individualized teaching help make your experience unique. In fact, the nurses give you a phone number when you leave so you can call them 24 hours a day if you have any questions.

But seeing is believing. So call Quincy Hospital's Public Relations Department at (617) 773- 6100 ext. 4016 or send in the coupon to receive a free seven minute videotape about Quincy Hospital's maternity service.

Because the big deal at Quincy Hospital is great care!

Story behind Maritime Museum chronicled

By David H. Wadsworth
Senior curator, Cohasset Historical Society

Symbolic of the preeminence of Cohasset's maritime industry in the 18th and 19th centuries is the Society's Maritime Museum at 4 Elm Street, Cohasset center.

The exact date of construction of this 18th century ship chandlery is not known, but the builder was Samuel Bates.

Until 1957 the old building was located on the landward side of Border Street, across the road from the early stone wharf called Bates' Wharf.

Samuel Bates (1718-c.1780) was taxed in 1754 for a wharf and property at Ship Cove (Cohasset Harbor). That entry in Town Records is the earliest known mention of the Bates fishing business that lasted until the death of John Bates in 1882. The old ship chandlery (or marine supply store) on Border Street was part of that business.

In the latter 1800's the Bates property at the Cove was purchased by Cohasset summer resident the financier Clarence W. Barron.

The 18th century Bates family in Cohasset was descended from Clement Bates, a settler in Hingham in 1635. Samuel, who founded the fishing business at the Cove, married in 1737 Mercie Beal. Following his demise, their son Samuel born in 1744, ran the Border Street business. He was described as "Ship Owner, Master Mariner and Trader," and married Martha Beal in 1764. He served in the Revolution and resided at the north end of Cohasset Common.

November 3, 1801 Samuel and his entire crew were drowned when his fishing schooner was wrecked near Outer Bush Island, Cohasset.

April 14, 1803 the Administrator of Samuel's estate sold the wharf and Cove property, including a new house built by Samuel, to Master Mariner Samuel Stockbridge of Scituate and Cohasset. He had been born in 1769 and in 1800 had married Sibae Litchfield, daughter of Deacon Israel and Sarah Litchfield of Scituate.

Samuel Stockbridge and his brother Hector resided in the large double-house at the beginning of Margin Street at the Cove. Hector Stockbridge drowned in Cohasset Harbor in January 1810, and Samuel died in February the same year.

The wharf and its property (including the chandlery) soon passed back to the Bates family, to John Bates, son of Jonathan and grandson of Samuel the founder. John (1782-1842) married in 1814 Sarah Lincoln, and was a "Trader." In 1819 he was Master of the vessel "Only Joe" and later owned a sizable fishing fleet including the schooners "William Tell" (1828), "Leonidas" (1827), "Sarah" (1830) and "Triton" (1838).

John and Sarah were childless, and after his death the wharf and its attendant property went to his nephew John, son of his brother Martin Bates, a "fur dealer" of Boston and Cohasset.

This John maintained his office in the old chandlery building and his desk can be seen in the second floor office of today's Maritime Museum.

Beginning in 1848 John Bates began adding new schooners to the Bates fishing fleet, of which the names of at least 15 are known. They included "Georgiana" (1851), "Northern Light" (1853), "Prairie Flower" (1858), "Monitor" and "Morning Star" (1868 and "Wide Awake" (1873). He also owned five square-riggers engaged "in foreign trade" of which the well-known barque "Hesta" was one.

The death of John Bates in 1882 brought to an end the family fishing business at the Cove and the old chandlery was one of the buildings sold to Clarence W. Barron in the latter years of the 1800s.

Years of varying occupancy and usage followed until in the mid-1950s when the fine 18th century building was given to the Historical Society by Barron's granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox.

In 1957 the chandlery was moved to its present location to become a permanent memorial to Cohasset seafaring history.

The Historical Society's Maritime Museum will open for its summer season Tuesday, June 1, and remains open through September each afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. except Mondays. There is no admission fee, and donations will be welcomed.

Register for classes

St. Anthony's Parish is accepting registration for fall classes in Religious Education, grades one to 10.

Please call or stop by the CCD office Tuesday or Friday morning, 129 S. Main St., 383-0630.

Curtain rises Saturday

Scenes from memorable Broadway shows and hit tunes from Tin Pan Alley, all adapted to suit the abilities of local talent, will come to life on the stage of Cohasset High School's Auditorium Saturday evening (May 22) at 8 p.m. as the Second Congregational Church presents "Congo Capers of '93".

A half hundred performers, backed by an experienced production crew, will sing and dance their way through a sequence of skits that will showcase unexpected stagecraft skills of parishioners likely to bring standing ovations from a full-house audience.

Tickets to the show are available from cast members, a committee headed by Margaret Bates, or by calling the church, 383-0345, at $4 for adults and $2 for seniors and children.

Final preparation for the show included a scheduled run-through with props on Wednesday evening, followed by the all-important dress rehearsal on Friday.

The show will open with 25 singers and dancers taking the audience back to World War II days, this to be followed by a "Matchmaker" skit featuring eight performers. Other ensemble numbers will be interspersed with solo performances of a Camelot medley and songs by soloist Vivian Bobo.

Jo Ann Fichtner, impressario of many other local shows and presentations by schools and college, is director of Congo Capers, with Bob Leavitt, Minister of Music at the church and a music teacher in Hull Schools, is Music Director. The backstage crew is headed by Herman Fichtner as Production Manager, Murray Campbell as Production Manager, and Clark Young as Lighting Director. Costuming is is charge of group that includes Grace Wilkin, Georgine Butman and Muriel Wheelwright.

Harborfest parade alert

Recently, registration cards were sent to everyone who had expressed an interest in joining the Harborfest Parade June 20. If you or your organization did not receive that mailing and you want to be a part of the parade, please call Keith Knowles at 383-1331, as soon as possible.

Dance into summer

Cohasset Little League presents "Dance Into Summer" with the fantastic live band, J.D., Billy and Ken, Saturday, May 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Broad Cove Ballroom, Route 3A in Hingham.

Tickets are $30 per couple. Anyone interested in helping on the dance committee, please call Susan Carr at 383-0331 or Jodi Caron at 383-9705. Tickets may be purchased through coaches or at the Cohasset Community Center.

Saturday fun slated

Sign ups have started for a Saturday morning program for kids ages three, four, and five, meeting from 9 to 10:30 a.m., Saturdays May 29 through June 19 at the Osgood School.

The fee is $20 for the first child and $10 for each sibling.

The program is designed to help develop and reinforce both social and motor skills through play and peer group interaction and is ideal for any child who plans to register for Summer Playground or who will be attending pre-school or kindergarten next fall.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791 to register.

NOW leader at workshop

Patricia Ireland, president of National Organization for Women (NOW), will be conducting workshops on feminist political strategies Saturday, May 22, at 10 a.m., at New North Church, One Lincoln Street in Hingham.

Hands-on activist workshops will include community organizing, coalition building, fundraising, diversity training, media and more.

South Shore NOW and Massachusetts NOW are sponsoring this event.

For information and pre-registration call Jeannette Tibbetts, (617) 337-6725, or Suzanne Cutler, (617) 749-3342.

Annual barn sale

Mark your calendars for the Annual Barn Sale to be held Sunday, May 30 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Route 228, Hingham. (Raindate is Monday, May 31.)

New and used items will be available. A Kid's Fair and Bake Sale are also planned for the same day and time. All are welcome.

scout news

Pack 38 news

Pack 38 held its annual crossover ceremony at the recent monthly pack meeting for May. At this time, the 12 Tiger Cubs were officially inducted into the pack and presented with their Wolf Cub neckerchiefs.

Twenty-one Wolf Cubs were advanced to Bear Cubs, and 33 Bears to Webelos Scouts. At the April pack meeting, those boys who had completed the second year of the Webelos program "Crossed over the Bridge to Scouting" for their official welcome into Boy Scout Troop 28.

SUMMERTIME HAPPENINGS

June 8: Bike Rodeo and President's Challenge Awards.

June 19-20: Parent-son camp weekend at Camp Child (register with council office for this).

June 26-27: Harborfest Float Construction and Parade (Cubs who help build the pack float get to ride on it in the parade!)

July 13: Annual Pack Cookout/Picnic and Sports Challenge Night.

August 10: Annual Pack Swim Party.

Beautification project

Thursday, May 13, Brownie Troop 4773, Daisy Troop 4777, and Cadette Troop 4300 planted flowers and bushes on the Town Walkway, next to the Texaco Gas Station. Amy Butman, Cadette Troop 4300, in conjunction with the Village Renaissance Committee coordinated the clean-up/spruce-up of the area.

The project coincided with the Girl Scout Service Project "Caring for the Earth." In doing this, the Girl Scouts celebrated their 80th birthday. Instead of getting presents, the Scouts were giving gifts back to the earth in the form of environmental projects, such as hazardous waste days, recycling, tree and plant plantings, and clean-up days.

Amy is utilizing this activity as part of her Girl Scout Silver Award requirements. The Silver Award is the second highest award a Girl Scout can earn.

Register for scouts

Calling all Daisies, Brownies, Juniors, Cadettes, and Seniors!!!

Cohasset Girl Scout Registration(1993-1994) Tuesday, May 25, in the Second Congregational Church(Bates Hall), from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. All girls(including current Scouts) will be registering for next year at this time. Registration fee is $6. Troops will be organized for the fall according to this information.

Cohasset Girls Scouts will be the first group in the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council to register girls through computers. If Cohasset's registration proves successful, computers will be the registration tool of the future.

Regional fire district debate is heating up

By Alison Cohen and Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Planners for a regional fire district pushed the first hot button recently.

Firefighters elected to pull out of discussions when town administrators and fire chiefs refused to sign a joint statement of purpose and administrations drafted by their union, Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts.

The conflict drew television news attention when representatives from the union held a demonstration in front of Norwell's town hall while the fire district study committee met with its consultant.

Norwell Fire Chief George Cavanagh estimated the demonstration involved 40-50 firefighters from all over Massachusetts. The demonstration was described as peaceful. Robert McCarthy, president of Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts, requested permission to address the committee and was given permission to do so.

According to Annette Sexton, Norwell's Executive Secretary and acting spokesman for the regional fire district study committee, the union demands are premature. Sexton said the group is still in the preliminary study phase.

"Our selectmen have not agreed to anything yet," Sexton said. "The union is way out ahead of us. He's talking about setting up a fire district, we're talking about regionalizing."

McCarthy — who explained that the five local union chapters from Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Hull, and Hingham voted for him to serve as their representative — said the stakes are highest for

Star (Market) to rise on Rte. 3A

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The speculation is over: Star Market has purchased a 12-acre site at the corner of King Street and Route 3A, diagonally across from the Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza for an undisclosed sum.

Crocker II Realty Trust owns the land, but the identity of the trustees was unavailable at the time the Mariner went to press. However, Cohasset Heights Landfill owner Paul Barry confirmed that he was affiliated with the property.

"A purchase and sale was signed two weeks ago with a number of contingencies," Barry explained. The contingencies, he said, are primarily permitting restrictions required by Cohasset for the project.

Curtain rises at Music Circus box office Saturday

By Mary Ford

Can you get more for less?

Just ask the new team behind the South Shore Music Circus.

They have booked 25 percent more shows and will charge about 20 percent less on average for tickets this year.

"We're trying to make the shows more affordable to people stuck in these economic down times," says Vincent Longo, general manager of the Music Circus.

The box office phones for the 42-year-old theater open at 9 a.m. Saturday and Longo expects the lines to be busy.

"With this schedule there are less repeats than the previous two years running. We're keeping it fresh and we're also getting new talent to the venue," Longo said.

Longo, who came on board last fall, hired Lesley Palmiter, director of public relations, and Fred Suss, who is assistant general manager/talent buyer.

The team collectively represents dozens of years in show business know-how and also directs the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis. Both venues are owned by South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., a non-profit corporation which provides grants to support local arts and education programs.

Before coming to Cohasset, Longo, who has been in the concert promotion business for 15 years, served as executive director of the Sea Shore Performing Arts Center, a 15,000-seat amphitheater in Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

Leonard strikes gold in Olympics — again

(Last in a series of local residents who competed in the Senior Olympics in Quincy, May 10-14)

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

When Ann Leonard's friend gave her an application for the first annual Senior Olympics at Quincy's Veterans Stadium 11 years ago, she entered all of the track and field events without really knowing what to expect.

As it turned out, Leonard struck gold — in a big way. In her 11 years of competition Leonard has walked, jumped and thrown her way to a phenomenal 35 gold medals. She was voted the games' best female athlete in 1985 and has continued to her events as she moves into the different age groups that the competition is broken into.

"Since then I've been getting all gold," said the personable Leonard, who showed she hasn't lost a step by taking home firsts again this year in the shot put, running long-jump, javelin, standing long-jump and the softball throw, this time in the 75-79-year-old age group.

With the success she had in this year's games one would have expected Leonard trained like a fiend in the

Memorial Day ceremonies

The annual Memorial Day parade steps off from the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. Monday. From there it will proceed to the cemetery at Joy Place. The parade, which will include about 70 Cohasset veterans, the Kevin Barry Irish American Pipers, the Deer Hill School Band, town officials, and scouts of all ages, will then march to the World War I memorial at the town common.

The the parade proceeds to Veterans' Memorial Park at the harbor where Commander William Malone (US Navy) will be the guest speaker, said Stephen Wigmore, commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post.

Signs thefts a problem

Cohasset police are alarmed about the number of street signs that have been stolen in town.

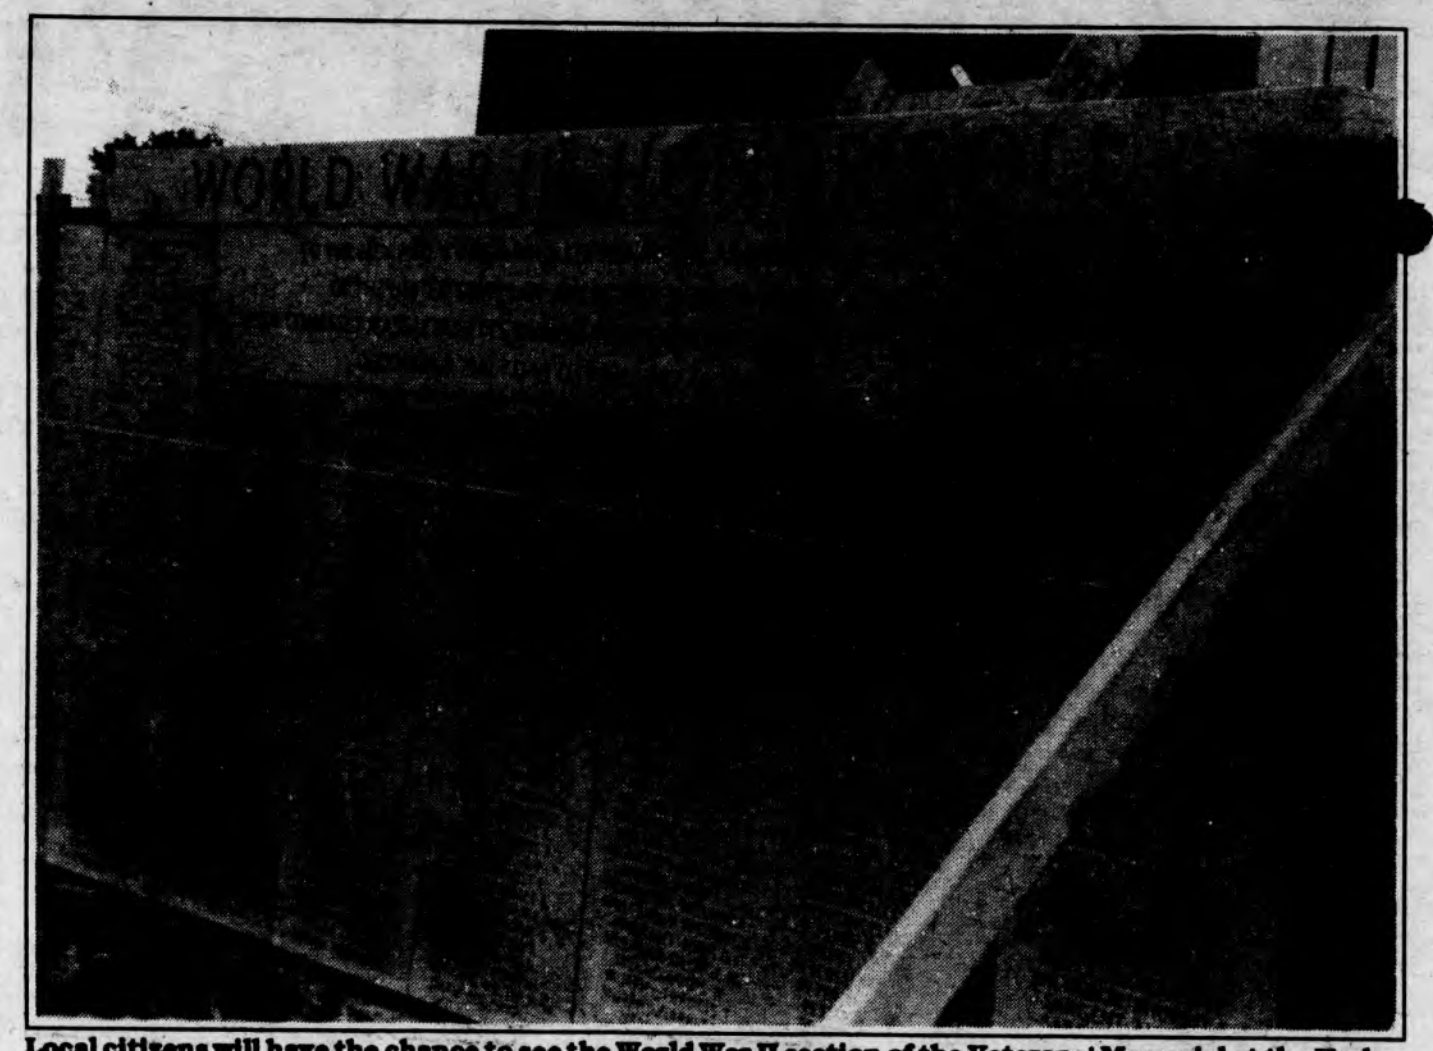
Chief Brian Noonan said not only are the signs costly to replace but missing signs are a safety issue.

"It could a college prank that's become an epidemic," Noonan said.

He explained that missing signs cause a problem when emergency vehicles — especially out-of-town ambulances — are responding in a hurry. It's also a problem for drivers, who are unfamiliar with the area.

Noonan warned that anyone caught stealing a sign will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Police will offer amnesty to those who already have signs if they return them. Noonan said the signs can be dropped off at the police station or individuals may call 383-1055 to make arrangements for the signs to be picked up.

Noonan said Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield has no money in his budget to replace the signs.



Local citizens will have the chance to see the World War II section of the Veterans' Memorial at the Harbor during the Memorial Day ceremonies Monday. Plans for the memorial started at VFW Post 9146 about 4-1/2 years ago. The memorial will eventually extend include Cohasset participants in all the nation's wars from the Revolution to Desert Storm. The project still needs money, please call Austin Ahearn, president of the Cohasset Historical Military Memorial, Inc. if you can help. Ahearn can be reached at 383-0529. (Mary Ford photo)

Spring brush chipping

Spring brush chipping at the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) has been scheduled by the Board of Health. Brush will be accepted at the RTF Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6, and chipped from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday by the Tree and Park Department.

Brush will be accepted from Cohasset residents only. The following restrictions apply:

- No brush from contractors or landscapers will be accepted.
- Small hedge clippings go directly into the compost pile.
- Place brush on the asphalt as directed by the RTF manager.
- Ten (10) inch maximum diameter limit for any logs.
- No length restrictions apply.

Questions may be answered at the RTF. Phone 383-9627.

Curtain rises at Music Circus box office . . .

Palmiter, a Cohasset native, has spent 23 years working in radio both as an on-the-air talent and behind the scenes in the promotion area.

And Fred Suss, who recently moved to Scituate, worked for the William Morris talent agency where he created and developed the comedy department.

Longo says along with the new blood comes renewed enthusiasm.

"I can assure you our operating expenses are not down. But we are really making all efforts to make this a banner year," he says.

Palmiter is pursuing corporate sponsorships in addition to the more traditional promotional mechanisms of print advertising and the mass mailing of brochures.

"The more opportunities we have to generate income, the more we can keep our prices reasonable," she explains.

Typically a company will underwrite the cost of buying tickets for ten or 15 shows and offer entertainment for its employees or clients in exchange for being listed on the playbill and brochure. Current corporate sponsors include American Express, American Airlines, and Tom O'Brien Cars.

"It's a win, win situation," Palmiter says.

South Shore Playhouse Associates also has a media partnership with WCVB-TV Channel 5 and radio stations WRKO/680AM, WSSH/99.5FM, and the new country station WCLB/105.7FM. The partnerships involve mutual promotions such as trading commercials for advertising.

She feels the Music Circus' cosy atmosphere appeals to corporations and individuals alike.

"It's an intimate setting with artists you can literally almost touch," she said.

This season the 2,300-seat Music Circus offers a range of shows to appeal to all age groups and interests. Sixties folk duo Crosby and Nash (formerly of Crosby, Stills, Nash, and Young) have just been added to the schedule.

A sampling of other shows are: the musical "A Chorus Line;" The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra; Natalie Cole; and comedians George Carlin, Howie Mandel and Alan King.

The first show is set for June 24 and features the Ultimate Jazz Jam.

Bob Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, says the Music Circus helps local stores and restaurants.

"Many local merchants would say the Music Circus has a major impact on business with the people it brings into town," Martin says.

Star Market to open on Rte. 3A . . .

Cohasset planning board chairman Alfred Moore said Star Market will probably schedule a meeting with the board soon to discuss the contingencies of the purchase and sale agreement.

"Several people from Star contacted me to find out the workings of our office," he said. "Before very long they will officially come before the planning board."

He added that the planning board routinely requests a site plan from developers. He said the process of reviewing such a plan was extensive and would take several months to review.

Kevin Kerr, attorney for the Crocker II Realty Trust, said the supermarket chain plans to build a 50,000 square-foot building. He said his clients are happy with the terms of the sale.

"The trustees signed the purchase and sale, so you can reasonably infer that they were satisfied," he said.

Audrey Kelley of Star Market confirmed that the supermarket chain had purchased the property. Kelley would not comment on why Star chose a site less than a mile from a Super Stop & Shop supermarket.

Star is not the first supermarket to show an interest in Route 3A property in Cohasset. Shaws supermarket chain tried to obtain a zoning change which would have set the stage for building a supermarket near the Scituate-Cohasset border at Scituate's town meeting this year. Although the attempt was unsuccessful, Shaws officials said they will continue to look for land for a supermarket in the area.

Spensley dealership decision due

June 1 could be a decisive day for Spensley Chevrolet.

The financial troubles of the Route 3A car dealership will come to a head next Tuesday when a bankruptcy judge will decide whether to accept a third-party financing arrangement which would allow the dealership to continue to operate, or liquidate the business.

Spensley Chevrolet attorney Gary Thomas of Hanover said nothing has occured to make him believe the third party financing arrangement would not be accepted by the bankruptcy court.

The dealership owes $1.7 million to South Shore Bank, Bay Bank and Quincy Savings Bank. South Shore Bank, on behalf of the other two banks, began foreclosure proceedings last year.

Spensley Chevrolet was able to stave off a May 13 foreclosure auction on the site by submitting a plan to the bankruptcy court to sell the dealership to developer Donald E. Staszko and then lease it back from him.

Staszko owns Cohasset Plaza, which contains Super Stop and Shop.

The sale and financing package Staszko agreed to provide Spensley Chevrolet is for $1.6 million.

South Shore Bank attorney Paul R. Faxon said a foreclosure auction has been re-scheduled for June 7. If the bankruptcy judge does not accept the dealership's motion to sell and lease the property back from Staszko, it is likely he will accept the banks' motion to foreclose on the property.

Occupation: Assistant Principal at Cohasset High School.

Best day of your life: April 18, 1970 — the day I got married.

Most embarassing moment: I was doing the [illegible]t in the middle of the floor at my junior prom in high school when my pants split.

Goal: What I do every day: working with kids and serving kids that's my goal.

Favorite season: Definitely the fall. I love the weather, the leaves, the whole atmosphere. I like being back in school, it's a renewal time. And I love football, so that has something to do with my liking the season.

Worst vacation: My first trip to Walt Disney World in Florida with my family. I got a bad case of the curse of Montezuma and spent six days in bed while they did everything else. It was so disappointing.

Favorite holiday: Christmas. I come from a big family so Christmas is a big celebration time.

Pet peeve: People who really don't care about our world and society and others by littering and defacing property.

Favorite book: "Alive: the Story of the Andes Survivors," by Piers Paul Read, that's one book I couldn't put down. A close second is "To Kill a Mockingbird," by Harper Lee.

Favorite movie: "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." I just rented it last weekend, it's a great movie.

Biggest worry: I worry a lot about what my kids have to deal with in this world today: violence, AIDS, drugs and alcohol.

Favorite place: Being near the ocean. There are some rocks along Jerusalem Road that my wife and I like to sit on to enjoy the ocean.

Favorite junk food: Pizza.

Person you would most like to meet: Mickey Mantle. He's my boyhood idol.

Regional fire district debate is heating up the firefighters.

"We're not talking about a change in health insurance benefits where you might not like what you get," he said.

"We're talking about people's careers. Our job is to protect members' rights and benefits."

DOCUMENTS

According to documents provided by Sexton, Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts sent a draft joint statement to the towns Feb. 23. The statement demanded a seat on the committee for a representative from Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts in addition to the seats held by representatives from each of the local firefighters' units. The statement also asked for guaranteed minimum manning standards, no layoffs of personnel and no reduction in pay or benefits for any firefighters.

The regional committee wrote back March 10 saying they were not in a position to execute an agreement at this stage, but promised to proceed with collective bargaining with the five bargaining units at the appropriate time.

In response, the officers and members of the unions from Hull, Hingham, Norwell and Cohasset met April 1 and voted to pull out of active participation in the regionalization study "unless officials from the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts are allowed to be an active participant in the development of a merged fire and rescue service region and that all parties sign a 'Joint Statement' . . ." Although Scituate union representatives were not present at the April 1 meeting, they sent notification that they would abide by the same demands as the other bargaining units.

"I don't think those are unfair guarantees," McCarthy said referring to the union's demands.

The town administrators and fire chiefs expressed regret at the fire fighters' decision, but vowed to continue working on the project. They will continue to send notification of all meetings and information to the local fire fighters.

According to Sexton, the fire chiefs of Norwell, Scituate, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull first suggested the possibility of moving beyond mutual aid agreements and forming a joint firefighting and emergency medical service. Town administrators, fire chiefs and firefighters have been exploring that possibility for more than a year.

Hingham Chief Richard Wehter said the chiefs drew up a mission statement last year as regionalization discussions seriously got underway. Their statement guaranteed their jobs through retirement if regionalization should occur. He said the firefighters' mission statement also grandfathered in their jobs.

GOOD START

The Executive Office of Communities and Development gave the five-town region a $30,000 grant to bankroll their study. Recently the group hired the low bidder, Management Development Institute of Lake Oswego, Oregon to survey the operations of all five departments and make recommendations concerning consolidation or merger.

Each community will receive an in-depth analysis of its current fire service in addition to the regionalization study.

The consultant has been asked to look at three primary types of regional service:

- Shared services with two or more communities
- Functional consolidation of certain services between two of more communities, with each community maintaining its own identity.
- Full merger of two or more communities.

According to Sexton, the committee chose M.D.I. because it specializes in organization evaluations and merger planning and implementation. The company has done work in 38 states and seven foreign countries and is considered to be a leading expert in the area of consolidating and merging fire organizations. The head of the company, Jack Snook, is an active fire chief and a former mayor.

Snook and two associates have already spent three days in the area gathering information and conducting interviews.

Last year, Snook came to the area for one day to talk to fire chiefs and selectmen at Wehter's invitation. Snook was in the state attending a conference in Sturbridge.

Wehter said Snook's firm's winning the bid to perform the study a year later is coincidental.

"(Snook's company) was the lowest bidder and the most responsible bidder." Wehter added that the bidding process was conducted under strict guidelines as outlined under state law.

The regional committee is paying M.D.I. $18,000 for the study. The final report is due in less than three months. M.D.I. will deliver a preliminary report in June for review and comment.

'UNDERUTILIZED'

Both Sexton and Cavanagh said union representatives called the recent demonstration in Norwell because felt they were being underutilized.

"McCarthy stood up and said they felt the money could be better spent using their expertise," Cavanagh said.

Sexton said the firefighters wanted the regional group to use a study done by a Harvard University intern for the state fire union. She said the committee considers the study a good resource, but found it too general for their purposes since it was not specific to the five-town region and was prepared by someone with no firefighting experience.

"The study look at a larger area outside the South Shore," Sexton explained. "The charge by our selectmen was to see if consolidation is a good idea for our town."

There is also concern that the firefighters union may push for development of a fire district or authority which would have the autonomy to establish its own rates and impose assessments on the member communities outside the provisions of Proposition 2 1/2.

McCarthy said fear of losing local autonomy is the crux of the issue. The fire fighters feel regionalization won't work without the forming of an independent district.

"We are not opposed to true regionalization. There have been dramatic cuts in the area in fire service, something has to be done to deliver fire and emergency services quickly," McCarthy said.

He explained that an autonomous fire district would be governed by an elected commission and would have one chief.

Before a regional district could be established, all five town meetings would have to agree to such a plan and the state would have to pass the legislation to authorize it. Sexton said the five towns are still far from deciding to go forward with any sort of regionalized service. M.D.I. and the regional study committee have a lot of problems to solve, differences to bridge and decisions to make before they get to that point.

Chief among the differences are the demographics and administration of each of the communities involved. For example, Hull stands apart with its high rise buildings. The five departments have very different approaches to dispatch services — some use firefighters, some use civilians. Some serve only the fire service, others serve both police and fire departments. Some fire departments rely heavily on call fire fighters, others do not. Any merger would have to address those differences and overcome the independent streak Massachusetts municipalities are famous for.

GOOD RESULTS

Even if the regional fire district never happens, some good has already come of the discussions so far. Sexton touted decisions to expand joint purchasing, offer joint training sessions and explore the possibilities of sharing specialized equipment.

But McCarthy says without the goal of full regionalization and the involvement of the unions from the outset, the study is worthless.

"I think the study is a sham, a waste of the taxpayers money. They'd do better to give the $30,000 to Hull so they can get through the year,' he said.

Attic treasures

His name is Kenneth Gloss. His parents said his first word was "book". He generally beams when he is talking about books and the experiences that he has enjoyed as the proprietor of the Brattle Book Shop in Boston. In fact, he likens his business day to Jim Hawkins of Treasure Island, always an adventure!

He eagerly anticipates going to work each morning and generally arrives at the Brattle Book Shop by 6 a.m., never knowing who he is going to meet, or what he is going to see on any given day. "Regulars" know that they can reach him at the Book Shop before nine. Gloss describes seeing a state trooper standing in the doorway one morning at 7. The trooper asked if Gloss might open his shop earlier, as there was a gentleman outside who wanted to come in before regular store hours. The gentleman was Bruce Babbit, former Governor of Arizona and present Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Gloss graciously opened the door! Gloss's knowledge and reputation is widespread in political, entertainment and international circles. Film stars often stop by while they are performing in Boston. "'Streets of San Francisco" star Karl Malden stopped by frequently when he was in Boston performing A Streetcar Named Destre. Sometimes Gloss is surprised by unexpected visitors.

An expert in his field, Gloss prides himself on being a "generalist". He is often asked to appraise Estate Libraries. On one occasion, in a Cambridge library, Gloss discovered a collection of handwritten poems by Robert Frost. The owner of the library was completely surprised by the discovery. A few years ago, Gloss purchased eleven thousand books on nuclear energy from the Oak Ridge Laboratories in Tennessee. All of the books were sold to scientific book collectors in the Boston area. Frequently, Gloss offers his appraisal services to public libraries and historical societies, as a public service. In addition, he has been a contributor to the WGBH Auction since its inception.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library invite you to attend Gloss's lecture at the library June 3 at 7:30 p.m. Gloss will bring some rare "collectors" items from the private collection of The Brattle Book Shop. The public is invited to bring along attic "treasures",as well, for a free appraisal after the lecture. Admission is free.

Mr. Gloss will also appear on "Bob Detwilers Journal," Cable TV, Channel 53, Monday, June 1, at 7 p.m.

around town

❑ Sr. Anne Monica, Principal of Notre Dame Academy, announced that Danielle Nohe made first honors for the third marking period of the 1992-1993 school year, and we congratulate her!

❑ Hope Gaston also joins this admirable group of newsworthy students! Hope is a sophomore at the Holderness School in Plymouth, New Hampshire, and was named to the school's winter term honor roll. Hope also participated in a school-wide campus jobs program and travelled with a number of other Holderness sophomores to Pennsylvania's Washington County in order to spend two weeks as a volunteer for Habitat for Humanity.

In sports, she trained at nearby Waterville Valley in a program that prepares students to be ski instructors. Hope is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gaston III.

❑ Everyone who knows Susannah Lean knows what a great artistic talent she possesses. She has her graphic designs featured in the "Senior Project Exhibition" that opened last week at Hartwick College in Oneonta, N.Y. The exhibition is a requirement for all seniors and represents the same amount of effort as a senior thesis.

After Sue passed an oral and written exam, she proposed a senior art project which took an entire semester to complete. Sue created an admissions poster for the college and did graphic work for Round House Press.

She is the daughter of MaryBeth and William R. Lean Jr. and is an art major at Hartwick.

❑ The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset recently elected its officers for next year and they are: Mrs. Betty Madden, president; Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos, vice president; Mrs. Doris Flint, treasurer; Ginni Nast and Mrs. Isabel Wilson, recording secretaries; and Alysa Goodrich, corresponding secretary. Here's to a great year, ladies (and lots of hard work)!

❑ Happy to report that Russ Reidy is due home this week and feeling great! Watch for him to be "around town" soon!

❑ Family and friends are extremely proud of Elizabeth (Betsy) Andrade, who graduated May 22 from Western New England College in Springfield, Mass. Betsy graduated with a BA Degree in Communications, and has already been hired by Putnam Investments in Boston.

As Betsy gets through her college career, her brother Joey begins his...he will be attending the University of Mass at Amherst majoring in Sports Management in the fall. Good luck!

❑ More graduation news, this time it is Scott Flaherty that gets the applause! Scott, a 1989 CHS Grad, graduated from Syracuse University May 5, having a major in Accounting and a minor in Economics. Scott also made the Dean's list for his final semester (and had to have a GPA of 3.4 to do so)!!

You can bet that mom, Maureen, and dad, William, are bursting their buttons with pride and we don't blame them!

❑ Lest you think that the Mariner isn't read nationwide, how's this? Mr. Bill Sullivan of Seattle, Washington read about the Cohasset Skippers Sweatshirts that Clark is selling, and wrote to him requesting one!

Mr. Sullivan was born and raised in Cohasset (184 South Main Street) and graduated from CHS with the class of 1948. After graduating from Boston College, he left to "seek his fortune in the outside world, but have fond memories of Cohasset as having been a great place in which to grow up."

Mr. Sullivan had a career in the Army and is now an avid golfer.. a golfer who would like to "display Cohasset's colors on the golf courses of western Washington State."

Isn't that great? Here's to your handicap, keep getting it down!

❑ Celia Grace Mullen, the youngest of four daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mullen of So. Main St. graduated from Macalester College in St. Paul, Minnesota May 22.

Celia was president of the college chorus and chief of the Highland dancers during her senior year after active membership in her earlier years at "Mac." Celia was Awarded the Macalester Music Prize during Commencement Week. She majored in Russian and Linguistics at Macalester.

The Mullen household sure has been "hopping" Celia's dad, Jim, reaches retirement age the same month she graduates! Parties, parties, everywhere, and what two great reasons to celebrate!

❑ The new Cohasset Food Pantry is open these days on Tuesdays, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 7 to 8 p.m., ready to help out any Cohasset residents who, for one reason or another, are having a hard time making ends meet. The Pantry is in the rear of the Second Congregational Church, right beside the Cohasset Town Hall. Through the Boston Food Bank and generous donations of food by local churches, the shelves are well stocked. Pantry organizers make the point that documentation of need is kept at a minimum and arrangements are such as to avoid embarrassment. .if that's a concern. Don't be bashful, the motto of the Pantry is "Cohasset Means Caring" and Margie Steele and her many helpers are eager to demonstrate it!!

Jane Tis

Jane E. (Burke) Tis of Cohasset, who assisted with the Cohasset High School girls' tennis team for several years, died May 19 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Mrs. Tis was a member of the Cohasset and Scituate Tennis Clubs.

She lived in Cohasset since 1961 and was also a resident of St. John the U.S Virgin Islands.

She was born in Boston and raised in Belmont.

She leaves her husband, Robert J. Tis; and a son, Robert J. Tis Jr. of Portsmouth, N.H.

A funeral Mass was celebrated May 22 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to Jordan Hospital, Oncology Department, 275 Sandwich St., Plymouth 03260.

Richard J. Carey

Richard J. Carey, 70, of Cohasset, former vice present of Comp Chemical Co. in Waltham, died May 20 at Carney Hospital of a heart attack.

Mr. Carey worked at Comp Chemical for 35 years, starting as a lab technician and finally becoming vice present of the company. He retired in 1974.

He then worked as a district sales manager in New England for Pratt and Lambert, a Peabody paint manufacturer, until retiring five years ago.

Mr. Carey was a graduate of Dorchester High School. He attended Boston College on scholarship and graduated in 1942. He received his master's degree in chemistry from B.C. a year later, then taught chemistry there and St John's Seminary for a few years.

He was born in Boston and lived in Cohasset since 1972.

He leaves his wife, Marguerite L. (Logan) Carey; three sons, Richard Carey Jr. of Sherborne, John Carey of Duxbury and James Carey of Cohasset; three daughters, Marguerite Laws of Newport News, Va., Claire Carey of Waltham and Kathleen Coffey of Harvard; a brother, John Carey of West Roxbury; a sister, Agnes McCabe of Roxbury; and five grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Cardinal Cushing School, 400 Washington St., Hanover 02339.

Margaret Leonard

Margaret (MacNeil) Leonard, 85, of Cohasset, former bookkeeper for R.F. Leonard Plumbing and Heating Inc., operated by her late husband, Richard F. Leonard, died May 17 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

Mrs. Leonard worked for the firm many years.

She leaves a brother, Murdoch S. MacNeil of White Plains, N.Y.; two sisters, Christine Bell and Anne Betkey, both of Yorktown Heights, N.Y.; two nephews and a niece.

Arrangements for a service conducted May 20 in Woodside Cemetery by the Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of Second Congregational Church, were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Reflections

No earthy sound violates this Valhalla of the fallen
All is silence, hushed, reverent silence.

Night's ancient curtain fades as saffron spears of dawn probe catlike across the waking sky.

Mourning doves, distant, unseen, chant sad mantras to their creature gods. By the old graveyard gate, purple, dew-laced lilacs merge softly in the halflight, mocking the mauve veils of morn.

Solemn, cadence-counting, marching men are coming now, as they do each year to honor fallen comrades, to remember their deeds.

Shrill fifes, throbbing drums, discordant whines of ritual rifle fire shatter the early morning calm.

Barely discernible words on time-ravaged slate tombstones tell of untrained rebel ranks that held steadfast against legions of a tyrant king at Concord and Lexington. Or of the maddening guns of Shiloh, Gettysburg and Bull Run, that spewed horror as brother raged against brother.

Bronze markers recall tragic killing fields of San Juan Hill, of Belleau Wood, Normandy, Guadalcanal, Korea and Viet Nam.

Flags pressed gently into moist Maytime earth above the fallen rustle pridefully as rifles blast a final "Ave."

Throughout the fragrant spring air "Taps" blend poignantly over their honored couches of eternal rest. Now, muffled drums of departing comrades-in-arms grow faint . . . grow distant, as this sacred day wanes softly toward twilight.

Night's ancient curtain descends as mourning doves, distant, unseen, again chant sad mantras to their creature gods.

No earthy sound violates this Valhalla of the fallen
All is silence, hushed, reverent silence.

Teachers recognized at Arts Night

(The following letter was read during arts recognition night at CHS Thursday.)

To: Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Colleen Wheeler, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Jo-Ellen Wood:

At the eighth annual Arts Recognition Night, the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club honors all students who have contributed to the arts at Cohasset High School this academic year. At the same time, parents and students recognize that behind every student stands a teacher who inspires them and demands a high standard of excellence. At the open house before this awards ceremony tonight, our teachers demonstrated their mastery of the arts technology our children must understand in their "Brave New World." So tonight we thank you and honor you, Cohasset High School teachers of the arts.

Under the direction of Ron Emmons, the Drama Workshop produced a hilarious duo, "Princess Rebecca Birnbaum and Just a Joke," followed by the "Garden of the Witch," most innovative play-making, with the playwright in the audience, advising the actors. For the 12th year, Cohasset competed in the State Drama Festival, advancing to the finals with "Act Three, Scene Five," an imaginative sketch of Shakespeare in process.

Persuading teenagers to perform in public, especially solo, is in itself an art form, and what performances we've had this year! At the Valentine Cabaret, at Christmas and spring concerts, at SEMSBA and district finals, with Gold Seal Music and National School Choral Awards, at SCWE (Scituate-Cohasset Wind Ensemble) concerts, and at the Newport Music Festival, where the Senior Chorus won honors for excellence, Bryan Marks and Colleen Wheeler led Cohasset musicians with amazing grace. Again this year, Colleen inspired two outstanding new student composers whose wonderful original compositions for brass and percussion are on display tonight. At the Pops, cool jazz in the courtyard and stylish singers made us feel that "Love Is" "Always and Forever."

John Packard's A-V studio wizards, under his gentle direction, skillfully videotaped countless CHS events for future community audiences, an outstanding service, while he trained students in essential new technology. Our newest Renaissance man, Joel Antolini, combined his skills with art and technology to help his students create amazing works of art in wood, on paper, and, to the computer-shy, unbelievable projects in new technology. Your delectable cake this evening comes courtesy of Maureen Duffy's students in the culinary arts, and her brilliant work with fashion design, not to mention those amazing "South Pacific" costumes, has inspired a new field of artists.

Our beloved "Mother with Child," Colleen Lucas, has truly marshaled her creative energies this year, carrying her award-winning students' art work for shows and competitions to the far corners of the Boston area. Closer to home, she has enlivened the school with her students' colorful art and her cheerful notes of praise, and staged a wonderful new "Avant-Garde Arts" Night. In every artistic medium, she gently encourages her budding artists to express themselves and to try something new, which are invaluable lessons for this age. We all wish her well in her next, most creative work.

In Whispers and Shadows, the literary and arts magazine, the sensitivity and creative inspiration of its advisors Jo-Ellen Wood and Colleen Lucas are revealed in the drawings and literature of its young artists and writers. Each year our senior citizens and business community look forward to this gift from Cohasset High School.

Of all the arts events this year, "South Pacific" showcased the cooperative talents of our teachers. Set designs by Antolini and Lucas, musical direction by Marks and Wheeler, costume design by Duffy, technical work by Packard, under Producer/Director Marks and Wood, created "Some Enchanted Evening" for Cohasset. Bravo.

Tonight (May 20) as students are honored, we express our deep appreciation to Cohasset High School's teachers of the arts, with our gratitude for your unique wisdom, talent, and sympatico. As teachers, role models and artists, you are truly an inspiration to our children.

Lightkeepers' tours set

The Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence is open for tours each Saturday morning from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers' Board of Directors will have someone on-site to answer questions. Inside/outside renovations are in progress and landscaping/beautification work is beginning.

Residents are encouraged to see the progress of this community service project which is intended to make the building available to all Cohasset residents while preserving an important aspect of Cohasset's seafaring heritage.

Women's group reaches across generations

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

Mothers and daughters mobilized for equality Saturday when the South Shore chapter of the National Organization For Women (SSNOW) hosted more than 75 women at a workshop led by the group's national president, Patricia Ireland, at the New North Church in Hingham.

Older women told their young counterparts of their past triumphs and upcoming challenges.

"It's your battle next because we're wearing thin," said Helga McCallum, 56, of Hingham.

"The South Shore needs this activism," said the chapter's co-chair Jeannette Tibbetts, of Weymouth. "It gets everybody together to do something on the South Shore."

Suzanne Cutler of Hingham and Roberta Brooks of Scituate also co-chair SSNOW.

Ireland stressed how the grass roots involvement is most crucial to the organization. Even in a small town, women have battles that can be fought — and won.

"You can come up with the solutions to whatever you're confronting as a community," she said. "Take on the coach who would say, 'you throw like a girl.' You can take some immediate action and get some immediate gratification."

Ireland stressed that each member had something to contribute, from public speaking to silent expressions.

"Maybe your contribution is not to laugh at racist or sexist jokes," she said.

In small group discussions, older women said that the women's movement has come a long way.

"You have no idea what it was like before birth control," McCallum said to student participants.

Many women noted the change in their societal role through family relationships. Lesley Beszterczey is the mother of two young adult children, a boy and a girl.

"The father that realizes that his daughter is not getting a fair shake comes around fast," said Beszterczey.

As vice president of tax for Multi Bank Financial, she said her son experienced only strong women role models.

"He doesn't understand why women have problems. He begins to understand when I tell him I'm the only V.P." who is a woman in a male-dominated field.

Her daughter, Sara Beszterczey, a student at Wesleyan College in Connecticut, attended the seminar to find out about volunteer and work opportunities for women.

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset praised the organization for sponsoring the workshops.

"They're doing fine job especially by providing a place for women who have had terrible experiences like violence in the home," Langmaid said. She added that a woman she met at the workshops had driven more than an hour to come.

Another participant said she could see the changing trends her son.

"He has expectations from a woman that are different than my husband's expectations when we were married," said Anita Lucas Zollo of Milton.

Janet Burke of Weymouth invited her 14-year-old daughter to attend the workshop.

"It's not to push," she said. Rather, she wanted her to see the group in action because its activities seek to benefit the next generation.

Members stressed that NOW plays a positive role in overcoming stereotypes.

"The affirmation of women's rights is not an attack against men," Beszterczey continued.

"We have to counter the prejudice around NOW and women's organizations in general," said Ruth Rains of Weymouth. "We have to foster a positive image."

"There are probably some women who wouldn't come here today (because they) fear that they would be identified as a lesbian," Ireland said.

"If you are strong, confident and progressive," the factions that disagree with NOW's motives "will simply turn to name calling."

This "lesbian baiting" is among the most dangerous of detriments to women, she continued. "Homophobia keeps all women in our place."

Ireland continued to lead the seminar with Janet Black, training director from the national office. They taught the group the importance of finances, public awareness, outreach and how to identify decision makers.

In addition, Ireland encouraged intergroup cooperation with local Lion's Clubs, Rotary, Daughters of the American Revolution and the League of Women Voters. Even if some groups don't traditionally support NOW, local groups could come together on a particular issue.

"We should always assume a yes" when seeking support, said Ireland, using a sales technique.

"Get in the habit of setting goals," Ireland instructed the South Shore chapter. The group built enthusiasm as they learned throughout the day.

"This last group was outstanding. Hey, we do know how to put on an event," said Pat Saunders.

Hingham residents Brenda Murphy and Justine Hanson, both in college, came to the seminar to learn how they could change their campuses when they return to school this fall.

Hanson, a member of the local chapter since 1992, plans to work on a research project on women and science and math at Wellesley College. Both students indicated an interest in SSNOW's summer activities.

SSNOW has grown since its beginning about a year ago. Membership director Abby Diamond of Hull said that her group's membership surged in its early days, filling a void.

Most recently, the group is involved in a fight for contraceptive rights. SSNOW demonstrated outside Goddard Hospital earlier this month to urge the hospital not to abandon its contraceptive services if a proposed merger with Cardinal Cushing Hospital takes place.

SSNOW members also indicated a strong interest in stopping violence against women, according to Diamond.

"Women who want to work in that area either have been or know someone who has been abused," Diamond said.

Ireland encouraged action to stop domestic violence.

"I think it's healthy when women are angry when women are being beaten every fifteen minutes," Ireland said.

The task team on domestic violence within the South Shore group made a "tombstone" of wood bearing the names of women killed at the hands of a relative or acquaintance.

However, SSNOW faced opposition when they sought to display the "tombstone" in area communities. Some churches rejected the display because the subject matter was too depressing, said Diamond.

Other towns put up bureaucratic barriers. In Hingham, the group was told that posting signs was against a local by-law. Instead members held the sign at the Hingham rotary for several days, Diamond said.

Ireland was previously scheduled to appear in Hingham in March, but the Blizzard of '93 impeded the event. SSNOW said they called everyone who was registered to cancel and 25 people came despite the snow.

Clean-up effort sparked cooperative spirit

letters

To the Editor:

The PSO's community service project, "Clean Up Your Environment," in Cohasset Village Thursday, May 13, was a delightful success, due to the cooperation of town government, the business community, and the schools.

Thank you to Greg Doyon, Executive Secretary; Ronnie McMorris from the Conservation Commission; Robin Grinnell from the Recycling Committee; and Bob Martin from the Chamber of Commerce for help in developing the project. Our students learned a solid lesson in community responsibility and civic pride.

To all the students and parents from Osgood and Deer Hill School who worked hard sweeping sidewalks, distributing recycling information to village businesses, and picking up litter, thank you for a job well done!

We're especially grateful to Peter Laugelle from the Tree and Park Department, who brought his truck to pick up our bags of trash, and to Harold Litchfield from the Highway Department, who cleaned the streets after our young students carefully swept the sandy sidewalks.

Thanks to the Stop and Shop Co. for donating the bags for litter pick-up. When all tasks were finished, the children gathered at the Village Common, where the Chamber of Commerce provided treats, to say "thank you" from the town!

College financial help

MassPlan, a comprehensive, easy to understand college loan program for middle-income families is now available.

Fifty-six participating Massachusetts colleges and universities recently began offering the MassPlan to students and their families.

The MassPlan, administered by the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority, is a set of financing options including a fixed or variable interest rate and a home mortgage option. The program's interest rates are among the lowest in the country.

The MassPlan is designed to help middle-income families who do not receive sufficient financial aid from traditional sources and who can benefit from the program's simplified approach to college financing.

Loan volume for the MassPlan program is to exceed $50 million dollars for the 1993-94 academic year. For more information about the MassPlan, or for a brochure and application, call 1-800-842-1531. Brochures may also be obtained by calling Senator Brian McDonald at 722-1646.

Asha Williams

Asha, a student in my Computer Applications class for the past year, is a fine young woman. She is motivated, kind and sensitive. She is consistently receptive to directions and follows instructions well.

If given a task, Asha devotes herself to its successful completion.

Student of the Month

Asha is a diligent student in my computer class. Upon entering the classroom, Asha quickly assembles all materials needed for the day's work and focuses her attention on the task at hand.

A most reliable and determined student, Asha never fails to expend maximum effort in the assignments and projects. I find this remarkable, particularly since Computer Applications is no where near being her first love. This seems to me, too, to be a mark of not only academic determination but also maturity.

I am very glad to have had the opportunity to get to know Asha; I have no reservations concerning the success that surely lies ahead of her.

Junior Great Books

The third and fourth grade students recently completed the Junior Great Books Program, a seven week program of interpretive reading and group discussion.

Sixteen parent volunteers led the small group discussions. The parents had all completed the two day leader training program sponsored by the Great Books Foundations in Chicago and funded by the PSO.

The Great Books program has become an important part of the schools' language arts program as it focuses on the development of analytical and reflective thinking in reading.

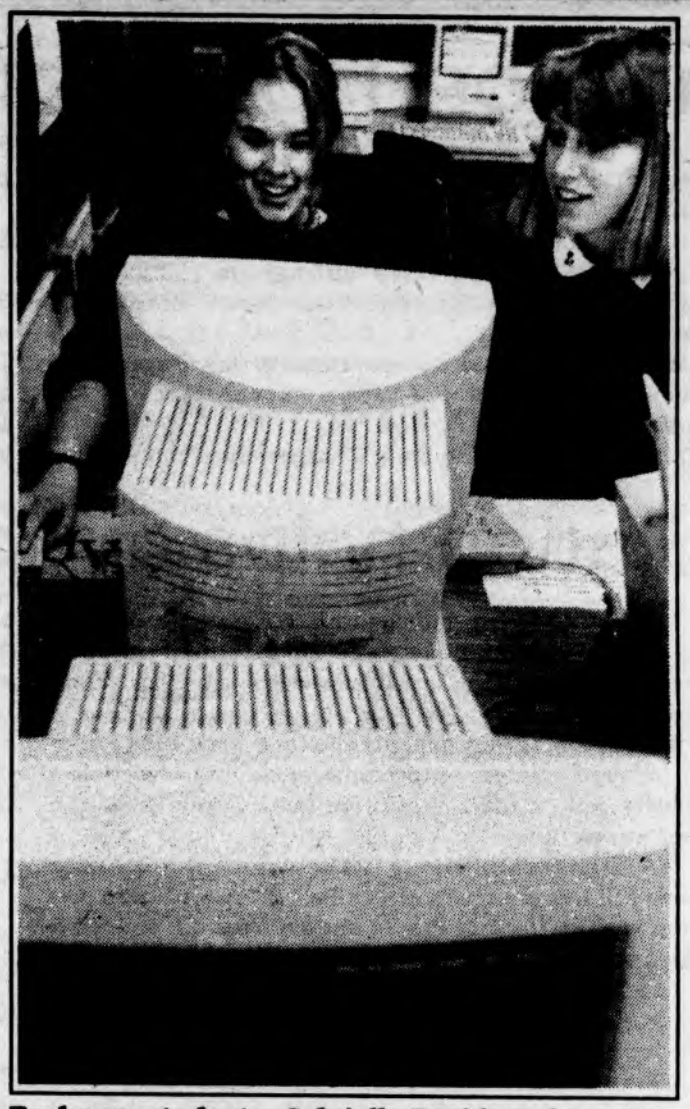
Thanks to the following leaders for another successful year! Paula Buick, Kyle Lubitz, Kate Caldwell, Elaine Smoot, Connie Afshar, Donna O'Donnell, Jeannette Cavanaugh, Selma Ingber, Sue O'Brien, Elaine Coyne, Rhonda Meyers, Judy Simons, Alix White, Diana Kinch, Alison Ulmer, Susan Etkind, Debbie Shadd, Vicki Kennedy and Monica McKenney.

Anyone interested in participating in the program and becoming a Great Books leader, please contact Monica McKenney, 383-1338.

Summer learning program

Are you looking for a program to enhance your child's readiness for school next Fall, or to reinforce what he or she has learned about writing or math and will not be able to practice all summer? Once again The Academic Express is preparing for their summer tutoring/enrichment program. Courses in reading and writing or math will be offered to students who have completed grades K- 6. The program features individual tutoring and small group instruction. Sessions run for two weeks beginning August 2 and August 16 and classes meet daily from 8:30 until 10 a.m.

For further information, call The Academic Express at 749-1703.



Exchange students, Gabriella Davidson from Sweden, and Maya Trott from Germany, work on one of the new computers in the new Writing Lab at the high school. CHS hosted a tour of the new writing lab last week before the annual Arts Recognition Night sponsored by the Arts Boosters Club.

Murray: don't bank on House budget proposal

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Floating casinos, underride mechanisms, and MWRA assessments were just a few of the subjects bandied about last week by local legislators.

The event was the annual 'Meeting with State Legislators and Local Officials' sponsored by the South Shore Coalition, a 10-town consortium dedicated to finding ways of solving regional problems.

Selectmen Martha K. Gjesteby and Jane O. Goedecke represented Cohasset at the meeting where state Reps. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset), Janet W. O'Brien (D-Hanover), and Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield) and state Sen. Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth) answered questions and tried to shed some light on how the state budget will affect the South Shore.

The good news in the $15.6 billion House budget proposal is that $46 million more should come back to the cities and towns through the lottery, Hynes said.

Other local aid should stay constant — in other words towns should be able to count on as much local aid as they received last year.

But attempts in the budget package to loosen Prop.2-1/2 — the state law that caps the amount the property tax levy can be raised in any given year — may not see the light of day, legislators say.

Provisions in the budget would allow towns to raise property taxes by taking the overlay reserve account out of Prop. 2-1/2. The overlay is the amount towns set aside for property tax abatements and exemptions. And towns would have the option — only with local voter approval — of increasing property taxes by the rate of inflation.

O'Brien said there's an underride provision which is a mechanism that would allow voters to lower property taxes once things turn around.

But the legislators noted that the budget still has to go to conference committee. Once out of conference committee, each legislator can only say 'yea' or 'nay' and has no opportunity to amend the budget.

The senate will have its budget proposal. And Gov. William Weld has the line-time veto.

"Don't bank on what you're hearing today," Murray said.

The legislators worried about the hidden costs to society if the state opts to increase revenues through more gambling like floating casinos to pay for the harbor cleanup and video gambling in bars and restaurants.

McDonald called gambling "the poor person's tax" and the MWRA water rates "outrageous."

Finding more balance in the tax system was another subject.

Hynes noted that Massachusetts tax payers pay among the highest per-capita income taxes in the country.

Sixty percent of the state's tax revenue comes from the income tax.

The legislators agreed that there should be more equitable balance in the revenue stream.

O'Brien said the state "under-relies" on the sales tax. She advocates increasing the sales tax a penny to go ito a trust for education.

"Relying on the property tax to fund education is becoming an increasingly unbearable burden," she said.

Station helps out on prom night

For a second year, radio station WATD is joining with the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs and local businesses in presenting a public service program, Prom Night Live.

This is a program designed to help keep kids out of the alcohol-related automobile accidents which frequently follow high school proms. Here's how the program works:

WATD has established a hot line which students can reach roll free from anywhere on the South Shore. On prom nights, the hot line is staffed from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. by students from area high schools. Tent cards placed on the tables at each prom dinner provide the toll-free number which any student can call for a free ride home.

When a call is received at the WATD studios, a volunteer on duty verifies the location of the caller and then contacts a designated cab company to pick up the caller and drive him or her home. There are no questions asked, no blame assigned.

During the 1992 prom season, there were no alcohol-related tragedies after proms at schools participating in Prom Night Live.

There are 19 schools participating in Prom Night Live, from Wareham to Weymouth. WATD and The Governor's Alliance Against Drugs would appreciate any help you could lend in helping spread the word. Adelphia Cable is airing a series of public service announcements featuring students from each of the participating high schools to create public awareness. WATD, 95.9FM is also airing special shows geared to the proms of yesteryear featuring music from the 50s, 60s and 70s on the evenings of the proms.

Cable forum on Humarock

"Coastline in Crisis" will feature a forum on Humarock, a barrier beach, on the Pierson to Person show at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 27, on Channels 3 and 53 on Continental Cablevision.

Host Wigmore Pierson and executive producer Bob Belliveau have invited several guests to participate in the two-hour-long program.

They include selectman Richard Blake, chairman of the town's hazard mitigation committee; Keith Dobie, a civil engineer who founded Save Humarock a few months ago; Asaf Qazilbash, a civil engineer who has studied the erosion problems along the Fourth Cliff coastline; attorney Nicholas Souter of Wellesley, who has represented coastal residents in challenging state regulations both in Massachusetts and elsewhere; and state Sen. Brian McDonald, D-Weymouth.

Skippers set to face 'Big Boys'

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If lacrosse had separate divisions when it came time for the tournament there's little doubt Cohasset High School, with its 15-1 record, would be one of, if not the, top seed.

But, unlike football and its six divisions, lacrosse has just one. The team pairings were scheduled to be picked on Wednesday night at the Newton Police Station. Head coach Ken Ekberg said earlier that day that the only thing he knew for sure was that the Skippers would be the smallest team in the playoffs.

"You have very small schools playing very big schools," said Ekberg. "I think we're pretty realistic about what we are and how we play.

"Enough of the kids have been around long enough to know where we stand."

If anything, Cohasset, whose only loss was against Falmouth in double-overtime, will enter the tournament — scheduled to begin Saturday — at the top of its game. The Skippers will probably get more preparation for the postseason from this week's practices than their two final regular-season victories. Cohasset went out and smothered both Salem and Waltham with a combined 36-4 score.

Chris Goodman continued his torrid scoring pace by firing home 11 goals, while Doug Ellinger struck for a hat trick in the 18-1 win over Waltham.

Ekberg planned to have a full practice on Wednesday and said the team "won't stray too far from what has worked for them all season," once the tournament opens up. The squad, he said, would be fine-tuning its transition game, fast breaks, extra-man play and the varied defenses.

With 102 boys in the school, Cohasset is far and away the smallest school in the tourney. Lacrosse powers such as Weymouth (860), Boston College High (1,100), Newton North (830) and Newton South (620) easily have the Skippers beat in the numbers department.

Once Ekberg finds out who Cohasset will be playing on Saturday, he intends to be on the phone with different coaches to find out as much about the team as possible and any areas he believes the Skippers can exploit.

"We obviously have to find out who we're going to have to play first," he said. "We'll certainly be up against quality competition."

One large division and one small, but determined team. The Skippers won't go out without a fight.

Senior olympics

months leading up to the competition. In reality, however, she admits she barely prepared at all.

The harsh winter weather forced Leonard to take a hiatus from her walking and aerobics sessions she had been doing three days a week before Mother Nature teased the South Shore with a longer than usual winter. Although she didn't want to, Leonard's training lessened until it finally stopped for good.

"Sometimes you get into a plateau and you do nothing," Leonard said. "That's where I am now I guess. Once you get into a routine and stop, it's hard to get back into it."

A lack of training would not keep her out of the games, though. Forget the fact she wasn't nearly as prepared as she wanted to be. There was no way Leonard would miss the games and the comraderie she enjoyed with the other athletes she had become friends with during the past decade. Leonard figured she'd enter her series of events and do as well as she could. Besides, the Senior Olympics represented much more to her than just the will to win.

"I just went in cold," Leonard said, "like the very first time. If I did well, fine. If I didn't it was still a good experience.

"I love the Olympics. It's a great thing. From the very beginning, the people you're in competition with would come up and congratulate you if you won. It was fun. It wasn't a dog-eat-dog competition."

Leonard showed no signs of a winter's layoff throughout the five events. She collected her medals and was one of a small handful of athletes who were recognized at the post-games banquet for having competed in the Senior Olympics since its inception.

Last Wednesday Leonard went with Quincy's Beechwood Community Life Center walking group to "The Great Massachusetts Workout" in Boston. The walkers started at the State House and looped their way around Boston Common and back up Beacon Street. During the course of the walk, Leonard found herself next to Gov. William Weld and the two began to chat.

Weld told Leonard he averaged eight-minute miles when he walked but she was skeptical.

"No way," she said later. "That's really fast."

Leonard limits herself to short races, usually in the three-mile range. Occassionally she will enter a longer walkathon, but treats it as a workout and a chance to talk with other walkers. Last year she took part in the 20 mile "Walk for Hunger" in Boston. The event thousands of walkers from all over New England who raise money through donations.

The experience was a bittersweet one for Leonard. She loved the friendly throng of humanity that traversed the streets of Boston. It was the distance Leonard could have done without.

"It made you feel real good walking and competing with all the people," Leonard said.

Ann Leonard is draped in medals after the Senior Olympics at Veterans Stadium in Quincy. Leonard has competed in the games since they began 11 years ago.

Walking isn't Leonard's only hobby. She loves to travel and had a fantastic time when she went to Europe in 1986. Leonard particularly enjoyed the landscape of Ireland and the friendly people she met in both Ireland and Portugal. As part of the tour she also journeyed through England, France, Germany, Austria and Switzerland.

"I loved it," Leonard said of the trip abroad. "We were all over. You can't wander off and your luggage is taken care of."

Now that the games are over and the good weather is here to stay, Leonard intends to start walking and doing her aerobics on a more consistent basis. She has a number of courses she can pick from in Cohasset, but her favorite takes her down scenic Jerusalem Road and along Rice Island, away from the main roads.

"It's so pretty," she said of the course and walking through Cohasset in general. "You have the water on one side of you. And it's (the route) off the beaten path."

Leonard plans to compete in next year's games, and be more prepared for them as well.

If that's the case, Leonard will likely have more gold draped around her neck. For her, there are no other medals.

Berg leads soccer squad to victory

Goaltender Curt Kahn of Team 2 made a dramatic save by throwing his body on the ball that had been well kicked by Jeremy Tedeschi of Team 1. Jeremy had his moments of glory by scoring two goals later in the game. Two other goals for Team 1 were scored by Alex Berg and Jared Krupczak. Team 1 won the game 4-2.

Paul Cotter scored early in the game for Team 2 with an assist by John Durkin. In the second half, Justin Drybanski brought the ball up the field for Team 2, passed to Robbie Carpenter, who took it to the corner of the net. Just as Team 2 goalie Sean Connolly went for the save, Curt slid to the ball and kicked it into the net.

Seth Cutler, Justin Rooney, and Michael Snowdale helped with important plays for Team 1. Craig Laugelle and Nathaniel Wilcox lent timely assists and smart defense for Team 2.

In other Under-8 games, Ross Lieb-Lappen and Greg Smith of Team 5 showed what sportsmanship is all about by filling in on Team 3 because it was short of players due to late arrivals and then an injury.

Team 5 was the eventual winner 9-5.

Evan Pestone, Tom Anderson, Ross Lieb-Lappen, and Mark Chapman scored goals for Team 5, aided by some excellent passes by Smith. Smith and Ryan Cannistraro did most of the duty in goal and made a number of key saves. Tenacious defense by Mark Donovan and Chris Flynn helped make goal work easier.

As mentioned earlier, Team 3 had a shortage of players, but they did not give up. With no opportunities for rest, they drew on reservoirs of energy to make some dramatic goals.

Gymnasts compete in NEAAU Regional Championships

Six competitors with the Cohasset Community Center competed in championships held at Merrimack Valley in Methuen May 23.

The gymnasts were in a division with 56 competitors in the 12- to 14-year-old age group.

Carolyn Pratt received a 24.25 in the all-around competition along with teammate Maggie Goedecke receiving an all-around score of 23.85.

Julie Smith received a seventh-place medal on the bars and an all-around score of 28.30.

Jodi Colwill received a ninth-place medal on the beam and an all-around score of 29.30.

Megan Pratt received a fourth-place medal on bars, seventh-place on beam and an all-around score of 29.35.

Erica Hettstrom received medals on bars for fifth place, second on beam, ninth on vault and was awarded a trophy for sixth-place in the all-around.

The gymnasts are coached by Ruthann Sargent, Patti Donahue, Karen Clemente, Susie O'Brien and Tiffany Zaniboni.

Some of the girls with the Cohasset Center will be trying out for the Bay State Games Saturday, June 19.

Andrade sees improvement in baseball team

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Joe Andrade won't be around to see it, but he believes the Cohasset High School varsity baseball team is well on its way to turning around this spring's 3-13 season and becoming a legitimate South Shore League contender in two years.

Andrade, the lone Skipper to be named to the SSL All-Star team, says there were a number of factors which contributed to Cohasset's poor record.

"I think it was not playing enough baseball," he said. "It was inexperience to an extent."

That should all change, thanks to a new Under-19 team that has been formed for summer play. Almost everyone on the high school team plans to play on the squad. The summer baseball should give next season's team a big boost. Andrade predicts a .500 record in '94.

Unlike past seasons, the Skippers were no longer looked at as pushovers in the SSL. Cohasset faced several quality pitchers during the season, the best on the staff more than once.

Despite its record, the Skippers improved in a number of areas this year. The team drastically reduced its errors in the field and the pitching was more consistent as the number of walks also were down.

Cohasset had two notable wins, first beating Hull, 5-4 in extra innings, to break a 22-game losing streak and then upsetting 9-6 Scituate, which was on the verge of qualifying for the tournament.

"That was a really good game for us," said Andrade. "We made the big plays in the field.

"It really did kind of eliminate them because they would have had to beat a Hanover."

Andrade also credited head coach Ted MacDermott for keeping the squad motivated through the season.

"Coach MacDermott never gave up on us," he said. "The kids didn't want to lose any more. He never let us give up on it."

For Andrade, whose high school record during his four years was a dismal 5-63, he saw a bright side. Cohasset won three of those games this season and he was a big reason why. Andrade batted a so[illegible] .290, but it was his fielding which rea[illegible] stood out. The second baseman made only one error in 60 attempts and is hoping to play at UMass-Amherst next year.

"My strength was my work ethic," Andrade said. "I wanted to win and my defense was strong."

While Andrade and centerfielder John Maynard anchored the defense, catcher Chris Kondrat led the team in hitting with a fine .412 average.

A strong work ethic and a serious summer league could be the key to a new Cohasset team in '94.

Cohasset Little League results

Cubs blast into season

The Cubs of the Cohasset minor league amazed coaches Steve Faber and John Dwyer with their spectacular fielding and sparkling plays. With additional help from batting coach Phil Johnson and fielding coach Ned Guild each boy has shown significant skill improvement. Every Cub takes turns performing different fielding positions, learning new skills and the value of team play. Scott Faber fine-tuned his hitting skills, slamming the ball into center field. Andrew Guild, a reliable fielder, regularly grabs hard-hit balls to the infield. Seth Cutler is a solid hitter the Cubs rely upon. Johnny Dwyer is a consistent long-ball hitter, forcing his opponents to play "deep!" Mark Chapman is a "heavy duty" baseball blaster and Ryan "Powerhouse" Johnson's long-ball hits drive home many critical runs.

At the last game, Sean Connoly made a spectacular out playing second base, halting the Phillies' campaign. Scott McArthur helped get a runner out with his cannon-blast throw from center field to second base. The spectators roared as Jared Krupczak played exceptionally, first catching one pop fly to short stop, then catching a long drive within three minutes, causing two quick outs! The fans are already talking with anticipation about the Cubs' next game.

The Cohasset Minor League consists of players seven to eight years old, divided into four teams: the Cubs, the Giants, the Phillies and the Reds. The season started in full force April 27 ending with the Father-Son game June 12. This is the first of several articles focusing on one team.

Twin's prayers are answered against Angels

Strong hitting came from the bats of Jari Martin, Ben Kinch, Alex Johnston, Mike Sadler, and Liam Martin.

Center field was a hot spot as Karen McMorris made an on-the-money throw from dead center to second base to hold the runner. Adam Friedman pulled down an over-the-shoulder catch at the same position.

The pitching duo of Kevin Hanian and Adam Friedman provided control and stamina as they went the distance and allowed no runs.

Yankees start off with a slam against Orioles

The goal of little league is for everyone to have fun, and this one was fun for everyone. The Yankee's Peter Whoriskey started off the fun with a bat-cracking homerun. Russell Staples knocked in Alex Etkind to tie it up.

Focused pitching by Nick Bolster kept the tie intact.

Jay Bertovich doubled home Geoff MacWilliams. Yankees' bats were burning with a triple by Carter Noon and Nick Bolster, and Connor Avery batted in a run. Matt Davis cooled things off by striking out a batter for the third out.

Down 7-3 going into the last inning, the Orioles had their work cut out for them. Kyle Weber got right to work with a base hit. Adam Merrill kept them coming, batting Kyle home. Now 7-5, the crowd was restless. Nick Cavanaugh stepped up to the plate, batting in Pete Kovack, and Robin closed the game with two tying RBI.

A good time for all!

Buttonwood Tigers vs. Christy's Lions

With threatening skies pending, the omnipresent fear of a "rain out" seemed to stimulate the mighty bats of the fearful Buttonwood Tigers. Behind the stunning and powerful 2-for-2 (two doubles) of "Mighty" Michael Hajjar, the dazzling home runs by "Timber" Teddie Straughan and "Stinger" Steven Davis, the Buttonwood Tigers were fast out of the gate. In a not-too-distant supporting role were Jake "The Dynamite" Previte, Sarah "Catwoman" McMorris and "Slugger" Mike Rasmusser.

But in spite of the magnetic glove of John "The Rake" Roth and Andrew "Hoover" Jerz, the come-from-behind Lions came on hard in the final thrilling inning, behind the "Don't Rain on My Parade" base-cleaning triple of McKenzie Holway. Christy "The Crackerjack" Mihos followed with a blistering double right up the middle. Mark "The Dart" Lewis kept it alive with a not-to-be-denied sliding double. D. Crandon "Legs" Leahy cleared the white squares again with a booming triple to the opposite field.

This batting collection, complemented by the outstanding fielding of Craig "The Net" Laugelle and his teammate Ryan "The Ripetide" Cannistraro, helped bring the Lions to a 10-10 tie, just as the darkened skies opened and brought another spectacular contest to an abbreviated conclusion.

Tired but exhilarated, the warriors hastily grabbed their leather paws and headed for a well-deserved night's rest, knowing that their thirst for "a win" would have to be satisfied at one of the five remaining games.

P.S. Please support and participate at the Annual Little League Dance, Saturday, May 29, The Cove, Hingham.

Pitching the key as Blue Jays go 11-0

Undefeated, through 11 games the minor league Blue Jays are flying high into the playoffs.

The Blue Jays have an impressive array of fine young players, who have been diligently coached by Ed Straughn and Dan Maitland.

Pitching has been the key thus far for the Blue Jays' success. Righty Ben Maitland and Lefty Tim Straughn have given the Jays some great innings from the mound, and catcher Danny Williams has been rock-solid behind the plate.

Versatile Robinson Murphy has been very smooth on the mound and outstanding in the infield. The big "little men" Danny Kinchla and Will McArthur have shown disciplined bat control. Their timely hitting has been important in the Jays' climb to the top.

Kristofer Peters and Jeff Scribner are two players that contribute power to the lineup and Nick Parisi and Trevor Hardie are usually in position to assist with the infield play and run like demons when on the basepaths.

With three regular season games to play, the Jays are determined not to falter. Beyond the regular season, a loss would mean elimination from the championships.

Few teams have been able to compile the flawless record of an unbeaten season and an unbeaten playoff/championship season. Are these Jays for real? Sunday, June 13, at 2 p.m. is the championship game, will the Jays be in it?

Rookie Rangers taste victory, Dodgers remain undefeated

Last Sunday, the Cardinals faced the Mets and it was a night for the Redbird Rookies. Big Sergei Skorupa made the catch of the game on a long drive to left field by Greg Taylor. He went two-for-three with a double and a single. Ryan Hubley (2 for 3) and Mike Kennedy (1 for 2) helped at bat and veterans Ted Goff (3 for 4), Steve Baker (2 for 3) and Charlie Dean (2 for 2) performed well. In the field, Andrew McAuliffe made a great pop-fly catch at second base. Vets "Terrible" Ted Goff had a nice grab on a Tim Grassey drive to short, and Sterling Steve Kovach caught a Taylor pop fly to third. On the mound, Bill "I'm Too Bad to Be" Good pitched phenomenally to earn the win. Base runners "Wee" Willie McAuliffe, Hubley and vets Goff, Baker and Chuckie Cheese Dean all crossed the plate twice.

The Dodgers faced the A's Monday and the bats were flying. Big Greg Bilton had a homer and two triples. Bobby Morgan had two singles, Mark Equi, a triple, and Matt Lewis had a single for the Mets. Morgan Sandell had three singles, Mike Rossi, a double, and Sorrentino, Hanian, Cutler and Sullivan contributed singles for the A's. Jimmy O'Sullivan on the mound kept the Dodgers on top for the first five. Greg Bilton came on in relief and got the save. Rossi struck out six for the A's but the Dodgers prevailed.

On Tuesday night the Mets took the Pirates in a defensive duel. Catchers Mike Baird and Justin Maitland performed well at the plate, providing the glove for Greg "The Legend" Taylor's 14 strikeouts in this one hitter. Taylor had his second homer, Baird, Maitland, Dan Mulligan and Andrew Ross had hits as well.

On Wednesday, the expansion team Rangers went into a hitting and scoring frenzy in the top of the sixth in scoring 13 runs to establish a 14-13 lead over the Cardinals when darkness ended play. Chris Caron had one hit, stole two bases and crossed the plate three times in the course of the game. Jordon Fiore had two hits and three RBI, Elliot Noon had a two-run double and Lex Mincolla had an RBI single. Mickey Palone defended the dish and threw out two base runners. Hail to Eric Shea who made seven super shortstop plays. Dougie O'Brien came in for the fifth and pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam. The fans were wild as darkness fell on an unfinished game.

Friday's Dodgers Red Sox game featured Justin Golden on the mound for nine strikeouts for the Sox. Bunstein and Parkinson had the only hits off Matt Lewis who produced 12 k's in a brilliant performance for the Dodgers. Lewis also contributed a triple and a single. Greg "Homer" Bilton took two trips around the bases on his own hits and had a single, as did Leahy and Motley. Jimmy O' had a double. Umpire Aaron Berger was injured by a pitch and left the field in an ambulance. He is ok now and we all wish him well.

The Cards played back to back this weekend and collected two wins. Saturday's game against the A's was the Al Schwerin story, with six beautifully pitched innings. He was supported by Ted Goff's nice line-drive catch at short and another "Steve-to-Steve" play with good fielding and throwing by Kovach and a sweet stretch by Baker at first. Sergei "the Man" Skorupa grabbed a Peter Minnar rightfield hit and Mike Kennedy snagged one for a super play at second. Stevie "Baby Cakes" Baker (1 for 4) and Teddy "The Bear" Goff (1 for 3) had doubles. Andrew McA was 2 for 3 with singles and "A-Frame" Al Schwerin (3 for 4) contributed three more. Kovach and Dean added two more hits for the victory.

Sunday came with a Pirates Cards face-off. For the Redbirds, Ryan Hubley got the start and could have sued his team for non-support in the first inning. Andrew "Radar" McAuliffe worked in the second and third, while Ted Goff came in to close the fourth and final inning. This was McAuliffe's first big league win of the season. In this game Schwerin made a great catch on a hot liner to first, and Goff made a super stab on a grounder to short and finished with a solid throw to first. Greg Connolly claimed his first

BOYS UNDER-8 TEAMS

Exciting scoring, creative defense, perfect sunshine gave pleasure to players and parents as Team 2, coached by Paul Cotter, played Team 5, coached by Bill Pestone.

Tommy Anderson, of Team 5, led the scoring with three goals. He dazzled spectators with a sliding kick from the right side which shot high over the goalie's head and landed squarely in the center of the net.

Team 5 scoring was greatly enhanced by Ross Lieb-Lappen who centered the ball for Tommy and assisted Evan Pestone in his two goals.

Kurt Kahn, of Team 2, scored a goal with such speed that if you blinked, you missed it. He was assisted by Paul Cotter and Craig Laugelle. Justin Drybanski contributed a second goal for Team 2 in the final minutes using good teamwork strategy.

Awe-inspiring saves were performed by goalies Greg Smith and Mark Chapman for Team 5 and Robbie Carpenter and John Durkin for Team 2.

Several important defensive kicks were contributed by Mark Donovan and Chris Flynn for Team 5 and Nathaniel Wilcox for Team 2.

The final score was the same as the team numbers 5-2.

Excitement was in the air as Team 6, coached by Tom Barrett, played Team 1, coached by Peter Berg. Both teams came to the game undefeated.

Greg O'Connell led Team 6 with an astounding 6 goals. He was assisted by great defensive plays by Tom Myers and smart goal work by Robbie Lehr. Jeff Barrett and Reed Smith put Team 6 over the top by each scoring goals.

Excellent teamwork was the rule for Team 1, resulting in Seth Cutler scoring 2 goals, and Alex Berg, Sean Connolly, and Michael Snowdale each scoring once. Jared Krupczak and Jeremy Tedeschi shared goal duty in a game that kept spectators breathless.

Team 6 won, 8-5.

Rangers taste victory, Dodgers undefeated . . .

Major League hit for the season and knocked in two Cardinal runs. Congratulations Greg! Keep it up. Inspired teammates had 10 other hits including big Al's triple to left at the base of the wall in Schwerin's "tear the cover off the ball" fashion and Big Bill good's three singles.

Sunday also brought the sweet taste of victory to the Raving Rookie Rangers. Nick Mincolla, who also hit well, was on the mound and pitched six strong innings. He was supported by Matt Santoro and Greg Boyne in the outfield. Doug O'Brien had two hits and three RBI in this fight against the seasoned A's. Greg Figureido had a hit and two RBI and Elliot Noon stole two bases. Then William Wonderman Moody hit a single that produced the game- winning run. The Rangers are here, folks.

Council on Aging news

SERVICES FOR SENIORS JOB REGISTRY: Services for Seniors is a job registry that maintains a list of private pay workers offering in-home support services to seniors. Workers' names are provided free of charge to elders or family members caring for elders at home. Rates are directly negotiable by the client with the workers. Workers include homemakers, home health aides, and private duty nurses. Their services include assistance with personal care, meal preparation, light housekeeping, companionship and/or respite care. To learn more about the program, call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

VISION FOUNDATION INC.: Are you experiencing problems with your vision that make it difficult for you to read your mail, cook your meals, or perform other tasks? If so, a rehabilitation teacher from Vision Foundation can visit with you to help you make the most of your usable sight. This help is for seniors 60 years or older. Vision Foundation is a nonprofit United Way Agency. For further information please call 1-926-4232.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Council on Aging provides transportation to the Senior Center for lunch Tuesdays and Thursdays. A hot, nutritious meal will be served to senior citizens for a donation of $1.50. Lunch reservations must be made before noon the preceding day. Those in need of transportation should notify the Center. To make lunch reservations, call the center at 383-9112.

Volunteers are needed to help Lindsay in the kitchen on Thursdays. If you can spare a few hours, please call Lindsay at 383-9112.

GO TO THE RACES! One-day trip to Rockingham Park. Leave the center at 9:30 a.m., come along and enjoy a great day including an all-you-can-eat buffet. Cost $39. Return home about 5:30 p.m. Make checks payable to the Friends of Cohasset Council on Aging. Payment due before June 1.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Homestead Exemption for those under 65 years of age and not disabled is $125,000. For anyone over 65 or disabled, it is $200,000. If you want to learn more about this act, please call the Council on Aging and ask for Kathy or Sue at 383-9116.

HEALTH CARE PROXY FORMS:

These forms are also available at the center. A Health Care Proxy is a legally recognized document which allows you to appoint someone you trust to make medical treatment decisions for you if you lose the ability to decide for yourself. There are many interesting points to this law, so call Kathy Glenzel at 383-9116.

TRANSPORTATION SERVICE: The shuttle is available to all residents who are 60 years or older. Monday, Wednesday and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for grocery shopping. Sunday mornings you can ride to church by calling Marion Smith at 383-0431.

MEDICAL TRIPS: Call FISH at 545-7073. Volunteers are available to drive Cohasset residents to medical appointments.

A RIDE OR MAP-5: This service is also available for anyone who is in need of specialized transportation. If you need a ride call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

it's happening

Lightkeepers' benefit June 15

Since the early 17th century South Shore residents traveled to Cohasset shores to harvest salt hay and for almost a century and a half Minot's light with its famous international renowned endearing 1-4-3 signal which conveys "I Love You" warns sea captains, fishermen and pleasure craft of the treacherous ledges off the Cohasset coast.

Sunday, June 13, from 12-2 p.m. South Shore residences will flock to the seashore estate of Peter and Jane Goedecke, 100 Nichols Road, for a Jazz Brunch. Proceeds will be used to complete the restoration of the Lightkeepers Residence, a historic South Shore landmark.

Civic leaders in Cohasset agree that this preservation project has received more townwide cooperation with not only personal involvement of volunteers but financial support, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation Joe R. McElroy noted.

The internationally known, Mark Kross Trio, will be another highlight of the Jazz Brunch with jazz classics of Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington, New Orleans jazz, as well as striking originals.

Partial list of those working for the success of this South Shore project are Mrs. John Bleakie, Scituate; Cohasset: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Steele, Mr. and Mrs. James Whelan, Mrs. Raymond Remick, Mrs. Francis W. Hagerty, Mr. and Mrs. John Keane, Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Michael Sullivan as well as Jane Goedecke, Herbert Towle, Nancy Snowdale, Penelope G. Place, Mr. and Mrs. John F. McNamara, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dillon, Mrs. Henry G. Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Chase and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guild

For reservations call Polly Logan 383-0031.

Gourmet brunch will be served by Borrowed Butler of Scituate.

Working toward the Strawberry Festival and Old Fashioned Country Store that will be staged by Cohasset's Second Congregational Church, June 18-20, concurrently with the South Shore Arts Festival and Harborfest, are these parishioners, L to R, Ruth Nedro, Margaret Bates, Eleanor Smith and DeeDee Perry. Arts and crafts will be offered in addition to strawberry treats.

Bicycle revue set

Join in on the fun and enter your decorated bicycle to ride in the Harborfest Parade. The community center invites one and all to participate in this fun-filled event Sunday, June 20. The parade begins at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon. All bikers should decorate their bikes at home. Everyone will gather at Government Island at 2 p.m. on their bicycles and line up there for the Harborfest Parade.

This bicycle revue is open to all ages! There is no fee, but we need to know the number of participants. Please pre-register by calling the center at 383-0088.

CPR courses offered

Is your CPR certification up-to-date? With summer approaching, many people find they need to be CPR certified for their part-time jobs. A CPR course taught by Linda Farrag, R.N., will be offered at the community center June 2 and June 8 at 7 p.m. An American Heart Association certificate is awarded upon completion. The cost is $25. Please call the center at 383-0088 to register.

Saturday fun slated

Sign ups have started for a Saturday morning program for kids ages three, four, and five, meeting from 9 to 10:30 a.m., Saturdays May 29 through June 19 at the Osgood School.

The fee is $20 for the first child and $10 for each sibling.

The program is designed to help develop and reinforce both social and motor skills through play and peer group interaction and is ideal for any child who plans to register for Summer Playground or who will be attending pre-school or kindergarten next fall.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791 to register.

SHERIFF'S SALE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS NORFOLK, ss.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold by Public Auction on Wednesday the 9th day of June A.D. 1993 at 11:00 o'clock A.M. at the Deputy Sheriffs Office at 630 High Street in Dedham in said County of Norfolk, all the right, title and interest which Richard LaFountain aka Richard LaFontaine had (not exempt by law from attachment or levy on execution) on the 22nd day of March A.D. 1993 at 9:00 o'clock A.M., the time when the same was seized on execution in and to the following described real estate:

The following described land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts:

The land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, being shown as Lot 1 on a plan entitled "Redivision of Land in Cohasset, Mass.," Surveyed for D.S. Kennedy and Co. Scale: 40 feet to an inch. March 17, 1953, Lewis W. Perkins and Son, Eng'rs., Hingham, Mass., recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 3158, Page 463. Said Lot contains .84 acres, according to said plan.

Said parcel is hereby conveyed subject to the twenty foot wide right of way as shown on said plan and subject also to all other encumbrances of record.

Being the same premises conveyed to me as Trustee by Russell D. Burbridge and Nancy W. Fitzgerald by deed dated February 28, 1990, recorded with said deeds in Book 8376, Page 129. Said deed incorrectly referred to the Trustee as Noel F. Collins instead of F. Noel Collins. Also see resignation of Sally L. Hennessey as Trustee, recorded herewith.

Boards join forces to commit (mosquito) murder

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A group of energetic local citizens met behind closed doors at town hall last week to plot murder — the mosquito variety.

The bane of a Cohasset summer is not only a nuisance but can be dangerous, explains Charles Gainor. Gainor is chairman of the town's mosquito control board, which spearheaded the meeting that also included representatives from the conservation commission, health, and tree and park departments.

The group will ask selectmen to restore money to the town budget for maintaining brooks and streams, and will ask residents to get rid of standing water in their back yards in places like rain barrels and bird baths which are potential breeding grounds.

'Individualist' Class of 1993 to graduate Sunday

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

They are musical, athletic, and intellectually high-powered.

And although the Cohasset High School Class of 1993 prides itself on not being described in just a few words — that list of differences is a pretty good fit, says Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher.

"There are many different personalities and many different types of leaders and thinkers," she said.

Graduation ceremonies for this group of 76 highly individualistic seniors gets underway rain or shine at 1:30 p.m. Sunday (June 6) under the big top at the Music Circus.

More than 90 percent 76 graduates plan to go on to two or four year colleges.

Cohasset's senior class hasn't been plagued by the kind of divisions evident in some other area high schools among groups of students who may excel in athletics or studies, for example.

"We don't have those kinds of separations here particularly because this senior class has so many differences that no group is seen as odd," Gallagher said.

She added their differences and ability to think independently are even reflected in the students' choices in colleges.

"Three kids were accepted to Harvard — but two out of the three are going to Brown," Gallagher said.

"It points out how individualist the class is. It was a tough decision. But the students said 'Brown is a better fit for me.'"

The number and kinds of colleges are outstanding and the number of students receiving scholarships has

Spensley Chevrolet financing rolls along

It appears Spensley Chevrolet will remain in business.

Tuesday, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge William C. Hillman approved a proposal by the dealership that allows it to pay its debts and continue selling cars on its Route 3A location through a third party financing arrangement.

Spensley's attorney Gary Thomas said while the judge's decision was welcomed, it does not make the proposed third party financing plan a reality.

"We got the authorization to sell the property with the lease-back, but now we have to arrange that," Thomas said.

Under the proposed arrangement, Cohasset developer Donald E. Staszko will buy the Route 3A property and provide additional financing to Spensley Chevrolet for a total price of $1.6 million.

According to the terms, Staszko will pay $900,000 for the dealership and the dealership property. In addition, he will pay another $300,000 for property behind the dealership controlled by Spensley owners Lloyd and Geoffrey Spensley.

Cohasset's week

Amnesty period to end

The Cohasset Conservation commission wants to remind waterfront property owners that the Chapter 91 amnesty period for licenses ends Oct. 4.

There have been very few inquiries to the conservation office and the board is worried that many owners are unaware of the license requirement, Chairman Veneta Roebuck said.

Since 1866, the Commonwealth has required the owners of waterfront structures such as piers, wharfs, docks, seawalls, or filled waterfront property to apply for licenses under Chapter 91 of the General Laws, also known as the Public Waterfront Act. The aim of the licensing program is to ensure that when structures are built in great ponds and inland and coastal waterways, they are safe and do not significantly obstruct navigation or public access.

Many waterfront structures are properly licensed, but the owners of some have not come forward to seek state approval. If you own a waterfront structure and either know or suspect it is unlicensed, you have a limited time to apply for authorization under Chapter 91. A Department of Environmental Protection amnesty program gives many owners of unlicensed structures until Oct. 4 to apply for the required state approval. Once this grace period expires, those who have not applied will be at risk of enforcement action, including possible fines and penalties.

For more information, please call the Conservation Commission office at 383-9900 Ext. 122 or the Dept. of Environmental Protection/Waterways Regulation Program at (617)292-5777.

Charges follow accident

Police charged a local man with operating under the influence and failure to stay in marked lanes after a car which he was driving hit an Eastern Edison pole at the intersection of Beechwood and King Streets Saturday night.

John J. White, 37, of 500 Beechwood St., was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released, Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

White plead innocent to the charges when he was arraigned in Quincy District Court Tuesday, Jackson said. A further court date was set for Aug. 20.

Spring brush chipping

Spring brush chipping at the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) has been scheduled by the Board of Health. Brush will be accepted at the RTF Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6, and chipped from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday by the Tree and Park Department.

Brush will be accepted from Cohasset residents only. The following restrictions apply:

- No brush from contractors or landscapers will be accepted.
- Small hedge clippings go directly into the compost pile.
- Place brush on the asphalt as directed by the RTF manager.
- Ten (10) inch maximum diameter limit for any logs.
- No length restrictions apply.

Questions may be answered at the RTF. Phone 383-9627.

Ice-cream truck to roll in

Sandy beach-goers will receive some more seaside refreshment this year. Selectmen voted to allow an ice-cream truck at the beach this year. The truck, owned and operated by Brad Martinson and Pamela Schomburg, will also stop at neighborhoods around town.

Martinson currently operates an ice-cream truck in Hull and Hingham. Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who supported Martinson's venture, reminded him to stay "one-and one-half mile" from Little League games because the League operates their own concession stand.

Boards join forces to commit (mosquito) murder

The joint committee also plans to map out natural breeding sites across town to facilitate larvacide — or the killing of the pesky insects before they hatch.

And they will ask selectmen to reinstate the defunct drainage study committee which can help identify and develop solutions for drainage problems.

Eastern equine encephalitis (EEE) is an often debilitating disease transmitted by mosquitos. The Plymouth County Mosquito District, of which Cohasset is a member, has been susceptible to the cyclical disease in the past. Although in Norfolk County, Cohasset is part of the Plymouth County district because it fits geographically and has the same species of mosquitos as the other towns in the district, Gainor explains.

"EEE doesn't occur very often, but when it does occur it can be disastrous," he says.

This summer is not part of a-three year EEE cycle, but with the unique winter with heavy snowfall and wet spring, there is a slight possibility of this year will not conform to expectancies, Gainor warns.

The mosquito control committee, which is unique in the Commonwealth, started after the EEE scare in 1990 when the state conducted aerial spraying over Cohasset and other South Shore towns.

Part of the charge of the mosquito control board is to eliminate unnecessary exposure to chemicals used to eradicate mosquitos by trying to remove the threat of emergence of the insects.

"Three hours after the (state) spraying, readings taken in waters in surrounding communities revealed that Lily Pond had the highest residual of malathion in water," Gainor said. Malathion was the chemical pesticide used in the aerial spraying. Lily Pond is the town's reservoir.

Gainor said the main function of the mosquito control committee is education. In addition to talking with local homeowners about how to get rid of mosquito breeding sites in their own yards, the committee plans to create a map to show where the larger breeding areas are.

Because the mosquito control board has no budget, it will ask selectmen for a transfer of funds of about $100 to buy the topographical maps.

"I think this would be a lasting piece of information for Cohasset forever more," Gainor said.

The integrated-pest-management approach planned by the committee is a three-year procedure modelled after the one used in Dover, Mass. The Dover plan started after a 12-year-old girl in that town contracted EEE.

Annual steps include source reduction by cleaning out streams so they flow again and draining ponds; asking citizens to look around their own yards for breeding sites; using larvacide with BTI a specific bacterial agent that kills mosquito and black fly larvae without hurting other life forms; and some chemical spraying.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said only about five percent of the problem comes from people's yards.

"Ninety-five percent is Cohasset's fault because we don't maintain the brooks and streams." He explained that Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield lost money to maintain brooks and streams from his budget three years ago.

Veneta Roebuck, chairman of the Conservation Commission said that mosquito control is exempt from state law when conducted by governmental agencies because it is a public health issue.

"We would support any funds Harold (Litchfield) got back to do this," Roebuck said. She added that blocked brooks and streams are actually creating wetlands and are detrimental to the migration of fish populations.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said some of the clearing could be accomplished by volunteers. He suggested conducting a stream clean-up day to get rid of old branches and tires.

Ray Zucker, assistant superintendent of the Plymouth County district, said he thought the mapping of breeding sites "is a great idea."

The town is assessed $13,000 annually by the district which treats with a larvacide the areas main breeding sites. About 20 percent of the district's budget goes for chemicals with the rest being used for equipment and administrative costs. The mosquito control district also responds to complaints from individuals.

Last week the district received 520 calls from citizens in member towns, Zucker said.

Spensley Chevrolet financing rolls along

Lastly, Staszko has offered to pay $400,000 to the banks Spensley is indebted to.

Spensley Chevrolet owes $1.7 million to South Shore Bank, Bay Bank and Quincy Savings Bank, South Shore Bank, on behalf of the other two banks, began foreclosure proceedings last year. A June 7 foreclosure auction had been set for the dealership property.

Spensley Chevrolet will lease back the property from Staszko, according to the terms of the arrangement.

Staszko owns Cohasset Plaza, which contains Super Stop and Shop.

Charles Humphreys, attorney for Staszko, said he is confident the sale/lease-back arrangement will be agreed upon soon.

"It is a lengthy and complicated thing," Humphreys said. "We are putting the final touches on it now."

Humphreys has said Staszko wanted to buy the property because it represented a "valuable business investment."

Stephen Wald, attorney for South Shore Bank, said he could not comment on the matter because it was still pending.

Sea of books

This summer the Cohasset Library invites you and your children to join families all over Massachusetts to 'Sail on a Sea of Books.'

'Sail on a Sea of books' is the library's summer reading program, scheduled to be launched from the library, June 24. This summer the library celebrates the ocean, water activities, and the marine environment.

Young readers and their families will be invited to special programs and activities all summer long. Readers will receive bookmarks, game sheets, and reading logs.

Those who join can receive coupons for reduced admissions from some of the many cultural institutions and recreational attractions, such as the New England Aquarium in Boston, Whalom Park in Lunenburg, and the Children's Zoo at Forest Park, which have contributed incentives to reward young readers. Families and children who complete the reading program will receive a certificate of merit signed by Governor Weld.

Children, who read even as few as six books during the summer vacation, show considerable gains in reading skill. Reading practice is especially important for beginning readers in the primary grades and for reluctant readers; and families reading together provide an important reading role model. The goal of the summer reading program is to make it fun for children and families to visit the library and to read throughout the vacation months.

Summer library hours

Summer hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Sunday.

Gloss to speak

Don't miss Ken Gloss, proprietor of the Brattle Book Shop in Boston, who will speak at a free and open lecture at 7:30 p.m., tonight (June 3) at the library.

His talk is entitled 'Treasures in Your Attic.'

Those who attend are invited to bring any volumes they want to know about to the lecture for a free verbal appraisal.

Detwiler on cable-TV

Don't miss Bob Detwiler reading "Greyling," "Greenbrook Farm," and "Grampa's Song" at 6 p.m., Tuesday June 8 on Continental Cablevision Channel 53.

The same evening at 8:30 p.m., Bob's guest on "Bob Detwiler's Journal" is his son, Jefferson Detwiler, who talks about his adventures while backpacking through Central America.

The following evening, June 9, at 6:30 p.m. Bob reads "A Sort of Sailor," "Sea Swan," and others on Children's Corner at 7 p.m., on Channel 3. At 7:30 p.m. on Channel 3, Bob talks to his son, Jefferson, about the South American chapter of his back packing trip. At 9 p.m. on Channel 3, Bob hosts a special musical edition of "Bob Detwiler's Journal" featuring Margo Euler, director, and the Junior Singers.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

BE CAUTIOUS WITH DEEDS

QUESTION: My uncle, a farmer, has always handled the family's real estate transactions to save us money. Do you think I should check out the deed he just wrote up just to be sure?

ANSWER: I would. An apparently secure deed can turn out to be a worthless piece of paper (especially if drafted by a layman). Perhaps it doesn't contain the seller's signature? Suppose the seller was under 21? Suppose the seller died before you received the deed? Suppose there's an error in the property description?

Any of these defects could make your deed invlaid. And the best way to be cautious is to deal with a real estate professional.

Memorial Day 1993

A time for young and old to remember...

By Sheila Pietrzak
Mariner staff

It was spontaneous. Their low voices started quietly and slowly grew with prideful strains singing, "From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli..."

During Monday's Memorial Day parade, approximately 70 Cohasset veterans paraded through the downtown streets to the accompaniment of the Kevin Barry Irish-American Club's bagpipes. Joining them were town officials, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a former Marine, scouts of all ages and the Deer Hill School band.

The parade stepped off from the South Shore Music Circus, pausing at the cemetery at Joy Place and the Cohasset Common.

A short ceremony at the common included prayers and Taps, played by trumpeters Christa Ansbergs and Conor Mangan.

The final leg of the parade continued to the harbor, joined by 20 flower girls.

Young representatives of the Legion Auxiliary from ages 2 to 12 wore flowered dresses carrying small bouquets.

Later, they tossed their flowers into Cohasset Harbor in the memory of those killed in service to their country.

The youngest to march with the veterans was Timothy Mahoney, 17 months., of Scituate. He rode on the shoulder of his father, Frank Mahoney, of the U.S. Navy.

Marching next to them were three of Mahoney's brothers, Philip, Michael and Chris, all U.S. Marines, originally from Cohasset. Three of the brothers now live outside Massachusetts, but return to Cohasset each year to march in the parade as a family.

One former Cohasset resident began participating in the parade four years ago, although his military service began in 1943.

"You think of the guys who you knew who were killed," said John J. Pratt, Jr. "I decided it was time to participate and honor the ones who are gone."

Pratt, brother of local historian Burtram Pratt, served on Cape Cod and in Los Angeles with the U.S. Public Health Service, studying diseases carried to America by mosquitos on aircraft during World War II.

At the same time, Burtram Pratt served in Europe with 4F Troops, a regimen of men with various health restrictions keeping them from battle, but nevertheless, on the front lines serving outside of combat.

"I was perfectly healthy and I stayed in this country," Pratt said.

John J. Pratt, Jr. marched in the parade from Cohasset Common to the Harbor while his brother rode in the parade from its starting point.

At the harbor, the marchers assembled beneath flags from 50 states, and three American flags at half mast.

In the center, the traditional wreath was laid at the stone memorial bearing the names of servicemen lost in defense of their country.

Overhead, an American flags and a POW-MIA flag flew courtesy of the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Rep. Gerry Studds.

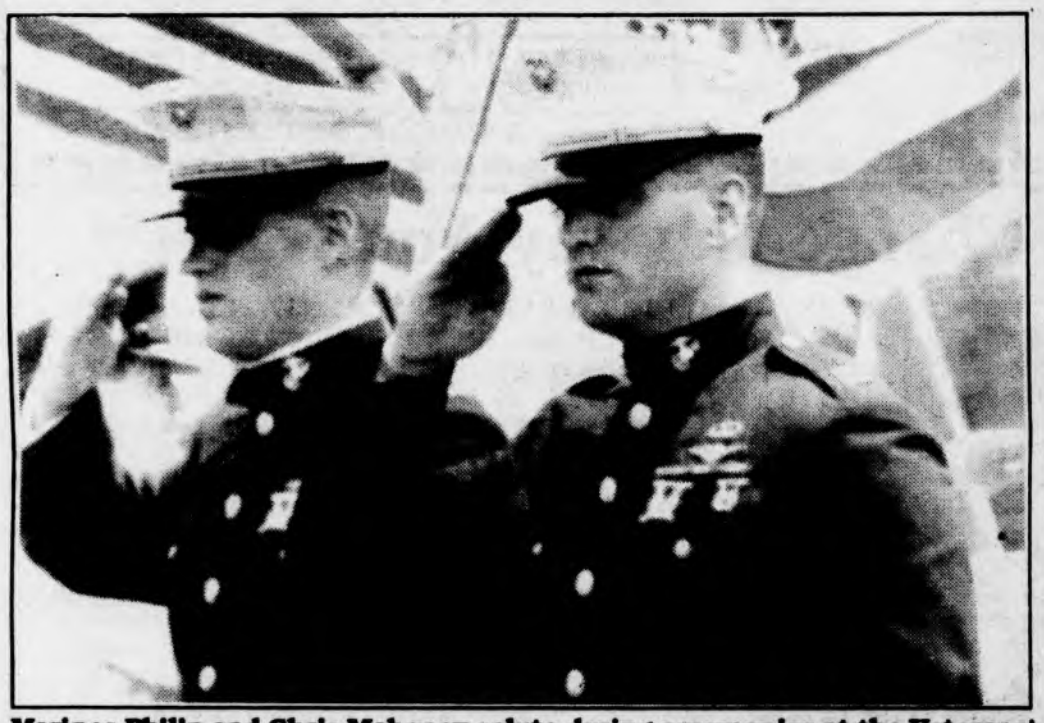
Speakers included Commander William Malone (U.S.Navy) and Steven Wigmore, commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post.

"Memorial Day is a national holiday which truly knits us together as a nation," said Wigmore.

"By tomorrow and the 363 days that follow, not one of us should forget these Americans," he said.

He called on those present to remind political leaders of the sacrifices of war for soldiers and their families for both survivors and casualties.

Flower girls included: Kirstie and Brook Harrington, Elizabeth Nardo, Joanne Hamilton, Amanda Maynard, Taryn O'Brien, Casey Litchfield, Lydia Delaney, Molly Davis Trisler, Holly Bilodeau, Meghan Marr, Flora Ketchum, Katie Sullivan, Mary (Liza) Parker, Jennifer Mann, Christen Reardon, Theresa Condito, Bridgit Chase and KyraLea Cogill.



Marines Philip and Chris Mahoney salute during ceremonies at the Veterans' Memorial at Cohasset Harbor.

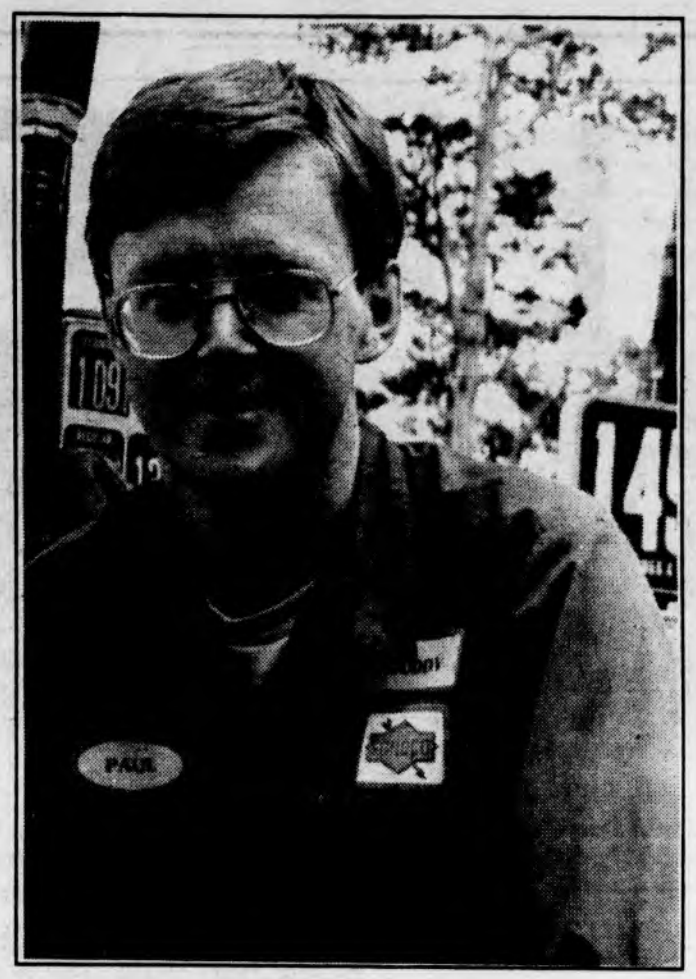
Paul Duddy



Name: Paul Duddy.

Occupation: Owner, Duddy Family Sunoco.

Best day of your life: The day my daughter was born.

Most embarrassing moment: When my daughter was born. It was 3 a.m. and dark at the hospital — and I walked into the wrong delivery room.

Goal: To make sure my family is provided for.

Favorite season: Spring.

Best vacation: Going to Fort Lauderdale for my honeymoon.

Favorite holiday: Patriot's Day. I run the marathon every year, so it's something to look forward to at the end of the winter.

Pet Peeve: I'm a very friendly person and we run a friendly station, but there are some people who are just not very pleasant and there is nothing you can do for them.

Favorite book: "The Complete Book of Running," by Jim Fixx.

Favorite movie: All of the Star Trek series movies.

Biggest worry: The decline of the environment — during hot days in the summer you are not supposed to run because there is so much stuff in the air.

Favorite place: Disneyworld.

Favorite junk-food: Chocolate-chip ice-cream.

Person you would most like to meet: Larry Bird.

❑ The reviews are in and it was a tremendous success! Congo Capers of '93 was loved by all who saw it, and missed by those who didn't. Everyone is talking "encore"..a standing ovation goes to the cast, crew, support staff and JoAnn Fichtner and Bob Leavitt. Broadway, here they come!

❑ Button-Button, who's got the Button? The Council on Aging, the Community Center, the Art Center, the Rotary, the Lightkeepers, the Recreation Dept., and First Parish have the festival button. You get admission to the Pancake Breakfast and the Chowder Festival and discounts from participating Merchants. The organizations keep $2 of the $10 cost of the button. Button wearers get a chance at a $500 Savings Bond at Cohasset Savings. The Art Festival/ Harborfest Committee generates some money to pay for the Trolleys which are coming to Town and for Parade expenses.

A good deal for all!!

❑ When you see "Mimi" Chatterton this week, be sure to give her great big belated birthday wishes because she just celebrated a great big birthday!! Here's to the best birthday yet, and and to many healthy and happy years to come.

❑ The Cohasset Recreation Department has a great idea for children ages 3, 4 and 5! Saturday mornings, at the Osgood School field, from 9 to 10:30 a.m., it's offering a low-organized sports and games program. It will encourage peer group interaction and promises to be great fun for the kiddos! It is running now through June 19 and there is limited enrollment, so call 383-6791 to register.

Cohasset residents Donald Larsen and his daughter, Emily, enjoy the recent "Father's Breakfast" at Derby Academy. Emily is in Grade 3 at Derby.

❑ Last week, in my haste to wish one super lady a happy birthday, I forgot to mention a "grand" one...happy belated birthday greetings go to Ann Pompeo. Hope that your day was a super happy one! Here's to the years ahead, may they all be extra special.

❑ Good news from the Cohasset Food Pantry...in the first four weeks of service, the pantry has helped approximately 36 people! The pantry has most of what it needs, but could use a few more donations...things they could use are: fruit juices, fruit cocktail, cereal, laundry soap, crackers, cookies, toilet paper, personal items, cooking oil, items along those lines. There are also canisters so marked in various stores "around town" so that you can contribute your $$$. After you do your part to help your fellow family in need, you'll feel wonderful!

❑ We congratulate Lynne M. Barry, daughter of Paul and Edna Barry! Lynn graduated from Suffolk Law School Cum Laude, and everyone is certainly proud of her and her efforts!

Let us know what happens next, Lynne!

❑ Speaking of graduates, the Whitman family has two to "brag" about. Adam graduated from Ithaca College in New York and Joel graduated from Franklin Institute in Boston. Of course Blanche and Peter are pleased and proud (and watching their food bill soar again).

❑ Adam Whitman must have been playing some golf this spring at Ithaca! He, Todd Fitzpatrick, and Chris (Bonkers) Connelly all played golf last week at Green Harbor and Adam got a hole-in-one on the fifth hole. Unfortunately there was no prize money or brand new car, just tons of applause from his fellow golfers and a huge feather in his cap!

❑ Hats off to Michael S. Suhrbier, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Suhrbier of South Main Street. Michael was one of 403 students who earned a bachelor's degree May 9 from Saint Michael's College in Colchester, Vt. Mike received a bachelor of arts degree in psychology.

❑ Duke University sends us news this week! Amy Elizabeth Hobbs, daughter of Mrs. Roella Tinsley Hobbs, earned a bachelor of arts degree (and also earned herself a spot on the Academic Honors Dean's List for the spring semester); and, Jennie Elizabeth Mitman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Mitman, received a Master of Business Administration.

We congratulate you both, and wish you good luck in this tough business world.

❑ WOW!!! James Cedarstrom has been awarded an $8,000 scholarship to the Columbus College of Art and Design as a result of a national portfolio competition held at the college.

James, son of Frank and Clair Glannery, will begin classes this autumn semester. He plans to major in illustration. A team of faculty members at the Columbus College of Art and Design reviewed the portfolios of artwork and awarded 133 art scholarships to graduating high school students from across the country.

Obviously, James demonstrated significant artistic achievement and deserves a round of applause (you can bet that his art instructor from Cohasset High School, Colleen Lucas, will lead the group!).

❑ Katherine Stanton takes her grandmother duties seriously, travelling thousands of miles in seven days! May 1 she was in Southborough for the first communion of Patrick Hynes (Mary's son). May 6 she was in Clive, Iowa, for the confirmation of Brianna Stanton (Jerry's daughter). Then she went to Syracuse, New York, where she and the entire Stanton family (minus Buzz) witnessed the convocation of New House College and the commencement of Katherine Barker (Kate's daughter).

Whew...what a busy seven days, and how proud the Stanton family must be!

❑ Julie Bowdoin, daughter of Harry and Anne Bowdoin, graduated cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Vermont. She majored in environmental studies, minored in political science and also received honors for outstanding thesis research and presentation. Julie hopes to pursue a career in environmental advocacy and legislation in Washington, D.C., so watch for her name!

❑ Lastly, on the subject of graduations, don't forget that Cohasset High School seniors graduate this Sunday! It will be held at the South Shore Music Circus (which looks beautiful) and it is a special day for all. You will laugh, cry and be glad that you attended...go and cheer our grads on to the next phase of their lives. We at the Mariner all send all of you our congratulations and best wishes for your years to come.

❑ Let me know what is happening in your house, it is news for all!

Frances Perkins

Frances Williams Perkins, 81, a sailor and a sportswoman, died May 15 at her summer home in Cohasset after a long illness.

Mrs. Perkins learned to sail when she was a girl, won national women's sailing championships when she was 17 and remained a strong sailor into her 70s. At 71, she took windsurfing lessons.

She was born and raised in Dover and was educated at the Winsor School and Radcliffe College.

In 1929, as a member of the Frontier Nursing Service, she distributed medicines on horseback in Kentucky.

Mrs. Perkins moved to Chicago in 1947 with her husband, the late John F. Perkins Jr., a lecturer in physiology at Harvard Medical School, whom she married in 1938. Still interested in riding, Mrs. Perkins started the Friends of Handicapped Riders and taught the disabled to ride horses in order to increase their self-esteem and abilities.

She returned to Massachusetts in 1980. Mrs. Perkins moved into the Carleton-Willard Village Retirement Center in Bedford at age 76 because of osteoporosis, but later returned to Cohasset.

She leaves a son, John Perkins III of Watertown; two daughters, Molly Perkins Hauck of Kensington, Md. and Katharine Perkins of Worcester; two brothers, Ralph B. Williams of Brookline and Thomas B. Williams of Cohasset; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service will be at 2 p.m. June 5 at her summer home in Cohasset. Burial will be in Milton Cemetery.

Ethel Edwards

Ethel R. Edwards, 84, of Cohasset, a retired buyer for Elizabeth Bristol Clothing Store, died, May 26 in South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mrs. Edwards retired from the clothing store in the 1960s. She had worked as a hostess for Hugo's and Kimball's-by-the Sea restaurants in Cohasset from 1929 to 1950.

She was born in Boston and was a resident of Cohasset for 65 years.

She leaves her husband, Frederick N. Edwards; a brother, Horace F. Walsh of Gilford, N.H.; and a sister, Carolynn McSweeney of Boston. She also leaves many nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was held May 29 in the McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home. The Rev. Cliff Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church officiated. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Your estate may well make someone rich. But will that "someone" be your heir?

Merrill Lynch presents a free seminar on Estate Planning.

A well-crafted estate plan helps you to leave your estate to the people you choose in the manner you choose and minimizes your estate's erosion by federal and state taxes.

At this important Merrill Lynch seminar, we'll discuss how to:

- Avoid double taxation;
- Pay estate taxes with discounted dollars;
- Help minimize estate tax impact;
- Maximize the lifetime value of your assets;
- Transfer personal capital.

A Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant can also provide a free estate planning analysis for your individual circumstances.

The seminar is free, but seating is limited. To reserve your seat, call one of the numbers below.

DATE: Thursday, June 10, 1993

Smack & scratch

It's that time of year again. If you've been outside at all in the evening then undoubtedly you know what we mean.

Mosquitoes, those annoying biters that disrupt barbecues, walks, and other summer-time activities, are on the prowl again.

Heavier rainfall than usual this spring increased mosquitoes' breeding habitat which means more of the insects hatched making their way into our lives.

But besides stocking up on bug repellant, there's something each of us can do that will help cut down on the mosquito population.

Mosquitoes need water to propagate. So wherever water collects and stays for a week or more can provide a place for them to breed and grow.

According to Plymouth County Mosquito Control of the 45 mosquito species known to occur in Massachusetts, only about 10 are major pests in the area. Mosquitoes are grouped according to where the aquatic larvae are found: salt marsh mosquitoes, fresh water marsh and swamp mosquitoes; and domestic mosquitoes.

Water in old bottles and cans, in leaf-clogged gutters, in flower pot dishes, in water from leaky faucets, in rain barrels, used tires, bird baths, neglected wading pools, and tree holes are places where domestic mosquitoes might be breeding on your property.

A major problem may also be caused by a malfunctioning cesspool or septic system. Plymouth County Mosquito Control recommends that covers fit tightly and that overflow problems are corrected, since standing sewage provides a prolific breeding habitat for larvae.

Unfortunately, sometimes mosquitoes are more than a nuisance. The Plymouth Country district is prone of outbreaks of eastern equine encephalitis, a mosquito-borne, cyclical disease that can have tragic consequences.

In response to the specter of EEE and to avert the need for a repeat the state's aerial spraying of the chemical pesticide malathion three years ago, Cohasset's mosquito control committee —which is unique in the state — plans to map the town to identify major breeding sites. Working with the conservation commission, health board, tree & park and highway departments, the group then hopes to enact an integrated pest management plan, modelled after one in Dover, Mass..The plan would forge a three-pronged attack on the insects including asking local citizens to look around their yards for breeding sites. Other steps include using larvacide on larger sites with a specific bacterial agent that doesn't hurt other life forms and limited chemical spraying.

We applaud the committee's efforts to make the outdoors safer and more enjoyable during the mosquito season.

"Black flies and mosquitoes have plagued mankind for centuries," writes Ralph P. Stuart in a June 1986 article in Outdoor Life. "There are documented cases in which people have been driven mad by swarms of biting insects.

"...In extreme cases vacation seasons are even cut short because the insects are discouraging to hikers, canoeists, bikers and outdoorsmen in general."

We hope no one is driven mad by mosquitoes this summer. But by looking in our own back yard for possible breeding sites just may help reduce the number of domestic mosquitoes that bug us.

So don't smack and scratch — and don't get mad — get even. Look for standing water and get rid of it.

And have a great summer outdoors.

Mysterious platform erected on trust land

An Open Letter to Our Townspeople:

The Cohasset Conservation Trust, a non-profit land conservation organization, owns 26 acres of woodland between the Town Hall parking lot and Dean's Meadow near Atlantic Avenue — a rectangular parcel, 400 to 800 feet wide and about half a mile long, known as Great Brewster Park.

A few days ago the Trustees discovered well within the eastern end of their property a newly-built structure consisting of a platform about 20 feet on a side supported about five feet from the ground on the stumps of trees cut down for the purpose. A 10-inch diameter white oak was felled nearby for no apparent reason and a large fireplace erected. Heavy tools, such as axes, a maul and a posthole digger left at the site, along with the large amount of lumber that went into the platform structure, all had to be carried a long distance over rough trails. Apparently a lot of effort went into this project.

The Trustees are naturally concerned about the presence of this structure on our property and the concomitant destruction it has caused. We have addressed a "To whom it may concern" letter to the perpetrators expressing our concern and asking them to contact us, but no one has come forward. Now we appeal to our neighbors for help. We are primarily interested in having the structure removed and the area restored as much as possible to its original condition. It seems only fair that this work should be done by whomever caused the problem.

We would very much appreciate it if anyone has information about who might be responsible for this activity on our property would call the undersigned, at 383-0856.

letters

Thanks, Wendy

On behalf of the entire PSO, the community relations committee would like to thank Ms. Wendy Copithorne of Continental Cablevision for donating to the PSO eight video tapes of "A Look at Cohasset." This documentary was written and produced by 1991-92 Deer Hill 6th graders and coordinated by teacher Betty Cisneros. It was also the recipient of the Golden Tape Awards for Best Documentary '91-'92.

Cablevisions' generous donation has enabled the Cohasset PSO to distribute the film to the Paul Pratt Library, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and to all the town's real estate agents, since it is such a valuable took in our community for historic and present day information about Cohasset.

Thank you, Ms. Copithorne.

Gulf association to meet Wednesday, June 9

Is the Gulf River potentially an "Area of Critical Environmental Concern"?

This question — important to all interested in the long-term well-being of the River — will be discussed by and with the State's leading authority on the subject, Leslie Luchonok, at a public meeting sponsored by The Gulf Association Wednesday, June 9, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House on Cohasset Common.

The Commonwealth's Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC) program protects significant coastal resource systems by ensuring that activities in or impacting them are designed and carried out to minimize environmental damage. Projects proposed within an ACEC receive more public review and are subject to higher performance standards than otherwise. Any ten citizens can nominate an area for ACEC designation by letter to the Secretary of Environmental Affairs. A potential site must meet eligibility requirements, be reviewed at a public hearing, and be judged significant by the Secretary according to established criteria.

- Does the Gulf River qualify for ACEC designation?
- What are the advantages and possible drawbacks to ACEC designation, particularly to homeowners bordering on the Gulf?

No one is better qualified to answer these and related questions for us than Leslie Luchonok, who is Director of the Massachusetts ACEC Program. He has served the Department of Environmental Management for eight years, previously as a regional land use and environmental planner. Before that he worked for the National Park Service and was a municipal planner.

Special Additional Feature of this Program: Cohasset High School Seniors will report on their year-long water quality testing program on the Gulf River. Printed reports summarizing and analyzing their test results will be distributed at this meeting.

Attendance is free and open to all.

Volunteers help with Lightkeepers' facelift

The Cohasset Lightkeepers, struggling with cost overruns, have found some white knights in the persons of local painters and permanent firefighters.

During off-duty hours, a number of Cohasset firefighters will join with local professional painters John Sadler, Jim Gallagher, Jack Bowen, Jim Corcoran, Peter Faga and Jack Livingston to paint the Lightkeepers' residence.

To make matters even better, the Route 3A Hancock Paint Store will supply the paint.

The building is being entirely reclapboarded and the

The following is a list of some volunteer opportunities for Cohasset citizens:

• Anyone, who has trade skills, willing to donate their time and/or simply wants to physically help with the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Renovation Project, please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505. Donations of building supplies are also needed.

• The following town committees currently have vacancies: Cable-TV Council (2). Government Island Study Committee (1), Government Structure committee (1), Harbor Committee (1), Mosquito Control Committee (1), Personnel Committee (1), School Facilities committee (3), and Zoning Board of Appeals (1). Any citizens interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office at town hall.

• Although the following town committees do not currently have openings, any citizen interested in serving should leave their name in the selectmen's office and you will be contacted when an opening comes up: by-law committee, cultural exchange committee, design review board, registrars of voters, public works garage study committee, South Shore Regional School District Committee, computer study committee, conservation commission, water resources protection committee, Straits Pond committee, Wompatuck State Park advisory council, historic commission, recycling committee, cemetery study committee, 911 committee, council on aging, drug and alcohol committee, arts lottery council, housing partnership committee, insurance advisory committee, handicapped commission, Cohasset Common historic district commission, regional refuse disposal planning committee, capital budget committee, public safety study committee, solid waste study committee, solid waste committee, regional school district planning committee, and Title 5 transition committee. All applications will be kept on file in the selectmen's office.

• The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers needed to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment. This agency operates a free transportation service out of a 'hot-line' headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham and serves patients in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull among other South Shore towns. Call 749-2535 or 341-4210.

• The Social Service League's new Friends' program matches volunteers for one-on-one visits with people in the community who may be physically limited, lonely, or isolated. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

• Compassionate human services professionals and other caring special persons needed to volunteer as facilitators for self-help parents' groups in the Weymouth area. These groups provide support for parents under stress who want to improve their relationships with their children. One evening a week commitment. Training and support provided. Call 337-7916 or 1-800-882-1250.

• Volunteers are needed at the community center (contact Stephanie Church, 383-0088); Meals on Wheels, (contact the Social Service League, 383-0771), Cohasset Consignment Shop (Andy Merrill, 383-0678), Council on Aging (383-9112), and Senior Shuttle bus drivers (383-9112).

The disease nobody talks about: Melanoma

By Pastor Paul Atwater
North River Community Church, Pembroke

Some cancer patient. One of the first times I met Bruce Gorder, he caught me with an elbow to the nose in a pick-up basketball game. He didn't look like much of an athlete, but I couldn't believe the incredible strength and drive that poured out of him. As I got to know him better, I realized that basketball, long distance runs and triathalons were only minor challenges to this man of strength. Bruce Gorder suffered and eventually died in 1992 from melanoma – skin cancer.

What comes to your mind when you think of cancer patients? The reality of melanoma is that it could strike anyone. Studies show that melanoma skin cancer is increasing at a greater rate than any other cancer throughout the world for both men and women.

Yet melanoma is the cancer nobody wants to talk about. Hollywood doesn't wear ribbons in support of melanoma patients and entertainers don't hold weekend telethons to raise funds for melanoma research. Why not? Because most people still want a tan and think skin cancer only happens to other people. We are content to take our chances with the sun. We are still living in the Bronze Age where tans are preferred over a pale face. A recent issue of Lear's quotes a Ban de Soleil study which reports that 90 percent of women between the ages of 13 and 64 regard sun tan in positive terms and 80 percent still want a tan.

What can you do? First, protect yourself. Take seriously the American Academy of Dermatology recommendation for using skin treatments with a skin protection factor (SPF) of at least 15. You may not be able to turn back the clock and undo skin damage from previous years, but you can prevent skin damage from the sun today.

You can walk to raise funds for the Bruce Gorder Memorial Melanoma Fund in Hingham June 5. At 9 a.m., rain or shine, people from all over the South Shore will be gathering at the South Shore Baptist Church in Hingham at 578 Main Street to walk six miles to raise funds for research and, hopefully, for curing the disease nobody wants to talk about.

This walk is sponsored by DM Management, Belmont Springs, Etonic and Hanson Printing Company, Inc. You may register at P.O. Box 26, Hingham, MA 02043. Please pick up a sponsor sheet at DM Management, 25 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham, MA 02043, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., or at South Shore Baptist Church, 578 Main St., Hingham, MA 02043, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Let's put a stop to melanoma.

There are too few Bruce Gorders around.

residence will revert to its original color combination of white with gray trim.

Joe McElroy, president of the Lightkeepers, noted his appreciation to the volunteers and expressed the hope that others with trade skills will similarly work together to control escalating costs. The Lightkeepers received good news on several fronts during the week, as the Rotary Club, Conservation Trust, Playhouse Associates and Beechwood Congregational Church voted $10,000, $5,000, $1,000 and $100 grants, respectively. The response to the Jazz Brunch fundraiser at Peter and Jane Goedecke's has been tremendous (call Polly Logan at 383-0031 for details.)

'This Old House' endorsement

Bruce Irving, the producer of "This Old House" is working with the Cohasset Lightkeepers to try to include coverage of the project in one of his upcoming broadcasts.

In a recent letter to the Lightkeepers he noted, "It's encouraging to know that there are others who share our passion for saving fine old buildings and I want you to know that we support your efforts 100 percent. To be able to provide young people from vocational school an opportunity for hands-on experience is icing on the cake."

The Lightkeepers' residence has been nominated for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) has begun work on the popular School Calendar for 1993-94.

Any school-affiliated club, civic or community organization which would like to be included, at no charge, in the community listings is invited to call Carol Riley (383-6215), or send your information to PSO, Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025. All groups previously listed on the 1992-93 calendar will be contacted to confirm their listings.

Eating well encouraged

(This event occurred at the Joseph Osgood School in Mrs. Ruth Clark's second grade class. The kids participated in the activities suggested during March, April and May. Samples of the fruits and vegetables were provided by the local Stop & Shop. It was an interesting and fun way to encourage kids to eat five servings of fruits and vegetables each day.)

Kristin Lavigne, Gia Petrakis, Nicole Needle, Caroline Carr and Rachael Judge second graders in Cohasset, have each won $10 grocery certificates from Stop & Shop. These students are a few of thousands of youngsters throughout Massachusetts who became eligible to win grocery certificates for their families by fulfilling pledges taken as part of the "Gimme 5!" program.

"Gimme 5!" is a creative new nutrition program developed by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's (DPH) Chronic Disease Prevention Program to encourage healthy eating among young children and their families. Second graders in 100 participating schools pledged to eat five servings of fruit and vegetables every day for a week. (One serving is 1/2 cup of cooked vegetable, fresh or canned fruit, or fruit juice; 1 cup of raw vegetable; or 1/4 cup of dried fruit.)

Stop & Shop donated fresh produce to help participating teachers introduce the children to a variety of new fruits and vegetables through classroom taste-tests. Stop & Shop also donated discount coupons for the children's families and $10 gift certificates for the lucky winners of the "Gimme 5 & Win!" drawing.

"Gimme 5!" started out as a small pilot project that grew rapidly, thanks to the enthusiasm of participating teachers and the generous contributions of supermarkets like Stop & Shop. "Gimme 5!" Program Coordinator Susan McAlpine said the nutrition pledge program was funded in part by a grant from the National Cancer Institute and is intended to promote a high-fiber, low-fat diet among children to help reduce their risk of developing certain cancers and chronic diseases in their adult years.

Claudine Johnson

For six years, Claudine has demonstrated excellence and leadership on the girls' track team. She is always at practices, always works hard, and always willing to run any event to help the team. She is a dedicated leader.

Student of the Month

Recommended by: Mr. O'Neil

Claudine Johnson has just been selected to the All-Star Track Team. This is only appropriate for someone who has worked so hard and given so much to keep track alive at CHS. Claudine not only does her best but also supports teammates, who elected her as Captain for the 1993 season. A very talented and hard-working athlete, she has qualified for the State Track Meet for the last three years.

This spring Claudine has undertaken a new challenge, acting. As a senior project she is working on a production that will be part of a workshop on date rape.

This is a fine young woman with a great sense of humor and a concern for personal improvement. I cannot recommend Claudine Johnson to you too strongly for Student of the Month honors.

College financial help

MassPlan, a comprehensive, easy to understand college loan program for middle-income families is now available.

Fifty-six participating Massachusetts colleges and universities recently began offering the MassPlan to students and their families.

The MassPlan, administered by the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority, is a set of financing options including a fixed or variable interest rate and a home mortgage option. The program's interest rates are among the lowest in the country.

The MassPlan is designed to help middle-income families who do not receive sufficient financial aid from traditional sources and who can benefit from the program's simplified approach to college financing.

Loan volume for the MassPlan program is to exceed $50 million dollars for the 1993-94 academic year. For more information about the MassPlan, or for a brochure and application, call 1-800-842-1531. Brochures may also be obtained by calling Senator Brian McDonald at 722-1646.

'Individualist' Class to graduate exceeded that in many years, Gallagher added.

She said to accommodate the musicality of the class, plans at graduation are to include a special song to be performed by the students who are in the senior chorus. This is a change from the traditional ceremony which simply includes the National Anthem.

Gallagher said more than 1/2 the class took part in senior projects and the overwhelming majority of those concerned community service.

Athletically class members also excelled with wrestlers making it to the state finals and seniors being named to all-star teams.

The Class of 1993 also includes six National Merit Commended Students, one National Merit Finalist, two National Merit Scholarship recipients, and a National Achievement Scholarship winner — achievements for which the students compete against the brightest students from across the country. The class also has 18 members in the National Honor Society.

All-Star Killilea seeks out best competition

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Most high school tennis players would probably become discouraged with just the thought of going out on a court in front of a crowd and playing against tough competition, game in and game out, for an entire season. Wins can be tough to come by and the exhaustion settles in quicker than against a player with less talent.

Cohasset's Alison Killilea relishes the opportunity. The 17-year-old junior did just that all of this season as a member of the Winsor School team, an all-female school in Boston.

"I loved it," she said of going head-to-head with more experienced players. "It definitely increased my level of play. When you go out with a player of that ability you have nothing to lose."

Killilea, the captain-elect for the 1994 team, is looking to improve her game during the summer after being voted to both the Eastern Independent League and Association of Independent School Girls Athletics (AISGA) All-Star teams as Winsor's top singles player. She also finished as consolation champion in the "A" division of the Ne England Prep School Tennis Tournament. Winsor had a fine showing as well, defeating Brooks, St. Paul's and Governor Dummer — all much larger schools.

"I think a lot of people at the tournament were surprised we were even there so it felt good to do well," she said.

The team's No. 4 player as a sophomore, Killilea wanted to play for Winsor when she enroled as an eighth grader but students had to wait until their freshman year. The policy, Killilea said, is expected to be changed by the next school year.

Winsor School tennis star Alison Killilea is looking to improve her game this summer.

Rather than wait a year to start playing seriously, Killilea became a member of the Weymouth Tennis and Athletic Club, where she has been coached by Alberto Garcia the past four years. She credits much of her success on the court to Garcia and his style of coaching has been a big influence the past four years.

"I can't be lazy when I'm playing with him," Killilea said. "He's very intense, but at the same time he's a lot of fun. He knows me very well."

Killilea practices at the club two to four times per week for up to two hours and has the opportunity to train with many of the top players in the Northeast.

"They have some of the best players out of New England in that club," she said.

Killilea plans to begin playing in New England League Tennis Association (NELTA) sanctioned tournaments this July. She said she'd more than likely begin in the "B" section and eventually move up to the "A" group, in which the stronger players compete.

Killilea has little doubt the further experience she garners on the court this summer will help her immensely during the tennis season at Winsor. On a team level, Killilea sees changes that have to be made which could result in a championship season.

"I really think our team has to build up its mental toughness," she said. "The team could develop its match-play skills and hopefully win the league."

The summer, however, won't consist of total competition for Killilea. She wants to use what she has learned over the to teach kids the fundamentals of the game on a court on Beach Street, not far from her Atlantic Ave., home. Killilea has already been in touch with several families she knows who have children and said there is still room for kids in the 5- to 15-year-old bracket who are interested.

Penalty-marred second half ends lacrosse team's season

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

A season's worth of remedied mistakes and coach's advice was played out to a tee by the Cohasset High School lacrosse team in the first half of its opening round tournament game at Ipswich on Saturday.

The Skippers, though, were a different squad in the second half and wound up on the losing end of an 11-5 decision. Cohasset ended its successful season with a stellar 15-2 record.

"I think we did outplay them in the first half," said head coach Ken Ekberg, of the smallest school represented in the tournament.

Cohasset did, in fact, get the better of Ipswich in the opening half of play. The Skippers dominated possession and were assessed just one penalty and no turnovers. They were successful in keeping the ball away from the Ipswich offense and peppered the goaltender with a flurry of shots. By the end of the half Cohasset led 4-2 and were very much in control of the game's tempo.

The Skippers lost their momentum in the second half of play in what turned out to be a stark contrast of the opening minutes of the game. Cohasset was outscored 9-1 in the second half as they were unable to muster a consistent offense. The attack that was so prevalent in the first half was nonexistent in the second.

The Skippers were penalized 12 times and committed six turnovers and gave Ipswish possession 20 times.

"If you don't have the ball you can't score," said Ekberg. "We were forced to play defense in the second half.

"I think everyone realized it was a game we could have won. But with the combination of penalties and turnovers we weren't able to do that."

Charlie Endris and Chris Adams each tallied for a pair of goals and Chris Goodman slammed home one.

Cohasset will be losing its entire midfield to graduation and will be without seven seniors next year.

"I think we'll need a little seasoning," Ekberg said of the midfield.

Goaltender Brandon Devoe is returning and the attack should still be strong with all its members expected to be on the roster in 1994.

Ekberg should have a wealth of younger talent to draw from, thanks to the 8-2 JV squad.

"I really don't think it will be a rebuilding year," he said, "with as many juniors as we have coming back."

VFW "Eagles" vs Christy's "Lions"

By Dan Leahy
Special to the Mariner

In a rematch of an earlier bout, the "Eagles" step up to the big diamond again to look down the ferocious stare of the mighty "Lions."

Led by the now familiar power-at-the-plate of "Biceps" Bryan Bilton, Robbie "Rip-the-seam" Carpenter, Dan "Dynamite" Maitland and Tess "The Terrific" Foley, the birds were off and flying. Key fielding by the well drilled defense kept the struggling "Lions" in-check through 1 1/2 innings. Outstanding in their individual positions were "Elmer-the-glue" Andrew Lovallo, "Stop-'em-at-any-cost" Stephen Simmons, Mark "The Backstop" Donovan and Kirby "The Crusher" Bukowski.

Looking down the twin barrel of defeat, the Eagles dug down deep in the bottom half of the final frame and denied the Eagles their hard fought victory.

Greg "The Slammer" Smith got the wounded Lions up and running with a timber-splitting double, followed by the equalizing plate performances of "Jackel" Jeff Barrett, MacKenzie "The Hammer" Holway, Courtney "Firecracker" Caron and Jonathan "The Bullet" Littauer.

Fortunately, the Lion defense, highlighted on this bug infested night, by "Pick 'em up, chew 'em up, spit 'em out" Ryan Cannistraro, Justin "The Inhaler" Runey and "Dynamo" D. J. DeJulio once again held these stellar Eagles to a 10-10 tie.

These pros of tomorrow packed it in to show their strength on another day.

Buttonwood "Tigers" vs Christy's "Eagles"

On this almost rain-delayed morning, the night green "Tigers" of Buttonwood once again took to the field to flex their baseball prowess against the flying "Eagles" of Christy's.

Quickly off the mark, the Eagles showed no mercy as they ripped hit after hit off the feeble coaching staff (they were showing their aging arms). "Power Keg" Casey Anderson, Craig "The Charger" Laugelle, "Sock-it-to-'em" Timothy Pilczak and Christy "The Masher" Mihos all let it be known the Eagles sole quest was the illusive big "W".

But they misjudged the tenacity of the Tigers this spring morn. Taking no second place on this field, once the sides had switched places, the ferocious felines were off and running. "Slammin" Teddie Straughn, Mark "The Muscle" Davis, the "dynamite duo" of Leah and Sarah McMorris, Mike "The Timber" Hajjar, and John "The Jackel" Roth all let it be known that the same elusive "W" was to be theirs!

But in spite of the velocity at the bat, it was the iron-man defensive plays by both teams in the field that truly controlled the destiny of this battle.

Led by the invincible leather paw of Andrew Jerz, the webb-like maneuvers of Mike "The Trap" Rasmussen and the vacuum cleaner saves by Brendan Ford, the Tigers would have squeaked out the win. But, with the season three quarters over, the seasoned fielding of the Lions kept this challenge a stalemate.

The "Not-to-be denied" Eagle defense that included Ashley "The Grabber" Faber, Joe "The Digger" Durkin mark "4-2-1" Lewis and D. Crandon "The Stopper" Leahy continued to bring the hillside fans to a standing "O." Another gratifying exhibition for all in attendance.

Angels in heaven

Angel bats were red hot in an 8-7 win against Royals in May 26 minor league action. Every player hit including a multiple hit game from Greg Smith, Eric Libby and Jake Morgan. Greg Smith's first hit was a towering three run home run! Brian Krupczak, Tim Baird, and Ted Thompson continued to rip the cover off the ball. Sam Dolph, Jack Jerz and Dennis Readon have been swinging burning-hot bats lately and they contributed with some key hits in the win.

The fielding play of the game (and most likely the season) was turned in by Brian Krupczak. With the winning runs on base, he robbed the Royals of a threatening run with an acrobatic catch to preserve the victory!

Strong starting pitching from Jack Jerz and solid relief pitching came from Michael McMillen and Dennis Readon. Michael McMillen has shown great speed on the base paths all season long.

Twins growl back

The Twins completed their minor league regular season with bat-cracking hitting from Matt Ogrodnick, Mike Sadler and Liam Martin. The smash of the game came from the bat of Kevin Hanian who belted a two-run homer to deep center field to insure the win for the Twins.

Karen McMorris was too tough for Tigers at second base, Alex Johnston took care of business on first, and Jari Martin's glove stayed with the ball on third. A tag out by Alex Johnston at home plate on a pinpoint throw from Hanian was a play for the six o'clock news.

A well-rounded pitching performance by Ashley Van Hartsfeldt, Mike Sadler, and Matt Ogrodnick made coming to the plate only frustrating!

Rossi parks one

In last week's major league play, the dodgers and A's reported in for four games. In Wednesday's game against the Cardinals, Greg O'Keefe pitched three very good innings and Matt Lewis closed out the final three with eight K's. Brian Hurley joined Lewis, Equi, and O'Keefe in pounding out doubles for the Dodgers. O'Keefe also had two singles, and Bobby Morgan and Jake Motley had one hit each. Is a game complete without a Greg Bilton Homer? Well, he had two! Jimmy O'Sullivan fielded brilliantly; his quick glove saving several runs when the Cards were challenging. and challenge they did. Billy Good pitched his way through the first three tough innings. Charlie Dean, Baker, Kovach and McAuliffe slowed down the Dodgers with their fielding. Steve Baker came in the last three with five big K's but the Dodger bats were not to be denied. Kovach and Big Al Schwerin had doubles for the redbirds and Ryan Hubley contributed a single.

On Friday night the Rangers took on the Dodgers and led 1-0 when a Dougie O'Brien bunt was driven home by Jordan Fiore. But the eight K's pitched by Lewis and the magnificent pitching debut by Adam "We'll see more of you" Leahy to close out the last two innings, held the Rangers down. Brian Hurley had a great night with the glove at third. Sean Chase and Marc Verrochi gave fine fielding performances as well. Dodger bats powered by Lewis, O'Sullivan, Mark Equi, Verrochi and of course, Greg Bilton, who hit a grand slam, kept the light blue on top.

Sunday's Dodgers/Pirates game featured the O'Keefe /Lewis pitching duo, each with seven K's in their respective three innings. For the Pirates, French was player of the night. He pitched with poise and control on the mound, and had six K's in six innings. Singles came from Lewis, Bilton, Leahy, O'Sullivan, Dennis Rooney, Hurley, and Motley. Chase and Verrochi used their speed to beat out infield hits. Doubles came from Lewis, Bilton and Motley. Big Man Bilton had an excellent throw to Leahy at second for an out and Verrochi made a great catch at third on an attempted steal. O'Sullivan was a vacuum cleaner at short stop. "Bens" Roine and Smoot and Derek Bugley had singles for the Patch-eyes, and Ben Bixby stopped the ball at second again and again. Roine covered left field with his fine catches in a good game.

The A's played excellent baseball against the Red Sox on Sunday to win the game. They hit like gangbusters with Andrew Sorrentino continuing his streak with a solid double and a single. Pete Minnar and Eric Hanian banged out a triple each. Danny Sullivan and Ray Cavanaugh contributed singles. Mike Rossi rounded out the game with a big day, smashing a homer, triple and double, scoring five RBI. Excellent support in the outfield came from B.J. Butman and Evan Cutler, who covered long balls hit by the Sox. Jay Whorisky shut down the hot corner at third. Hanian ended the game with a spectacular play on the mound, taking a hard grounder off the chest and making the throw to first.

Dan Sullivan shut the Sox down in the first inning with his pitching, leaving a runner stranded on third. Minnar threw two strong innings and Hanian finished with three more. B.J. Butman and Ted Lubitz set the base paths on fire with their aggressive base running.

Curry and Ingber lead win

Trey Curry and David Ingber led the scoring for Team 4 that resulted in a win for their team.

Team 5 had reduced numbers due to the holiday weekend, but they displayed tremendous effort with no substitutes available. Mark Chapman scored the only goal for Team 5 off a nice pass from Tom Anderson.

The final score was Team 4 5-1.

In other action, Greg O'Connell scored six goals to lead his team to a win. Jeff Barrett contributed three goals and Joshua Wright had two to give Team 6 a score of 11 to Team 2's one goal.

John Durkin scored Team 2's goal off a timely pass by Robbie Carpenter. Paul Cotter served as goaltender for Team 2 in the second half. In the last few minutes of the game, the powerful Team 4 players tried again and again to get past Paul, but he tenaciously kept them at bay. His actions were applauded by spectators for both teams.

Curt Kahn, Craig Laugelle, and Nathaniel Wilcox displayed excellent teamwork and sportsmanship. Justin Drybanski on defense was always there for his team.

John Friedman, Robbie Lehr and Reed Smith gave Team 6 the timely assists and effective defense needed to win.

Jones breaks record

Cohasset High School's Ray Jones broke the Class D record in the triple jump at last Saturday's State Class Meet. Jones, the defending state champion in the event, leaped 46', breaking the 1986 record by four inches. He jumped 3' further than the second-place finisher.

Jones, who will attend Trinity College in the fall, is the only C.H.S. athlete to ever win a state championship.

Mammography screening

The Cohasset Social Service League sponsors the Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. (MDI) mobile mammography service. The mammograms are performed on the fully equipped MDI coach, which is convenient, comfortable, private, and staffed by registered female certified mammographers. The X-rays are read by board certified radiologists, and the result will be sent to you and your physician.

To schedule your appointment or for information call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771.

Lightkeepers' benefit June 15

Since the early 17th century South Shore residents traveled to Cohasset shores to harvest salt hay and for almost a century and a half Minot's light with its famous international renowned endearing 1-4-3 signal which conveys "I Love You" warns sea captains, fishermen and pleasure craft of the treacherous ledges off the Cohasset coast.

Sunday, June 13, from 12-2 p.m. South Shore residences will flock to the seashore estate of Peter and Jane Goedecke, 100 Nichols Road, for a Jazz Brunch. Proceeds will be used to complete the restoration of the Lightkeepers Residence, a historic South Shore landmark.

Civic leaders in Cohasset agree that this preservation project has received more townwide cooperation with not only personal involvement of volunteers but financial support, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation Joe R. McElroy noted.

The internationally known, Mark Kross Trio, will be another highlight of the Jazz Brunch with jazz classics of Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington, New Orleans jazz, as well as striking originals.

Partial list of those working for the success of this South Shore project are Mrs. John Bleakie, Scituate; Cohasset: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Steele, Mr. and Mrs. James Whelan, Mrs. Raymond Remick, Mrs. Francis W. Hagerty, Mr. and Mrs. John Keane, Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Michael Sullivan as well as Jane Goedecke, Herbert Towle, Nancy Snowdale, Penelope G. Place, Mr. and Mrs. John F. McNamara, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dillon, Mrs. Henry G. Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Chase and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guild

For reservations call Polly Logan 383-0031.

Gourmet brunch will be served by Borrowed Butler of Scituate.

'New Views' presented

From June 10 - July 27 the Artist's Son Gallery presents "New Views: Recent Works by Lynne Adams and Peter Wagner," featuring oil paintings of New England landscapes.

Adams and Wagner bring highly personal interpretations of familiar scenes. Each artist offers a unique representation of nature, Adams with her intimate inland views and Wagner with his meditative beach scapes.

Lynne Adams is a plein-air painter, working outside of the studio to memorialize the extraordinary beauty of farms and open spaces she feels are endangered by development. The wilderness she paints expresses an exhilaration experience from nature—its constraints: darkness, fog, snowstorms: and its surprises: light changes, quiet noises, shadowed reflections. Adams combines an impressionist style with expressionist techniques. Her initial emotional reaction becomes tempered by a rational interpretation. She then paints with a speed and vigor that lead to an abstraction of elements in an expressionist mode. These landscapes present the artist's heartfelt allegiance to special places, offering intimate detail while maintaining the totality of a place. Adams' work has won numerous grants and awards and has been shown in exhibits around Massachusetts.

Peter Wagner composes landscapes paying attention to particular forms and rendering shapes from nature in detailed color and fine strokes. As a transplant to New England approximately 13 year ago, Wagner appreciates the uniqueness and variety of its coastal terrain. His commitment to site results in the presentation of disciplined detail with a fresh immediacy. He catches the elusive qualities of seasonal atmosphere and light. Wagner's landscapes have a lasting strength for the viewer in their balance of power and harmony, subject and metaphor. He has just begun to mine the wealth of regional beauty. Wagner's work has been represented around New England in numerous one-person and group shows as well as in private and public collections.

The opening reception for "New Views: Recent Works by Lynne Adams and Peter Wagner" is Friday evening, June 11, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. The artists will be present. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday 10 to 6 p.m., Friday and Saturday 10 to 5 p.m.

The opening reception for "New Views: Recent Works by Lynne Adams and Peter Wagner" is Friday evening, June 11, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. the artists will be present. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Cub Scout happenings

Due to conflicts and schedule changes, there have been some changes to the summer event dates. Here is the corrected schedule:

June 15 — Bike Rodeo and President's Challenge Awards, 5 p.m. Deer Hill School (raindate 6/22).

June 19-20 — Parent-Son Camp weekend at Camp Child (register with council office).

June 19-20 — Harborfest float construction and parade (cubs who help build the pack float get to ride on it in the parade).

July 13 — Annual pack cookout/picnic and sports challenge night.

Aug. 10 — Annual pack swim party, 6 p.m., Cohasset Swim Center.

Sept. 14 — 1993-'94 pack registration, 7 p.m. Deer Hill School.

A number of cubs from Pack 38 will be attending one or more weeks of Cub Scout Day Camp at Camp Child in Plymouth. Day camp is a seven-week program (Mon.-Fri.) beginning July 5. Please call 383-6141 or 383-0362 to find out which weeks cubs from your pack plan to go.

Rec program reminders

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting on-going telephone registrations, (383-6791), for Adult Tennis lessons, Beach volleyball, ages 16 and over, Adult Golf lessons and Step Aerobic classes.

On-going registrations for Baseball Camp, Basketball Camp, South Shore Soccer Camp and VIP Soccer Camp are being accepted at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

Summer program fliers are available at the office currently and will be coming home, via school, (grades K - 6), soon.

Beach and Government Island Parking stickers go on sale at 10 a.m. Monday, June 14, at the Town Hall. The price is $7 per vehicle and $3 per vehicle for senior citizens aged 60 and over. The Sandy Beach Association will not accept any more names this year, for non-resident beach sticker, waiting list.

Registrations for Summer Playground and Youth Tennis Programs will be held Monday, June 21, thru Thursday, June 24, from 9 a.m. to noon, again from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. and Thursday evening, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Details of these and other programs and services are fully depicted in the summer flier.

After school outdoor spring recreation programs terminate Thursday, June 17.

Registrations for new Dog Obedience Training classes start during mid-June; please watch the local media for details regarding this eight-week program.

Don't forget Harborfest and the Cohasset Arts Festival starting Thursday, June 17, thru Sunday, June 20. Admission buttons may be purchased at the Cohasset Recreation office for $10 per button, allowing discounted admissions to the events.

Should you be interested in evening, Adult Tennis lessons for beginner, intermediate, or advanced level instruction, taught by the Recreation Department Tennis teacher, Michelle Massa, call 383-6791.

Logo design contest

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 is holding a logo design contest for Cohasset students in grades 7-12. The prize is a $100 savings bond.

Logo designs for T-shirts for the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund must be submitted by July 31 to the American Legion Post, 93 Summer St. (between the hours of 3 and 10 p.m.) or mailed to PO Box 118, Cohasset 02025.

Christine was a student at Cohasset High who lost her life in an automobile accident in 1987. T-shirts bearing the winning logo will be on sale at the Christine Burke Memorial Fund Clambake Sept. 11 at Sandy Beach. A scholarship in Christine's memory is awarded annually to a student selected by the American Legion post.

1993 Art Festival/Harborfest

Buy a button

Several local businesses have declared the week of June 14-20 as "discount week" to Art Festival/Harborfest button wearers. The button, which can be purchased for $10, entitles the wearer to free admittance to the Pancake Breakfast and Chowderfest as well as discounts on some other events during Art Festival/Harborfest weekend, June 18-20.

Cohasset businesses are joining the button program and extending the discount period for the whole week before and during Art Festival/Harborfest.

Button wearers visiting Cohasset Savings Bank will be eligible to enter a drawing for a $500 U.S. Savings Bond. Cards & Shards will discount all t-shirts and sweatshirts 10 percent for button wearers and will offer a daily drawing for assorted gifts. Farsh Oriental Rugs will discount all merchandise 20 percent while Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy will offer 20 percent off all men's and ladies' fragrances.

Flemings Gifts, Lamps & Shades will take 15 percent off the regular price of all merchandise. Buttonwood Books & Toys, The Children's Exchange, and Little Harbor Bookstore will offer a 10 percent discount on their respective merchandise. The South Shore Art Center will also offer a 10 percent discount on art sales at both the Art Center and the Art Festival.

A free cup of chowder with lunch or dinner will be presented by the Red Lion Inn to button wearers who will also receive Red Lion Inn money. French Memories Bakery will discount all breads and pastries 10 percent.

Buttons can be purchased now at any of the above businesses and the Art Center. For more information, please call Bob Martin at 383-0787.

Strawberry festival set

Remember in the spring — shortcake dripping with delicious strawberries and piled seemingly to the sky with fresh whipped cream? As a child or an adult, the thoughts of digging into this sumptuous desert bring back fond memories.

June 19 through 20 you can again experience this traditional treat at the Strawberry Festival sponsored by the Cohasset Second Congregational Church. The Strawberry Festival, combined with the 38th Annual South Shore Art Festival and Harborfest, last year drew more than 10,000 visitors.

The Second Congregational Church served over 2,000 of the generously topped shortcakes, using 500 quarts of fresh strawberries (prepared by hand) and 60 quarts of whipped cream. The festival also includes a wide variety of strawberry-based jam, jellies and candies made from traditional recipes. Church members volunteered days of long hours in the preparation of the delights.

The Strawberry Festival is set in a format of the "old time" country church social. There is a large covered pavilion across from the Common between the church and the Cohasset Town Hall. The atmosphere is relaxed with individual tables, light music and servers to refill your coffee or ice tea. Visitors may linger in this shaded area and talk and observe the varied activities of the festival. The inside of the Second Congregational Church has been transformed into a rural country emporium offering a wide variety of strawberry-based foods and craft items for sale.

Giving is at the heart of The Strawberry Festival. Cohasset Second Congregational Church takes great pride in their successful entry into this festival weekend because they freely give their earnings to local charities, food pantries and other national and international benevolences.

Harborfest parade alert

Recently, registration cards were sent to everyone who had expressed an interest in joining the Harborfest Parade June 20. If you or your organization did not receive that mailing and you want to be a part of the parade, please call Keith Knowles at 383-1331, as soon as possible.

Vol. XV, No.35 | Thursday, June 10, 1993 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Class of '93 called on to make a difference

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

No cold gusts of wind billowing the walls of the big top could dampen an exuberant call to activism from Cohasset's youth, Sunday.

Hundreds of families and friends, sheltered from the rain but not the cold, sat huddled under the tent at the Music Circus and listened as the Cohasset High Class of 1993 was asked to make a difference.

"We are healthy, well-educated and young," said class Valedictorian Kathleen O'Sullivan. "It is our turn to give something back.

"...let us be thankful for all that is given, and let us give back all that is asked."

O'Sullivan said Cohasset graduates should be grateful for the seemingly small things like safe schools and textbooks.

"I can't tell you how very lucky I feel to be standing here looking back on Cohasset High and looking forward to the rest of my life," she said.

"...we are greeted by a smile in the attendance office, not a metal detector."

She recalled her service in a small regional school in Appalachia where the teachers had to spend their own money for textbooks. And she asked her fellow classmates to think about what teenagers lives must be like in countries like Somalia and Bosnia.

"We've been so fortunate. We've been given so many opportunities. We need to say thank you. We need to pay back some of this debt."

She called on her classmates to get involved whether by participating in a walk for charity, volunteering, or voting.

Salutatorian Alexander Vanderweil used boats as a metaphor for growth in his creative address to graduates.

Boats can be 'ferry' good rail alternative

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The best solution may just be staring the MBTA right in the face, according to Martha A. Reardon.

Reardon, a waterways transportation expert, suggests that the MBTA look toward an expansive ferry and water taxi system to solve the problem of how to move more people from the South Shore to Boston.

The MBTA's preferred solution is reconstruction of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad, although project

Minot Lightkeeper's benefit brunch is set for Sunday

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Polly Logan's famous circus-striped tent moves across the road this weekend. Come Sunday, you'll find it nestled in the lee of one of the grand old houses built when Cohasset was a Victorian summer getaway.

Back in 1895, the Whitney family built all three stories with twisty staircases and high ceilings and cozy nooks, then frosted it all with shingles and wrapped it up with verandas. With Little Harbor on one side and the Atlantic down the road and across the street, it must have been a child's paradise come rain or come shine.

Although the house will be 100 in a few short years, only three families have called it home. Curiously, each of the three has had a daughter named Margaret.

Today, the Goedecke family and their dog call it home, but you're invited to come calling when they host a jazz brunch to raise funds to complete the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers residence project.

Although the Goedeckes are not part of the lightkeeper's committee, they decided to lend a helping hand.

"I think this project is so important," Jane Goedecke said. "I know how hard the committee has worked to make it happen."

Jane Goedecke has quite literally had her hand in some of the renovation project. She is a member of the Cohasset Garden Club who will be designing and planting the gardens and landscaping at the rear of the building.

She also raved about the work done by the Community Garden Club at the front of the building.

The work of the volunteers has born other fruit as the town has gotten behind efforts to spend some of its limited funds to buy and preserve some of the special places in town such as the Hagerty property, Goedecke said.

"The town is really beginning to look forward," she said. "We are thinking about the long term and preserving our assets."

But completing the renovations and restorations requires lots of money. The committee must raise at least $75,000 to complete the project. In addition to the brunch with its price tag of $100 per couple or $75 for a single person, the committee offers the opportunity to purchase windows, doors, entryways and commercial kitchens in memory of someone special.

From a window on the second floor for $250 to the main lobby or a second floor apartment for $5,000, you make the donation and a plaque or brass plate will be installed to honor the person or organization you name.

The first floor meeting room will be dedicated to the Land Sharks knocking on Cohasset's door

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The Sharks are coming to town this summer, but beach-goers can breath a sigh of relief — they won't be spending their time near the ocean. That's because the Cohasset Land Sharks baseball team will be too busy on the field in the hopes of improving their game for next year's spring season at Cohasset High School.

A newly-formed squad for players 16-18 will play an 18-game schedule, beginning this weekend and running through the middle of August.

Coached by past Little League and Pony League coach, John Rolandelli and his son, Mike, the Land Sharks will feature a host of players who were members of this year's high school team. The Skippers finished with a disappointing 3-13 record, though it was still an improvement on '92's 0-15 campaign.

And if things go as sophomore Ryan Freeman believes they will, the Skippers should improve immensely on this spring's dismal South Shore League record.

"I guess the summer league is really just to help us out and give us the chance to have a good season next year," said Freeman, who started at third base and batted .303 for Cohasset, but wants to improve his play in the field.

"You can never really get too good."

Freeman said the most baseball the Cohasset players got in during past summers was to "hit the (batting)

Cohasset's week

Police make arrests

Police made several arrests during a busy couple of days last week.

Following a call from Cohasset High School to investigate a drug violation June 3 . Det. Grassie arrested two 16-year old male juveniles. One was charged with possession of a Class D substance (marijuana) and the other was charged with selling a Class D substance on school property and distribution of a controlled substance (marijuana), Sgt. Robert Jackson said.

Jackson said after further investigation, a summons was issued for a 16-year-old female juvenile who will appear on drug charges at a hearing June 21. He said the female will be charged with selling a Class D substance on school property and distribution of a Class D substance. All three juveniles are students at the high school, police said.

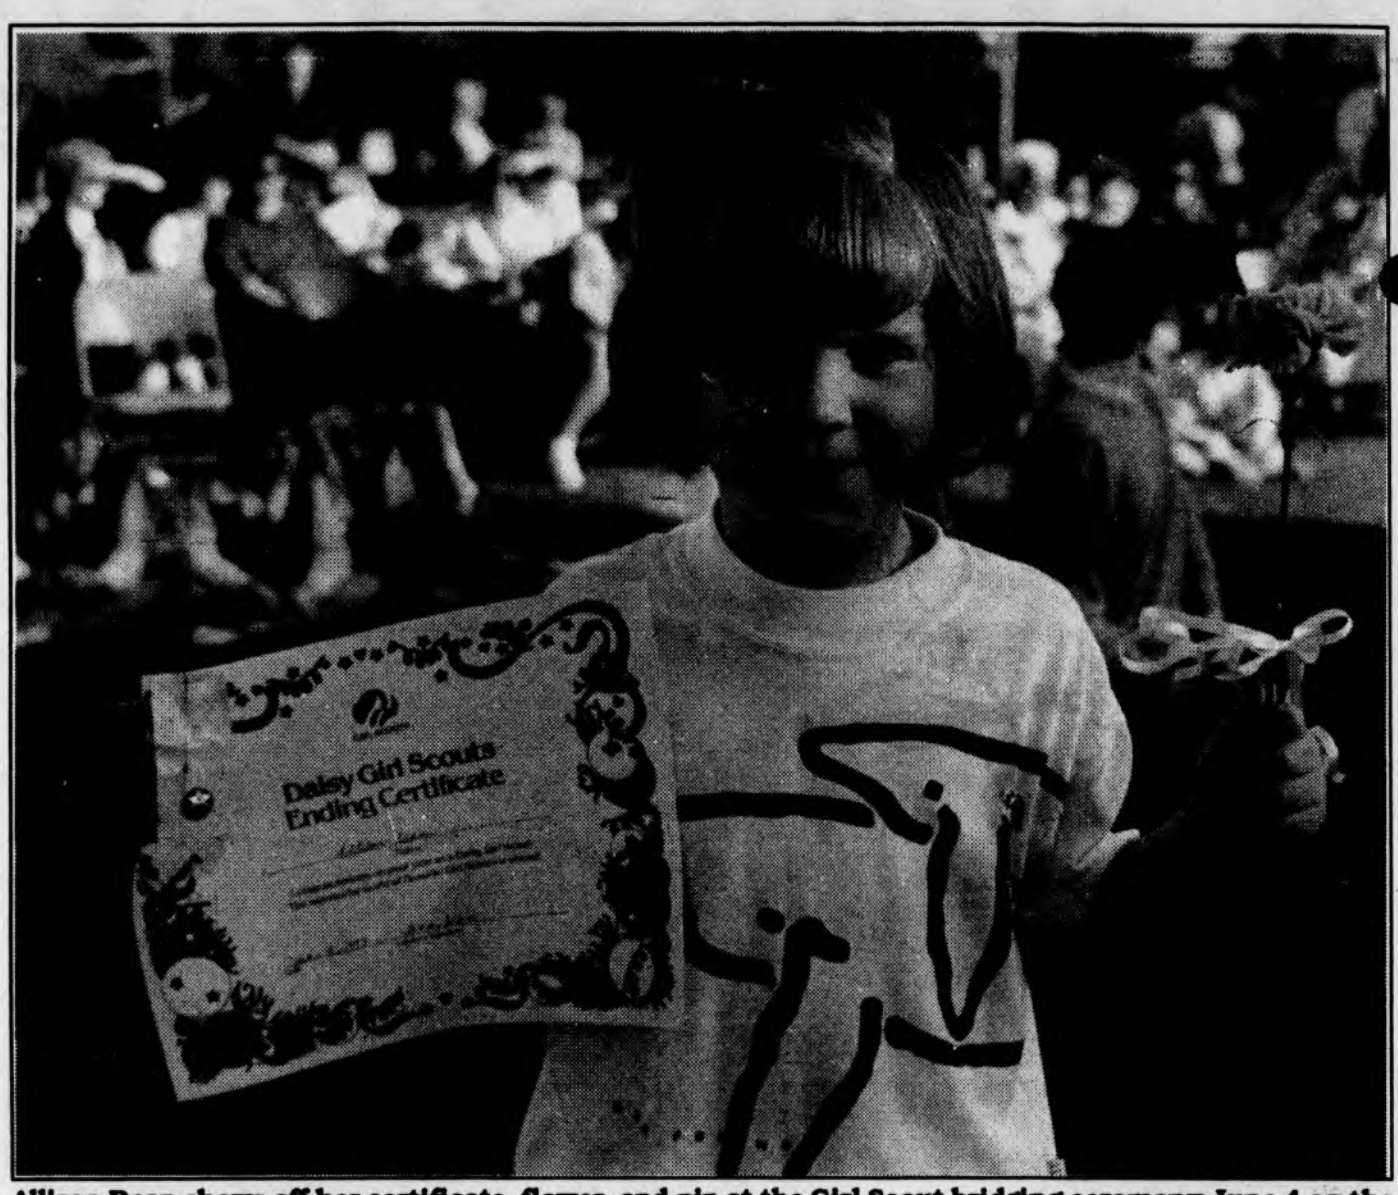
Jackson explained that under state law selling drugs on school grounds is a serious offense punishable by mandatory minimum imprisonment of two years.

In another matter, at 12:19 a.m., Saturday June 5, Police Officer Brian Cogill arrested Matthew McDonald, 26, 44 Summer St., and two male Cohasset juveniles ages 15 and 16. They were charged with malicious destruction of property (damages over $250) and were placed in protective custody, Sgt. Jackson said.

At 10:02 p.m., Saturday, Officer David Cogill returned to headquarters with a 16-year-old Cohasset female juvenile who was placed under protective custody.

Later that night, Officer D. Cogill arrested three females and two males. All were charged with minor transport of alcohol. Arrested were Deana Genovese, age 20, of 86 Howe Rd.; Sandra Burnap, age 20, of Wolfeboro, N.H.; and Joelle Daskam, age 20, of Bridgewater. Males arrested were Michael W. Ellinger, 20, of 17 Surry Drive; and Sean Gallagher, age 20, of 91 Beechwood St.

Sgt. Jackson said none of the incidents were related to high school graduation.



Allison Dean shows off her certificate, flower, and pin at the Girl Scout bridging ceremony June 4 on the town Common. Scouts of all ages advanced to the next lever of scouting at the special event.

Sara Deveney

Name: Sara Deveney

Occupation: Works in the recreation office at town hall and as a counselor with the summer playground program. (Sara is a junior at the College of the Holy Cross).

Best day of your life: May 5, 1987. The day I got my braces off.

Most embarrassing moment: I went to dancing auditions for "Anything Goes," a Company Theatre production. It turned out the audition was for tap dancing and all the others had their tap dancing shoes. All I had was sneakers.

Goal: To get into medical school.

Favorite season: Summer. I like everything about it.

Best vacation: Cancun, during spring break.

Favorite holiday: Fourth of July.

Favorite book: "A Separate Peace," by John Knowles.

Favorite movie: "Scent of a Woman."

Biggest worry: Money — being able to afford to go back to school.

Pet peeve: Slow drivers, who go below the speed limit.

Favorite place: The beach.

Favorite junk food: TCBY's white chocolate mousse Shivers with jimmies.

Person you'd most like to meet: David Letterman.

Minot Lightkeeper's benefit brunch is set for Sunday

Bancroft family. According to Jane B. Cook, it's only fitting.

Cook wrote the committee saying all the Bancrofts loved Cohasset and the Minot Lighthouse so much that this was a worthy tribute. Even with the windows and window seats selling like hotcakes, the committee has a long way to go.

"In this economic climate, it's hard to raise money," Goedecke said. "Every kind of fund raising you can imagine, they've done it. You have to come up with things that are fun."

Fun and festive and fantastic food are the order of the day. The brunch is being catered by The Borrowed Butler. Although billed as a brunch, the menu runs more toward the luncheon end of the spectrum. There will be fresh fruit and muffins and seafood Newburg and ham and all sorts of mouthwatering vegetable dishes and a wide array of beverages to wash it all down with.

While the brunch-goers eat, drink and make merry, the Mark Kross Trio, an internationally known jazz group, will fill the morning and the air with music in the style of Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington and classic New Orleans jazz from their perch on the wraparound porch.

'The weather wouldn't dare cross Polly's Path.'

— Jane Goedecke

If you haven't reserved your spot, there's still world enough and time, according to organizer Polly Logan. She'll even put up a bigger tent to accommodate you.

Organizers say it will be a wonderful morning if the weather cooperates.

Goedecke has no fears.

"The weather wouldn't dare cross Polly's Path," she said.

The brunch runs from noon to 2 p.m.. All parking will be at the beach, but the senior van shuttle will be available to shuttle you from beach to brunch and back again. Tours of the lightkeeper's residence will be available following the brunch or any Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon.

And knowing Logan, there could be some special treats in store. For more information or reservations, call Polly Logan at 383-0031, Ann Whelan at 383-0034 or Sue McNamara at 383-6845.

Upkeep for courts should be shared

The tennis courts are no longer the sole responsibility of selectmen. Tuesday, selectman Jane Goedecke said the burden of maintaining the courts should fall on several town departments.

"The tennis courts are for students, and all townspeople, so there needs to be a joint effort" to maintain them, Goedecke.

The courts, located at the junior high-high school, will be the responsibility of the school, recreation and tree and park departments.

Goedecke also asked the board to request that the recreation department erect signs regarding litter control and rules of conduct at the tennis courts.

"It's a good idea to remind people to pick up after themselves," she said.

cohasset's week

Gadow to sail away

Harbormaster Irving Gadow will leave for Pennsylvania at the end of the summer.

"Our wonderful harbormaster will be leaving due to his wife's transfer to Pennsylvania," Selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby said.

Rocco Laugelle said he would be missed. "Gadow said 'Being in the Coast Guard for 20 years, she followed me around and now it's time I followed her a little.'" Laugelle said.

Selectmen said June 14 is the deadline for prospective harbormaster candidates to submit their applications.

Reserve fund transfers

Selectmen transferred $13,975.49 from the reserve fund last week. The wire inspector needed $550 to repair the aerial bucket truck, while another $125.49 is needed for pins to hold the cross-walk signs together. The animal control officer will receive approximately $800 to paint his car and install radios and other necessary technological equipment.

Lastly, selectmen requested $12,500 for labor counsel fees.

MWRA issues effect town

Selectman Jane Goedecke warned Cohasset residents not to assume they would be immune to the MWRA fee controversy. She said she attended a South Shore Coalition meeting recently and a lot of discussion was devoted to MWRA fees.

"People should not for a moment think we won't be affected," she said. "Senator McDonald believes it (the cost of the Boston Harbor cleanup) should be spread across the state."

Legal bills top payment list

Selectmen approved payment of $21,559.11 in bills last week.

A total of $2,569.18 will be paid to two firms for their part in the dredging of the harbor. Another $12,914.93 will be paid to the law firm of McGowan, Engel, Tucker, Garrett & Schultz for legal expenses and $6,075 will be paid to the CPA firm of Tucci & Roselli for auditing the town's 1992 financial statements.

Hagerty Committee formed

There are 18 members on the Hagerty Property Committee. Selectmen approved committee nominations last week. The members are Herbert Jason, Al Moore, Veneta Roebuck, Hamilton Tewksbury, Richard Barrow, Russ Bonetti, Merle Brown, Michael Sullivan, Fritz Pfaffmann, James Sandell, Richard Grinnell, Paul Pattison, Richard Bugley, John F. O'Brien, George Kovach, Herbert Towle, Keith Knowles and Paul Sheerin.

Boats can be 'ferry' good alternative . . .

planners have included expanded commuter boat services among the alternatives to rail service also being considered.

"Until now, most of our transportation gurus have seen the harbor as something to be bridged, tunneled under, and generally avoided," Reardon wrote in a recent paper on the subject of ferries.

"This natural right of way, this self-healing roadway! In city after city, bridge, highway and tunnel designs are going back into file drawers as transportation planners demonstrate that the most cost-efficient, environmentally-sound, reliable and flexible way to transport people across the water is by ferry."

Reardon intended to make a presentation on ferries to the MBTA at a meeting of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) in Hingham on the proposed rail alternatives June 3, but time ran out. The CAC is a group of representatives from communities on the South Shore that would be affected by reconstruction of the Greenbush Line.

Reardon's presentation has been re-scheduled for sometime in July.

She contends that an improved water transportation system on the South Shore, coupled with other alternatives such as improved feeder bus service, may solve the traffic problem.

"If you can look at a combination of alternatives, which includes increased service by boat, you might find you can accomplish all the goals of the Greenbush Line,"" Reardon said.

What Reardon advocates is a ferry system, with specific stopping points, along the South Shore waterfront to Boston.

"In Istanbul, 360,000 people are carried by large ferries an high-speed Norwegian catamarans each day — equal to two Southeast Expressways full of traffic,"" she said.

Staten Island's ferries carry 6,000 people each — the equivalent of four lanes of rush hour traffic on the Southeast Expressway, Reardon said.

And federal money is available for ferry projects, she said. She noted that the city of Vallejo, California recently received $13 million of Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) money for high-speed ferries which will cover a 26-mile route in less than one hour.

Reardon suggests expanding existing ferry service to Hingham, Hull, and Quincy. She adds that the Hingham-Boston ferries terminate service too early, and do not operate on weekends.

Ferry hours should be expanded to include weekends, she said.

The water shuttle expansion should include adding new waterfront sites, Reardon said, such as in Squantum and possibly Cohasset and Scituate.

Regardless of which alternatives are chosen for South Shore commuters, Reardon said existing water transportation alternatives should be more heavily advertised.

"Almost every Airport Water Shuttle trip during the day includes transfers to or from the Hingham boat. This link has been ignored," she said. To illustrate the efficiency of the airport shuttle for South Shore residents, Reardon lent her own personal experience.

"Returning home from three weeks of conferences in various corners of the world, where new ferry technologies and new sources of transit financing were discussed, I dragged my suitcase onto the Massport Water Shuttle bus, trundled it down a gangway to the Airport Water Shuttle, enjoyed my brief voyage to Rowes Wharf and reconnection to the city," Reardon explained. "A Boston Harbor Hotel bellhop transferred my luggage to the Hingham Commuter Boat which had me home to Hingham in 35 minutes."

The MBTA should market water shuttle connections with respective adjoining bus service, she said.

"How many people know that you can still get to Plymouth by ferry, and make a night connection by bus back to Hingham or Boston," she commented.

MBTA awards bridge contract

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's board of directors has awarded a $20.4 million contract to Modern Continental Construction Company Inc. of Cambridge to construct a new bridge across the Neponset River for rail service to the South Shore.

MBTA general manager John J. Haley Jr. said the bid was nearly 30 percent below the estimated cost.

"Construction of this bridge will pave the way for Old Colony service, one of the largest and most important transportation project in the state," said state Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes, who serves as the chairman of the board of directors.

"The Old Colony is vital to economic growth and development, to alleviating traffic congestion and helping to clean our air, and in offering access to transit to the one part of the region that is not presently served by commuter rail."

The bridge will be made of steel with concrete supporting piers. The old railroad bridge was destroyed by fire in 1960 about a year after the New Haven Railroad halted service on the Old Colony's lines.

Haley added that 80 percent of the $480 million Old Colony restoration project which will restore service to the Plymouth and Middleborough lines will be financed with federal dollars.

The Greenbush line is undergoing a separate environmental review.

This is "great news for South Shore and southeastern Massachusetts residents who have limited transportation options now," said Haley.

All the best for a super college career, James!

❒ Noel and Nancy Ripley are pleased and proud parents this month... their very own Heather and Noel both graduated from college and are about to make their way into the business world!

Heather graduated from U Mass Amherst with a BA in psychology, and Noel graduated from Johnston State College with a BS in Natural Science.

Get this folks, both were on the Dean's list! More good news, no more bills for a while, which is sure to make everyone happy!!

❒ Mark this Saturday on your calendar. The Appalachia Service Project is holding a yard sale and car wash. The date is June 12. The car wash will be held in front of the Second Congregational Church from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. with a $5 donation per car. The yard sale will be held inside the church during the same hours (at Bates Hall).

See you there!!

❒ Hats off to Sara Bishop, who graduated from Plymouth State College Saturday, May 22. Sara received a B.S. in Management, Cum Laude, and we congratulate you for your efforts.

❒ Don't forget the Jazz Brunch June 13 to benefit the restoration of Minot Light's Lightkeepers Residence. Sailors, jazz fans, horticulturists who want to view flower-filled gardens from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury will gather at the estate of Jane and Peter Goedecke, 100 Nichols Road, Cohasset, from noon to 2 p.m. The Mark Kross Trio will be playing jazz classics of Benny Goodman and Duke Ellington and New Orleans jazz as well as originals and gourmet brunch will be served by The Borrowed Butler of Scituate!

This event is open to the public. Reservations and more information may be made by calling Polly Logan (383-0031), Ann Whelan (383-0034) or Sue McNamara (383-6945). Others assisting are Eleanor Gleason Bleakie of Scituate and Ann Hutchinson of Hingham.

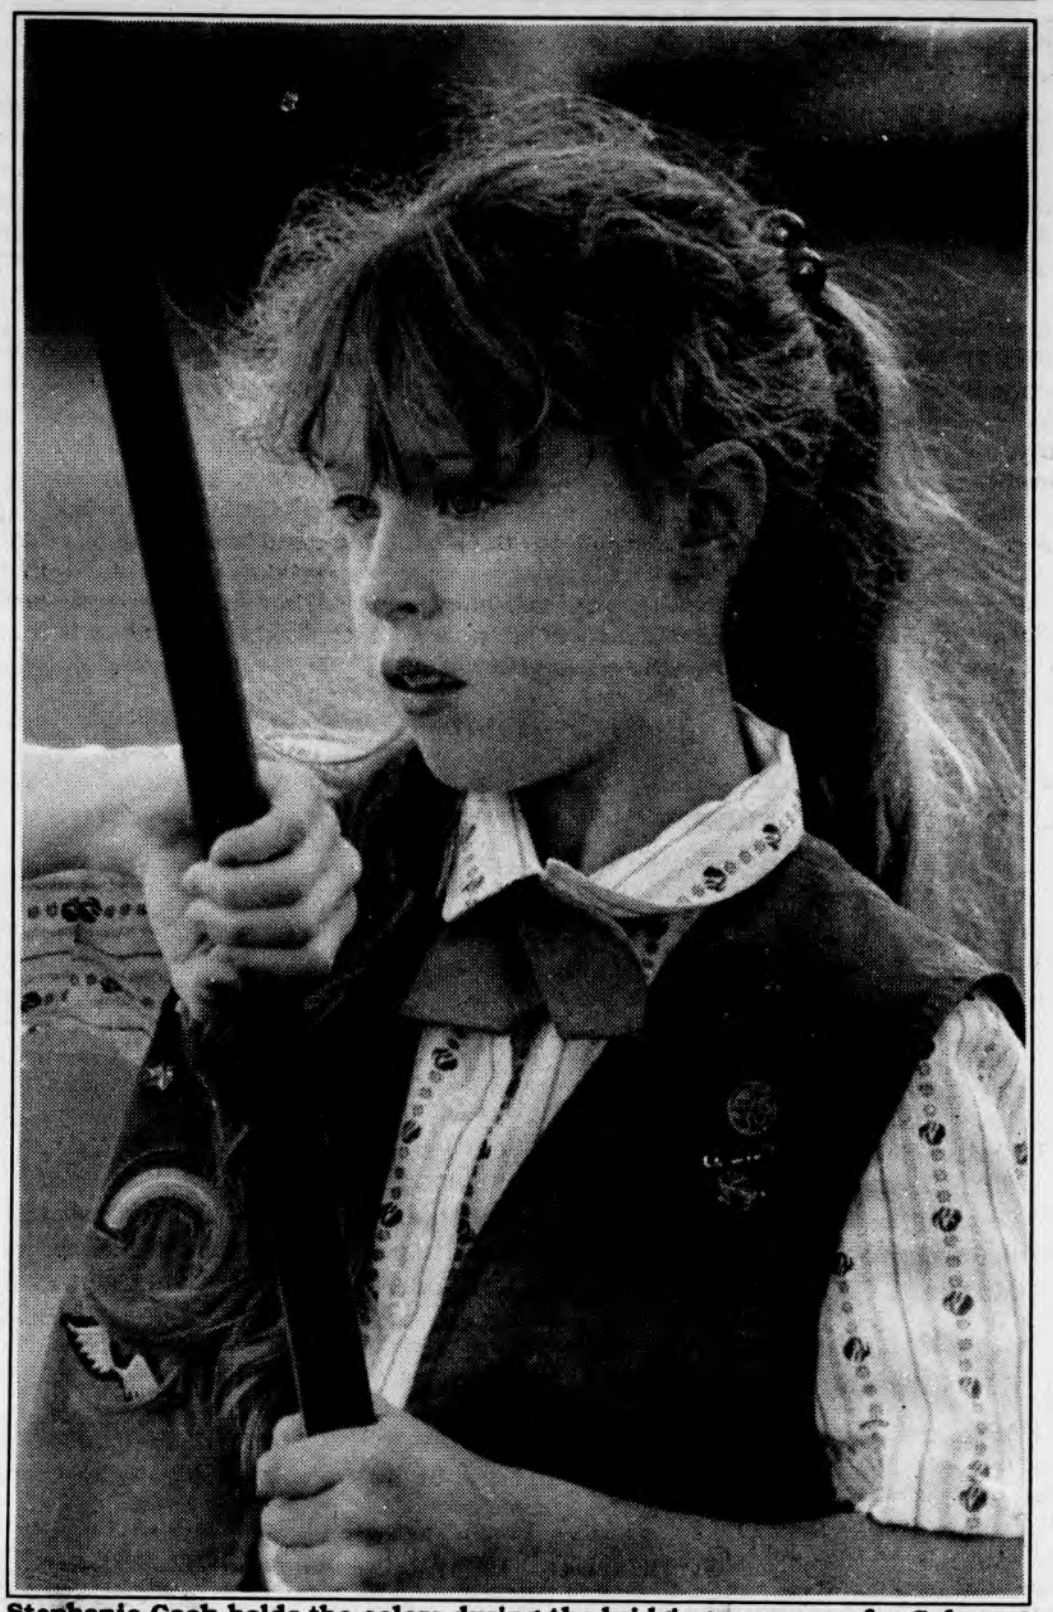
❒ A report from Nancy Snowdale, treasurer of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, brings good news!! The Beechwood Congregational Church held a chicken dinner and donated the proceeds toward the restoration of the residence.

Nancy also noted that many former South Shore residents who recall the famous international renowned endearing 1-4-3 signal have sent warm messages and donations.

Others have donated funds in memory of deceased loved ones and that a donation of $5,000 will complete the kitchen...all these donations will have requested names on plaques and brass plates (what a grand idea for a Father's Day gift!!).

❒ Benjamin Warren Sears, son of Richard Sears of 17 Deep Run, makes the news this week. Monday, May 10, he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in History from The College of Wooster in Wooster, Ohio. Here's to a bright future for you, Benjamin!

❒ Danielle Nohe ended the school year at Notre Dame Academy on a fine note. She received First Honors for the third marking period. Good job!!



Stephanie Cook holds the colors during the bridging ceremony for Cohasset Girl Scouts on the town Common June 4. Girls of all ages moved up to the next level of scouting at the ceremony. A bridge was set up on the Common. As each girl crossed over the bridge, a girl from the next level of scouting was on the other side to welcome her. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

around town

❑ Last Friday evening, June 4, was a special occasion for Kearin ("Whitey") Dunn, held at the South Shore Country Club in Scituate and catered by the Barker Tavern.

As many know, Whitey is retiring at the end of the school year, after 34 years at Cohasset High School. The event was attended by over 100 people, including former teachers and administrators from all over!

Jim Franey did a wonderful job as the Master of Ceremonies, and the Math department of CHS put together a wonderful program. Whitey was roasted by many, toasted to by all...he also "roasted" many of his fellow teachers, which drew lots of laughs and tons of applause.

A great night for a great man, we wish you the best in your retirement !

❑ Patty Perreault Bennett was present at Whitey's party, and was thrilled to be there. The event prompted her to want to have a cheerleader reunion, and she would love to hear from all of her former squads!! She especially mentioned the "Irish Hockey Cheerleaders," "Chase, Conway, Carroll, Crowley, Howley, O'Toole, and O'Brien", and wants to hear from ALL gals from the fall of '74 through the winter of '79. Patty's address is 8427 Sulky Ct. Alexandria, VA. 22308; her telephone number is (703) 780-8351. Get in touch!!

❑ Congratulations to Julie A. Anstead and Marjorie T. Murphy. Both received degrees at Salem State College this year at its 183rd commencement ceremony.

Good luck to both of you in the future, may the job market "open up" and be there to fulfill your dreams.

❑ Suzanne M. Kecskemety was awarded the Degree of Bachelor of Science in Public Administration at Nichols College last month. Suzanne is the daughter of Jack and Susan Kecskemety of 7 Cushing Road, and we certainly wish her well in her future plans!

❑ That's the news from here, be sure to have yours included in the next "Around Town." Call me!!

You're history—Class of 1993

Here's to you—the Class of 1993.

Your high school days are history.

And what a history you've seen in your young lives.

Just look at the year of your birth—1975.

The country was still reeling from the scandal of Watergate.

The memory of Vietnam was still seared in our memory as U. S. civilians were evacuated from Saigon and Communist forces took over South Vietnam.

Congress voted $405 million for South Vietnam refugees and 140,000 were flown to the U. S.

FBI agents captured Patty Hearst, kidnapped in 1974 and she was convicted of bank robbery.

Gerald Ford was president.

Muhammed Ali KO'd Joe Frazier for the heavyweight crown.

While you were nestled comfortably in your bassinet Jack Nicholson wasn't so comfortable as he didn't quite make it "Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in an Oscar-winning performance.

While you were playing with your rubber duck in your bath, the fin of a huge white shark was cutting a path across the silver screen and winning "Jaws" the most money in movie history.

And while you were eating pabulum off your heated baby plate, Carlton Fisk was crossing another plate in the most famous home run in Red Sox history.

Ask your parents if they'll ever forget him pushing his homerun out of the park as he danced down the first base line in the 12th inning of game six of the World Series against the Cincinnati Reds.

But alas in game seven, the championship eluded us for the 57th consecutive year.

Fred Lynn was Rookie of the Year and the Most Valuable Player.

Phil Esposito had the most goals in the NHL with 61 but the Philadelphia Flyers earned the Stanley Cup.

The Steelers won the Super Bowl.

Your parents were giggling over the antics of Lou Grant and Mary Richards on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and Oscar and Felix in "The Odd Couple."

Our favorite detective was Columbo with his unseen wife, rumpled raincoat and a dog named Dog.

The Captain and Tenille told us not to worry about a thing. "Love Will Keep Us Together" they sang in their Grammy-winning song.

In 1980 you first let go of your mother's hand and began that 13-year journey which would take you from kindergarten Tough Skins to graduation sheepskin.

Sam "May Day" Malone was still a relief pitcher for the Red Sox and a TV bar named "Cheers" would not even open for another two years.

The world outside was a mess.

President Carter slapped an embargo on the sale of grain and technology in retaliation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The U. S. Olympic team boycotted the summer games in Moscow.

Eight Americans were killed and five wounded in an ill-fated attempt to rescue the hostages held by Iranian militants at the U. S. Embassy in Teheran.

Mt. Helens erupted in a blast 500 times more powerful than the atomic bomb at Hiroshima.

Ronald Reagan won the presidency and former Beatle John Lennon was killed outside his apartment building in New York City.

editorial

The parquet would never be the same as a young man named Larry Bird stepped out onto the floor of the Boston Gardens. He left Johnny Most hoarse struggling for superlatives and was named Rookie of the Year.

Again the Steelers won the Super Bowl.

"Ordinary People" got best picture of the year. Yet it took a raging bull and a coal miner's daughter to win the top acting awards, Robert DeNiro and Sissy Spacek respectively.

Christopher Cross' song "Sailing" won the Grammy.

And the small screen hailed "Taxi" as its comedy of the year.

In 1986, you had just settled into middle school.

The new school jitters had worn off and the outside world seemed far away when you watched in horror as the space shuttle Challenger exploded on liftoff, killing six astronauts including a New Hampshire teacher Christa McAuliffe.

U. S. warplanes struck targets in Libya in retaliation against its bombing of a West Berlin disco. President Reagan banned trade and travel.

Health officials predicted AIDS deaths would increase tenfold in the next five years.

Abuse of cocaine was skyrocketing.

The U.S. placed sanctions on South Africa for apartheid.

We reached an agreement with Russia on medium range missiles.

An arms for hostages deal with Iran with the profits diverted to the Nicaraguan contras was uncovered.

And Wall Street had its most scandalous year. Ivan Boesky was slapped with a $200 million fine for illegally trading securities.

But though there was death, disease and destruction in the news, TV viewers cottoned to "The Golden Girls" as the top comedy and Boston had a field day in sports that year.

A Rocket exploded upon the scene as Roger Clemens won the Cy Young Award for the first time.

Wade Boggs was the batting champion with a .361 average.

Again our mighty Red Sox made it to game seven of the World Series only to lose to the mightier Mets.

It was game six and a ball that went through Bill Buckner's legs that broke our hearts as the world championship slipped through our fingers for the 68th consecutive year.

It was the one and only time the Patriots made the Super Bowl. We begged them to 'Berry the Bears' but instead a Refrigerator named Perry iced us big-time and we got the worst shellacking in Super Bowl history 46—10.

But never fear. We did have a championship team that year as the Bird-propelled Celtics beat the Houston Rockets and earned the NBA crown for the 16th time.

On the silver screen the haunting memories of Vietnam took the top award in Oliver Stone's "Platoon."

A shark was no longer terrorizing a small New England town but was taking charge of a pool hall as Paul Newman won the Oscar in "The Color of Money."

A deaf girl named Marlee Matlin won best actress in "Children of a Lesser God."

"Higher Love" won the Grammy for Steve Winwood.

Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel received the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1989 you entered the hallowed halls of high school with "the Wind beneath Your Wings." That was Bette Midler's Grammy-winning song that year.

We were in the peak year of the eighties. Unemployment was 5.3%, a 14-year low, and the economy grew 3.8%, the most in four years.

We were riding high.

But there were dark clouds on the horizon.

The largest oil spill in U. S. history occurred after the Exxon Valdez struck a reef in Alaska.

Former National Security Council member Oliver North was convicted in the Iran-contra scandal.

The Supreme Court voted to put new restraints on abortion.

Legislation was passed to bail out the savings and loan industry, $400 billion over 30 years.

Minutes before game three of the world series between the Athletics and the Giants, a gigantic earthquake ripped the San Francisco Bay area.

And U. S. troops invaded Panama overthrowing the government of Manuel Noriega.

But as oil leaks, savings and loan scandals, invasion and earthquakes grabbed the headlines, a soft-spoken white matron and her black chauffeur showed the dignity of friendship as "Driving Miss Daisy" won top film of the year.

Daniel Day-Lewis found the left foot of a paralyzed young man in Ireland could set the film industry on its ear as he won the Oscar.

Frank Viola earned the Cy Young Award

The 49ers beat the Bengals in the Super Bowl

The Oakland A's won the World Series.

The Flames burned bright as Calgary won the Stanley Cup.

And Michael Jordan was the leading scorer in the NBA for the third straight year.

You have come through these four years of high school.

You have seen a war in the Persian Gulf, the Anita Hill—Clarence Thomas debacle and a boxing champion named Mike Tyson jailed for rape.

You have seen the Berlin Wall fall, the Soviet Union disintegrate and Chinese students massacred in Beijing.

You have seen a video of five cops beating a black man named Rodney King and their not-guilty verdict inflame the worst race riots in the history of the country.

You have seen 90 members of a religious cult burned to death in Waco, Texas.

You have seen starvation in Somalia and civil ware in Serbia.

You have seen blood running in the street of the inner city as gunfights replace fistfights.

Now it's your turn.

The world needs every shred of intelligence, integrity and compassion you've got.

See what you can do to make life better in the 21st century.

Perhaps in your class is the doctor who can cure AIDS.

Perhaps in your class are the visionaries who can stem the tide of violence and racism.

Perhaps in your class are the idealists who will fight homelessness, poverty and illiteracy.

Class of 1993—at Cohasset High, you're history.

But out here in the adult world, your history has just begun.

Platform erected on trust land

letters

(Editor's note: due to a typographical error, the telephone number was listed incorrectly in the following letter which was printed last week. As a courtesy to the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the Mariner is reprinting the entire letter this week with the correct telephone number).

An Open Letter to Our Townspeople:

The Cohasset Conservation Trust, a non-profit land conservation organization, owns 26 acres of woodland between the Town Hall parking lot and Dean's Meadow near Atlantic Avenue — a rectangular parcel, 400 to 800 feet wide and about half a mile long, known as Great Brewster Park.

A few days ago the Trustees discovered well within the eastern end of their property a newly-built structure consisting of a platform about 20 feet on a side supported about five feet from the ground on the stumps of trees cut down for the purpose. A 10-inch diameter white oak was felled nearby for no apparent reason and a large fireplace erected. Heavy tools, such as axes, a maul and a posthole digger left at the site, along with the large amount of lumber that went into the platform structure, all had to be carried a long distance over rough trails. Apparently a lot of effort went into this project.

The Trustees are naturally concerned about the presence of this structure on our property and the concomitant destruction it has caused. We have addressed a "To whom it may concern" letter to the perpetrators expressing our concern and asking them to contact us, but no one has come forward. Now we appeal to our neighbors for help. We are primarily interested in having the structure removed and the area restored as much as possible to its original condition. It seems only fair that this work should be done by whomever caused the problem.

We would very much appreciate it if anyone has information about who might be responsible for this activity on our property would call the undersigned, at 383-0586.

Town signs are in bad shape

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to selectmen).
To Whom It May Concern:

I have lived in Cohasset for 45 years. My wife was born in Cohasset. We are not very proud or happy with the street and other signs in the town. Many signs are spray painted (black); others are bent and corroded or in terrible condition. We have a beautiful Lighthouse on Government Island and in front the sign to town parking is unreadable. I overheard a visitor remark "nice sign" on the telephone pole.

Somewhere get some money to correct this deplorable sight. Maybe 1/3 now and the the rest later. Do something.

Clouds of dust are health hazard

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield with a copy to selectmen).
Dear Mr. Litchfield:

We are writing to you with the hope that something can be done about the clouds of dust that come into the neighborhood at Smith Place every time a car or truck passes through the railroad bed between Pleasant St. and Smith Place. We have been told that breathing in such large amounts of dust is a health hazard, and is contributing to an asthmatic condition in our household.

Three remedies that we would suggest are 1) Oiling the area, 2) Covering the area with stone rather than sand, or 3) Paving the area all the way through rather than only half way to Smith Place, as it has been done now.

We await your ideas anxiously, and deeply appreciate your help in this matter.

Democratic caucus set

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, June 19, at 9:30 a.m. to elect delegates to the 1993 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Cohasset will be electing four delegates and four alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention.

Chartis Langmaid, chairperson of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, which is accessible to handicapped persons. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in the town, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the town as of April 15, 1993. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present, voting, and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas. Slatemaking is allowed but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston, MA 02108 no later than June 21, 1993.

The area around Town Hall and the Cohasset Common will be busy Saturday, June 19, with the Arts Festival getting under way at 10 a.m. The caucus must begin promptly at 9:30 a.m., and no one can be admitted to the hall after that time. In the past, a caucus has taken no more than 90 minutes, usually less than one hour.

Support for tax urged

A number of the South Shore's current and past legislators and their spouses plan a fund-raising party to assist efforts to pass a graduated income tax in 1994.

Senator Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth), former Senator Bill and Paula Golden, Representative Frank and Heather Hynes (D-Marshfield), former Representative and Secretary of Human Affairs Phil and Beverly Johnston, former Representative Caroline and John Stouffer, and Anne McKinnon have issued invitations to friends and community activists in the COOP-8 area to meet and hear Jim Braude, Executive Director of the Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts (TEAM). TEAM has been in the forefront of the efforts to place the G.I.T. question on the ballot next year.

Jim Braude is well known for his efforts to defeat Question 3, the tax rollback proposal, in 1990. He has also been active in efforts to obtain more public funding for social service programs and to require corporate tax reports.

Anyone supporting the G.I.T. is welcome to attend the event at the Stouffer home in Hingham, from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday evening, June 13. An invitation is not necessary. Please call either 749-2509 or the TEAM office, 426-1228, for additional information and directions to the party. Donations are requested.

Community spirit drives lightkeepers toward goal

A recent call for help from Joe McElroy, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers, is receiving a tremendous community response that resembles the "Barn Raising" community spirit of previous generations.

Last week, more than $20,000 in donations were received and local painters, firefighters, and retirees (with the Rte 3A Hancock Paint Store providing the paint and sundries) agreed to join together to paint the exterior of the Lightkeepers' Residence.

At the same time, Polly Logan and the committee that is sponsoring the Jazz Brunch Benefit at Peter and Jane Goedecke's, June 13, reports a tremendous response. Of particular note has been the receipt of memorial donations. During the past week, several contributions of $500 each have been received for windows that will have brass plates affixed to identify either the donor or other person to be remembered. Call Polly Logan at 383-0031 or Joe McElroy at 383-0505 for details, or write to Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, P.O. Box 514, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Gloss a "treasure"

Kenneth Gloss of the Brattle Book Shop spoke to a standing-room-only gathering at the Cohasset Library last Thursday.

He shared many anecdotes of the history of the Brattle Book Shop, his entertaining father, and the fascinating individuals he has met while dealing in rare and antique books. Mr. Gloss also brought along some rarities from the Brattle Book Shop including vintage LIFE magazines featuring movie stars in their prime. Many who attended the lecture brought a "treasure" to be appraised by Mr. Gloss

At least three individuals were surprised to learn that their attic "treasure" was valued at more than $1,000. One of those "treasures" was a signed book by President John F. Kennedy given to the obstetrician who delivered him and now owned by a Cohasset resident. Mr. Gloss emphasized that he is delighted to appraise any and all would be treasures, and there is an 800 number for his book shop where people can call with questions.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library were more than pleased with the general enthusiasm for the evening and are looking forward to sponsoring another evening lecturer in the near future.

Osgood library visits

Suzanne Terry, the children's librarian, has arranged a sign-up sheet at the Osgood School for children who would like to visit the library individually this week. The students may come to the library during the school day to hear about the summer reading program and to have a card catalog lesson. Students may also apply for a new library card at this time. Visits all day from 9:15 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. Allow one hour per visit. Mrs. Terry is looking forward to having all Osgood students visit.

Benefit yard sale

The Appalachia Service Project is sponsoring a yard sale and car wash Saturday, June 12, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue (next to Town Hall).

If you have any treasures which you'd like to donate for the yard sale, items may be dropped off this evening, June 10, from 7 to 9 p.m. Pick up is available.

Please call the church at 383-0345 or Ami Argus, 383-9325, to make arrangements. The yard sale will take place in Bates Hall. The car wash will be set up in front of the church in the circular drive. Car wash donation is $5.

Please support this important program where a total of 56 teenagers and advisors will be traveling to southwestern Virginia at the end of this month to work on homes for several Appalachian families for a week.

Golf pro visits

Author and golf professional, Bill Kroen, will be at Buttonwood Books and Toys Saturday, June 12 from 3 to 5 p.m. to sign his latest book A Hacker No More. He will also hold a putting clinic.

A Hacker No More a step-by-step guide to transforming your game. Kroen gives you the insights, observations and training techniques he used to take more than twenty strokes off his game.

For more information, call 4383-2665.

Big dig discussion

June 15, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold a breakfast meeting at Kimball's by the Sea at 7:45 a.m.

The topic will be "The Big Dig" and the speaker will be Michael Lewis, assistant to Peter Zuk. This project is the largest of its kind ever attempted in the United States, and its details are truly fascinating.

Lewis will also discuss the resurfacing of the Fore River Bridge, a project that will have a great impact on South Shore commuters this summer.

This meeting is open to both members and the public, and the Chamber urges everyone to make an effort to attend. The cost is $10 for the first member of a business or group, and $5 for each additional employee/member who attends. Call the Chamber at 383-1010 for reservations or information.

Farmers Market news

The Hingham Farmers Market held the first of several free drawings Saturday, June 5. It consisted of fresh spinach, lettuce, radishes, summer squash and rhubarb, jam and bread, flats of snapdragons, canterbury bells, dahlias, parsley and potted perennials and annuals.

The prizewinner was the Lavallee family of Weymouth. The contributors for the drawing were Phil Anastasia of Roslindale, Scott Freitas of Middleboro, Jeanette MacKenzie of Duxbury, Alan Hiltz of Cohasset and Dave Sturgis of Hingham.

Come in and register for our next drawing with every purchase. The runner-up, Priscilla Hoxie, will be entered automatically in our next drawing.

NOW group meets

South Shore Chapter, National Organization for Women (NOW) meets June 13, 2 to 4 p.m., New North Church, Lincoln St., Hingham. Call Suzanne 749-3342; Jeannette 337-6725.

Guest Speaker: Attorney Jamie Sabino, who specializes in assisting minors seeking abortions through the parental notification laws.

Starting in July, NOW regular monthly meetings will be held the second Tuesday or the month, at 7 p.m., at the New North Church, Lincoln Street, Hingham.

Financial advice offered

Sheryl Cox, vice president, Investments, at A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. and Nicholas Corvinus, senior vice president, at The Putnam Company will be giving an Educational Seminar on "What You Should Know Before You Renew Your CD."

The session will be held at A.G. Edwards & Sons, 101 Derby Street, Hingham, Wednesday, June 16 at 2 p.m.

For reservations please call Cindy Cummings at 800-543-8010. Seating is limited. Light refreshments will be served.

Garden club officers elected

The annual meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset was held recently at the Chart House. The slate of officers elected included: Barbara Christensen, President; Terese D'Urso, 1st Vice-President; Cynthia Wessling, 2nd Vice-President; Peg Smart, Treasurer; Kathy Gray, Recording Secretary; and Janet Marlatt, Corresponding Secretary.

The club was awarded four state awards at the annual meeting of the Mass. Federation of Garden Clubs, including the "Club of Distinction Award" for scoring the highest number of activity points in its district.

The latest civic project that the club is involved in is the construction of the stone wall and landscaping at the Cohasset Lightkeepers Cottage. Club members planted over 500 plants there in late May. A bluestone patio will complete the plan in the spring. The club will hold its biennial Christian house tour in December to help finance this project.

Jones faces the competition

New England offers first real challenge of the season

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

This Saturday's New England Track and Field Championships at Bridgewater State College represents the last competition of the season for Cohasset triple-jumper Ray Jones.

Amazingly, however, the meet which brings the best track athletes from the six New England states together, will also provide Jones with his first serious competition of the spring.

That's not stretching the truth one iota either. It's a solid fact that the All-State champion has backed up through the entire South Shore League schedule and in the invitational meets he competed in.

Take, for example, last week's All-State Meet at Shrewsbury High School. A week after setting a new Class D mark in winning by 4-feet with his 46', no one came within 2-feet of Jones' 46'—1/4".

"The thing about Ray is he is very competitive and he has not really been pushed this year," said head coach Tom O'Neill. "When he is up against competition, he'll be pushed. It should be interesting at Bridgewater."

What should make the New England Meet more interesting than any other meet Jones has competed in this year is the fact that it will be the first triple-jump competition he will be in where he won't be the favorite. Two athletes from Rhode Island have jumped 49 and 50' respectively.

Jones and O'Neill had set a goal of 46' at the start of the season, which he has accomplished. The Skippers' head coach would be "thrilled" if Jones leaped into 47' land, but will not be disappointed if he doesn't.

"If he could get well into 46-feet I'd be happy too," O'Neill said.

Jones jumped between 44-45' consistently this year, before upping the tempo for the big meets.

And don't expect Jones to be a bundle of nerves before he jumps on Saturday. He is no stranger to the New England Meet, having jumped 45'6" to take fourth overall in '92. Jones won the Class D Meet in 44'10" as well.

O'Neill said Jones will practice his run-ups to the take-off mark, during three of his workouts this week, as well as putting an emphasis on stretching exercises. Timing and his running approach to the pit will also be fine tuned. Friday will be a scheduled off-day, O'Neill said.

"He seems to be right on schedule," O'Neill said. "We tried to get it so he'd peak out at the state and New Englands. Obviously I'm very pleased with how he did in the All-State Meet."

O'Neill isn't likely to be disappointed Saturday either.

cages at the Hingham Sports Center." A few of them also went to camp.

"Last year we'd have a few pick-up games," Freeman said, "but this should be better. We'll be practicing and learning more things."

High school co-captain John Maynard, a .350 hitter for the Skippers, also sees Cohasset's team improving next spring through the additional games.

"It'll probably help a lot because the kids in this town never played during the summer," Maynard said. The more you play, the better you get."

Maynard, who, along with Andrade, will also play for the Hingham American Legion team this summer, said Rolandelli is unique as a coach because he realizes those players who have continued with baseball in other summers are that much further ahead of the others, experience-wise.

"At this level," Maynard said, "the seniors know basically what they're doing so he's going to let us go out and play ball and give us pointers."

Although the team is made up of 10 varsity players and everyone on the roster is from Cohasset, some opted to play lacrosse, golf or didn't play any sports in the spring — a good indication of just how much excitement the new team has brought to the high school athletes.

Freeman said the team has yet to receive a schedule, but knows Rolandelli has set up games against Canton, Rockland and Avon. Other teams include North Randolph, Abington and Holbrook in what will be called the Big League. There will be a tournament at the end of the season and awards will be presented.

"We should do pretty well," Maynard said.

And down the line, so should the high school team.

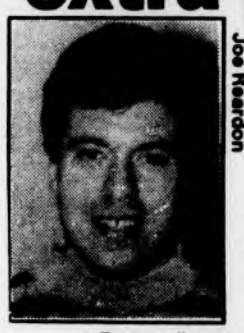
extra points



Joe Reardon

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

They are everywhere.

You drive home from work and they are clogging the streets. You go to a beach or a park to soak in some rays and they are dashing around like rabbits.

No, we're not talking about Joey Butafucco groupies, but joggers.

Now, we at the Extra Points Crew have nothing against fitness. In fact, we both have done our fair share of running over the years. But there are certain things that annoy even hardened running fans.

Joggers with head phones.

These shiny happy people have too much fun exercising. When you sweat, grunt and groan you should not be listening to Marky Mark and the Funky Bunch. Do you think the Ancient Greeks had headphones while they were doing laps around Sparta? Heck no.

Dead animals on the road.

Most jogging is done on the highways and back roads of local towns and for whatever reason, there are dead animals strewn everywhere making mounds of road-kill pizza.

Last week one of us was jogging and saw a squished squirrel, an obliterated opossum and a bashed beaver over the course of three miles. DPW crews of the South Shore unite and clean our roads of dead animal carcasses. Our sneakers thank you.

Runner's High.

On this aspect of running, there is a disagreement on the Extra Points Crew.

Joe says of Runners High, "You'll be running and five or six miles in you'll feel like you're making no effort. It's kind of like a second wind."

While Dave says, "Runner's High is oxygen depletion. Your brain is slowly dying and you don't feel any pain. It's kind of like mental gangrene. Besides, I've never made it to five miles so I wouldn't know."

Running at night.

Not only is this unsafe because of reckless drivers but stepping into an unseen pothole is not the best thing you can do for your ankles and knees.

If you can't run in the morning or after work when it is still light out, buy a jump rope or join an aerobics studio. There are reflective shirts, sneakers and shorts you can wear but those are no substitute for sunlight.

And last but not least, compression shorts.

We have nothing against wearing compression shorts underneath your regular loose-fitting shorts. But wearing form-fitting lycra and nothing else is enough to make most people lose their Runner's High.

Besides, most people who wear nothing but compression shorts ought to re-up at Jenny Craig and work on dropping another 50 pounds. Whatever happened to old-fashioned grey sweat pants?

Lewis' no hitter keeps Dodgers perfect

In a battle of two of the league's best pitchers the Dodgers defeated the Mets Sunday, a feat made possible by Matt Lewis' big 15 strikeouts. Greg Taylor, the Met ace, matched Lewis with 15 strikeouts, but Greg Bilton and Mark Equi eked out three hits for the light blue. Lewis, Bilton, Equi and Marc Verrochi scored the Dodger runs. In the field Greg O'Keefe, Dennis Rooney, Jake Motley and Bilton were noteworthy. The fans at Barnes were treated to a tremendous duel and a super show of baseball.

Saturday, the gusty Pirates took the Dodgers to the limit. The Pirates led by two runs after five and one half innings of play thanks to Ben Roine's four solid innings on the mound and 6K's. A patch-eye highlight was Ben Smoot's glorious three run homer over the left-center field fence. Craig Powerman Parker was 4-5 at bat and scored four runs. Luke Caldwell was 2-2 in this cliffhanger of a game. Hunt Pile's diving catch robbed Dodgers of a run. Andrew Kinch had a great catch in right field and a fine hit. Dodgers Lewis, O'Keefe, Bilton, Brian Hurley and Jimmy O'Sullivan had hits with Hot Wheels O'Sullivan himself streaking across the plate for the winning run. Mark Equi continued to excel behind the plate. Bobby Morgan led the list of scoring Dodgers who came from behind with three runs in the bottom of the sixth for the victory.

The green-skirted A's continued to improve their baseball this week, playing well against the Mets and the Rangers. In their Thursday night game against the Red Sox, the A's came upon the right side of the score with an 11-10 win. Mike "The Marvel" Rossi found the distance once again blasting a two-run homer, a double and a single for four RBI's. All week, Eric Hanian, Pete Minnar, Andrew Sorrentino and Jay Whorisky added hits. Ray Cavanaugh pounded out two doubles; Ted Lubitz broke into the hit column and had two RBI's. Magic Morgan Sandell flashed his clutch magic at second base over and over, pulling down rifled line drives, leaping and jumping to stop opponents' rallies cold. Sorrentino played heads-up baseball in center field, holding runners to single bases. Jeff Flanagan covered left field and third base with a hot glove. B.J. Butman covered the ground for the A's in the outfield, holding base runners in their tracks. Hanian is a maniac at first, shutting everything down. On the mound, Rossi pitched flawlessly, striking out nine batters in five innings against the Mets. Danny Sullivan and Minnar continue to develop strong arms and Hanian came in to throw strong relief this week.

Wednesday's Pirates/Rangers game was the kind of "You'll be sorry if you leave Barnes field even for a minute" baseball these teams are noted for. The Pirates rallied from an 11-run deficit to almost overtake the Rangers in the last inning. Crossing the plate for the patch-eyes was Ethan Begley, Derek Bugley, Craig Parker, Nick French, Scott Manausa and Andrew Kinch.

Lions play Eagles to draw

By Dan Leahy
Special to the Mariner

With the many demands of a holiday schedule, both the Lions and Eagles fielded reduced squads on the final match-up of these two teams on Memorial Day. But the diminished numbers were not reflective of the spirited play on the field.

As in the two prior face-offs, the Eagles stimulated by feisty Andrew "Spike" Sullivan, "Jumpin'" Jake Kovach and Stephen "The Scrambler" Simmons were out of the gate like a strike of lightning!

The Lions countered in their bottom half with a two-run four-bagger by the "Fabulous," "Fantastic" and "Phenomenal" Faber, sometimes called Ashley, a blistering triple by "Crisis Stopper" Craig "The Legs" Laugelle, followed by a streaking double by "Ripper" Ryan Cannistraro.

But, just as real eagles are diurnal birds of prey, equally, these keen-of-vision, timber-toting two-legged non-winged Eagles fought back bravely. With the grace and poise of their winged counterparts, the VFW representatives scored around the bases with the likes of "Bear" Bryan Bilton's stunning three-run homer, "Dynamo" Mark Donovan's stinging, grass-scorching, diamond-splitting double, Tess "The Best" Foley's don't-stop-me-now" cleat-melting double and "Rabbit" Robbie, "Blink-and-I'm-by-you" Carpenter's base cleansing double, stretched to a home run on the overthrows!

But the "death grip of defeat" was not a hold the constant come-from-behind Lions were comfortable engaging. D.J. "The Explosive" DeJulio's thrilling, bottom half of the final set grand slam brought the holiday attendees to their early morning feet. The coffee was still spilling when "Jet" Jonathan Littaver slipped a career long up the middle, past the outfielder triple followed by "Casey" "I have to go the parade" Anderson's bat-cracking, base-clearing double bagger.

With another hard-fought duel ending in a draw they recessed to the entertaining Cohasset Memorial Parade festivities.

Bears battle the Lions

With the last contest of the regular season (except for the soon to be rescheduled weather postponed 'Moms vs Monkeys') played, for the first time, at the Beechwood ballpark, the Bears and Lions signed on for a grand finale.

First up were the powerful Bears, known for their finesse and speed. Off like a Fourth of July rocket, the Bears sent blockbusters like Molly "The Masher" Ogrodnick, Becca "the Bomber" Lehr, Phillip "Straz" (don't confuse me with "Yaz") Strazzulla and "Mountain-Man" Mike Dooley to the plate, ripping one huge hit after another. At one point the fans were afraid the rapidity of runners on the bases would churn the Lions' pitcher into a stick of Land O'Lake Grade A.

Daunted but not denied, the red-faced Lions took their well-earned place at the plate, duplicating their competitors' exhibition. The Lions chipped away run by run to make the contest a respectable (that's "respect") event. Led proudly by Joey "Watch-this-game-over-here" Durkins towering double, "Basher" Courtney Caron and Jeff "He-is-destined-to-be-a-pro" Barrett's back-to-back triples, the score differential began to dwindle. Then after repeat whacks by "Commander" Justin Runey, Greg "Slammer" Smith and "Marvelous" Mark Lewis, Crandon "I've-been-waiting-for-this-pitch-all-season" Leahy turned them all around with his career-long booming grand slam home run.

Smelling their victory slipping away the Bears regained their composure and again stepped to the pentagon rubber plate. "Slammin" Sammy Steele started it off with a "hickory-kissing-the-leather" triple, followed by "Ripper" Ryan Tufts hard-driving double, "Muscle" Mike Devine's cover stripping two-bagger, Doug "The diamond-splitting" Pearce's diving-to-be-safe single, Andrew "Anvil" O'Keeffe's off the mound matching single, capped by Jonathan "The Juggernaut" Downing base-clearing well-earned triple.

But the Lions spell "defeat" with "No-way Jose!" Stepping up for his grand finale, Tim "The absolute terrific" Pilczak, Ashley "Hit-it-to-the-Angels" Faser, Jonathan "The Leather Splitter" Littauer, Craig "Whack 'em out of the pack" Laugelle and D.J. "The Dynamite" DeJulio all pulverized the white marshmallow, bringing the contest to water level.

With the formal season at rest, the coaches of the Lions, Eagles, Tigers and Bears want to thank their generous sponsors, supporting parents, friends and management of the Little League for all their assistance, attention and praise. Most of all, a well-deserved "pat-on-the-back" for all the youthful participants who faced the unknown and conquered. To them we raise our chalice, for they have given us all insight, joy and endless entertainment. We hope that, as is the purpose at this level, they learned and also enjoyed.

Best wishes for a safe and pleasurable summer vacation. Please watch for the Little League sign-up notice next fall. Early registration is very important to ensuring a smooth-running organization. Thank you.

Angels in heaven against Royals

Angel bats were red hot in an 8-7 win against Royals in May 26 minor league action. Every player hit including a multiple hit game from Greg Smith, Eric Libby and Jake Morgan. Greg Smith's first hit was a towering three run home run! Brian Krupczak, Tim Baird, and Ted Thompson continued to rip the cover off the ball. Sam Dolph, Jack Jerz and Dennis Readon have been swinging burning-hot bats lately and they contributed with some key hits in the win.

The fielding play of the game (and most likely the season) was turned in by Brian Krupczak. With the winning runs on base, he robbed the Royals of a threatening run with an acrobatic catch to preserve the victory!

Strong starting pitching from Jack Jerz and solid relief pitching came from Michael McMillen and Dennis Readon. Michael McMillen has shown great speed on the base paths all season long.

Twins growl back at Tigers!

The Twins completed their minor league regular season with bat-cracking hitting from Matt Ogrodnick, Mike Sadler and Liam Martin. The smash of the game came from the bat of Kevin Hanian who belted a two-run homer to deep center field to insure the win for the Twins.

Karen McMorris was too tough for Tigers at second base, Alex Johnston took care of business on first, and Jari Martin's glove stayed with the ball on third. A tag out by Alex Johnston at home plate on a pinpoint throw from Hanian was a play for the six o'clock news.

A well-rounded pitching performance by Ashley Van Hartsfeldt, Mike Sadler, and Matt Ogrodnick made coming to the plate only frustrating!

Tennis lessons offered

Tennis lessons offered by the Community Center in July and August will be taught by instructor Amanda Church. Lessons for adults and children will be given on a private court in Cohasset. Each class of four students will meet for eight lessons in July, at $44. In August, six lessons will be given with the cost $33. Afternoon and early evening times are available. Call the center at 383-0088 to register.

Three-day tennis tourney on tap

The fourth annual Cohasset Community Tennis tournament will be held June 25, 26, and 27. Once again we are fortunate to have 20 scenic tennis courts for our tournament throughout Cohasset.

Friday, June 25, the youth tournament and clinics will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. with a party following at the Community Center. The cost is $12 for a tournament T-shirt and party. The 60-plus tournament will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Friday. The cost is $15 for the T-shirt and the Point-After Party. Saturday we will have the adult tourney in the morning and playoffs in the afternoon. Everyone will be invited to the "Point-After Party" at the Community Center. The finals will be held Sunday at the oceanside court of Peter Roy.

This year's committee is very excited about celebrating the Community Center's 50th birthday in conjunction with the tournament. We will have a special program book and raffle items donated by local merchants. If you would like to contribute, place an ad in the program book or volunteer please contact the center. The following committee members can be reached if you have any questions: Connie Afshar, Jan Bickford, Sue Brister, GeorgeJean Butman, Linda Coyle, Karen Devine, Diane Dooley, Chris Horn, Selma Ingberg, Lee Jenkins, Jean Muir, Olga Nohe, Kathy Pratt, Patty Smith, Babette Strecker, Elaine Welby and Co-Chairs, Stephanie Church and Betsy Connolly.

There are still openings in some divisions. We will limit the tournament to the first 300 entrants. You can register by phone or fax. Just call the Community Center at 383-0880 by June 11, our cut off date.

Soccer tryouts held

The South Coast Girls Soccer Club will hold open tryouts for its 1993-94 season throughout the month of June at the South Shore Vocational Technical School on Route 123 in Hanover.

Killilea seeks out best competition

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

(Part of this feature was inadvertently left out of last week's edition)

Most high school tennis players would probably become discouraged with just the thought of going out on a court in front of a crowd and playing against tough competition, game in and game out, for an entire season. Wins can be tough to come by and the exhaustion settles in quicker than against a player with less talent.

Cohasset's Alison Killilea relishes the opportunity. The 17-year-old junior did just that all of this season as a member of the Winsor School team, an all-female school in Boston.

"I loved it," she said of going head-to-head with more experienced players. "It definitely increased my level of play. When you go out with a player of that ability you have nothing to lose."

Killilea, the captain-elect for the 1994 team, is looking to improve her game during the summer after being voted to both the Eastern Independent League and Association of Independent School Girls Athletics (AISGA) All-Star teams as Winsor's top singles player. She also finished as consolation champion in the "A" division of the Ne England Prep School Tennis Tournament. Winsor had a fine showing as well, defeating Brooks, St. Paul's and Governor Dummer — all much larger schools.

"I think a lot of people at the tournament were surprised we were even there so it felt good to do well," she said.

The team's No. 4 player as a sophomore, Killilea wanted to play for Winsor when she enroled as an eighth grader but students had to wait until their freshman year. The policy, Killilea said, is expected to be changed by the next school year.

Rather than wait a year to start playing seriously, Killilea became a member of the Weymouth Tennis and Athletic Club, where she has been coached by Alberto Garcia the past four years. She credits much of her success on the court to Garcia and his style of coaching has been a big influence the past four years.

"I can't be lazy when I'm playing with him," Killilea said. "He's very intense, but at the same time he's a lot of fun. He knows me very well."

Killilea practices at the club two to four times per week for up to two hours and has the opportunity to train with many of the top players in the Northeast.

"They have some of the best players out of New England in that club," she said.

Killilea plans to begin playing in New England League Tennis Association (NELTA) sanctioned tournaments this July. She said she'd more than likely begin in the "B" section and eventually move up to the "A" group, in which the stronger players compete.

Killilea has little doubt the further experience she garners on the court this summer will help her immensely during the tennis season at Winsor. On a team level, Killilea sees changes that have to be made which could result in a championship season.

"I really think our team has to build up its mental toughness," she said. "The team could develop its match-play skills and hopefully win the league."

The summer, however, won't consist of total competition for Killilea. She wants to use what she has learned over the to teach kids the fundamentals of the game on a court on Beach Street, not far from her Atlantic Ave., home. Killilea has already been in touch with several families she knows who have children and said there is still room for kids in the 5- to 15-year-old bracket who are interested.

Killilea would enjoy teaching kids, but has no real aspirations of continuing coaching after college.

"I like being with kids," she said, "but I don't think I want to be a tennis coach when I'm older."

For Killilea, tennis is more than just a sport. It offers her to release pent up energy and stress that come about from her daily activities. Being on the court is a placebo of sorts.

"Tennis is my outlet for pressure," she said. "You can go out on the court after a long day of working and nail some balls. It releases stress.

"It's different from field hockey (where Killilea was also an EIL All-Star) because it's an individual sport," she said. "You can't look to teammates for support.

"That's also why I like field hockey. Because I like playing on a team."

Killilea believes she is more attracted to the two sports because of her hand/eye coordination — one of her strengths on both the court and playing field. She said her agility and quickness on the court help her timing and "creates a stronger pace on the ball."

With a season behind her facing quality competition, Killilea wants to win the big matches she is in next year and improve her overall record.

"I want to be able to beat some of the big players," she said. "Going on the court against them you don't have much to lose. When I go on the court I love to remember that."

With that type of gung ho attitude, and sense of abandon, Killilea should prove to be an even stronger force in the EIL.

Foster, Lewis net hat tricks in soccer action

Nimble dribbling and accurate passing by Craig Laugelle led Team 2 to a winning eight goals in a game with Team 3 Saturday.

John Durkin, Curt Kahn, Robbie Carpenter, and Paul Cotter scored goals for Team 2. Scott Faber and Brian Lewis scored three goals for Team 3.

Justin Drybanski and Nathaniel Wilcox assisted Team 2 on defense. Nick Spirito, Ryan Johnson, Andrew Sullivan, and Timothy Goodman rotated defense and offense positions for Team 3. The final score was 8-3.

In other action, Greg O'Connell's accurate ball work led his undefeated Team 6 to an 8-4 win in its game with Team 5. Greg scored five goals and was joined by teammate Joshua Wright who scored three.

Tom Anderson and Evan Pestone each scored two goals for Team 5, highlighted by beautiful assists by Ross Lieb-Lappen.

Mark Chapman and Greg Smith shared goal work for Team 5 and made several fine saves with the help of Chris Flynn and the rest of the team. Jonathan DeGruchy defended the goal line for Team 6 with able assistance from John Friedman.

The girls tennis season may be over for the majority of Bridgewater-Raynham's squad following its 4-1 defeat to Hingham in the Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinals, but two of the Trojans have another competition in front of them still. The first-doubles team of Danielle Shevalier and Amy Perkins will play the doubles squad from Dover-Sherborn this Saturday in the first round of the State Individual championships. The twosome were the only winners against the Harbormen and have won 26 straight matches.

Hanson's Erin Hurley recently qualified for the National Finals of the AAU/USA Basketball Championships as a member of the Bay State Magic squad. The finals will be held from July 22-31 in Ogden, Utah.

Unfortunately, the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) is unable to provide an all-expense paid trip for the team, meaning Hurley has to raise the money herself to pay for transportation, hotel and entry fees for the 10-day tournament.

Anyone wishing to help defray Hurley's costs by making a donation should make it out to the Bay State Magic AAU and send it to: Erin Hurley, 83 Gorwin Drive, Hanson, Mass 02341. Because the Magic is a non-profit organization, all donations and contributions are tax deductible. For more information call Richard Kelly (843-5085) or Tom Clark (288-8961).

BAND CONCERTS

During the past four seasons, concert funding has been provided thru the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. Each June, the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music circus takes under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission for concert funding, hence, certainty of concerts are not absolute until mid-June, each season.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 1993 season is as follows: Tuesday, July 13, 7:30 p.m.; and Tuesday, Aug. 17, 7:30 p.m.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available.

OUTDOOR GOLF LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor golf lessons for beginner and intermediate levels continuously throughout the summer.

The fee for the five-week program will be $55 per person, payable by check, to the "Town of Cohasset." Participants will need a couple of irons, putter and driver for lessons. If you do not have access to clubs, please indicate this at the time of registration.

Classes will be held for the most part Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Classes will not meet if weather is inclement, and if you should be in doubt on any given evening you may call the recreation office to confirm.

If you would like more information on the golf lessons, please call the recreation office at 383-6791. Sessions are five weeks in duration and are conducted outdoors from June through September. Non-residents of Cohasset/Scituate fee: $60.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer dog obedience classes continuously throughout the summer, taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held on Tuesday evenings on the Cohasset Common.

For both the beginner class and the intermediate/advanced class, dog owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4". Absolutely no spike collars.

The beginner classes will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercise beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $40 for the eight week, one hour per week program.

To register for the next session available please call the recreation office at 383-6791. A new session will begin approximately every eight weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Classes meet on a year round basis, indoors during the fall and winter months.

AEROBICS

Step Training Classes - Various level step training programs, taught by Ms. Normandie Nigh of Fit for Success, meet at Town Hall auditorium. Should you be interested in Beginner or Advanced Step Aerobics, please call the recreation office at 383-6791 for details.

YOUTH TENNIS

Youth tennis will begin on Tuesday, July 6 and continue for seven weeks, thru August 20. Youth tennis registrations will be held starting Monday, June 21 and continue throughout that week, as follows: Monday thru Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and again 1 to 3 p.m. and Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. The program is offered for children aged 7 thru 18 years of age. The program is designed on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. The fee for the one seven week session of instruction, two days a week, is $35. $10 discounts are available for additional children in a family.

Lessons for beginners, intermediates, and advanced players are offered. Fridays are special clinic or tournament days.

Rain days: If it rains before 9 a.m., all tennis classes will be cancelled for that day.

NELTA TOURNAMENT

The Nelta Tournament will be held Friday, August 6. More information will be forth-coming through the tennis classes. Registration for this event will be done thru the Youth tennis classes.

If interested, please register thru the Recreation Department office the week of June 21 at the designated times and days listed above. Classes will begin Tuesday, July 6.

ADULT TENNIS

Ms. Michelle Massa will instruct tennis classes for beginner and intermediate tennis players, continuously throughout the summer on various evenings. The classes are one hour long and a session is five weeks in duration. New sessions will begin approximately every five weeks.

Beginner classes meet Tuesday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m. and the intermediate classes will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays. Advanced (tournament level instruction) classes meet Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and advanced beginner will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursdays. Classes will be limited in size. Additional classes will be formed should demand dictate. All classes will meet at the Recreation Commission Tennis Courts at the top of Norfolk Road, next to Milliken Field.

To register, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. The fee for the five week program is $45 per person. Payable by check to the "Town of Cohasset." Each participant will need a racquet. Classes do not meet if weather is inclement, and should you be in doubt, please call the recreation office prior to class time.

Class of '93

He talked the comfort of driving his 12-foot Boston Whaler and the skills he acquired in the relative safety of Cohasset Harbor that enabled him to travel further out in a 22-foot Aquasport.

"The time has come to venture forth on broad waters," he said. "CHS gave us the basic equipment.

"...Each of us in the Class of '93 will look back on the days of CHS with fondness just as I look back on my days with my Boston Whaler."

Keri Souffrain, who attended Cohasset schools through the METCO program, said the small town which has given so much won't be forgotten.

Souffrain said all the days of waking up early to make the trip from Boston while her fellow Cohasset classmates slept were worth it. She said METCO students will benefit not only from the education in Cohasset, but the from the close ties made with local families.

"Cohasset, you will forever remain a part of us," she said.

Supt. Stephen Hart said he was particularly "struck by the genuine caring for others" that the graduates of this class exhibited.

He also offered them the challenge of addressing the problem of alcohol abuse in society.

After giving some grim statistics about the consequences of mixing youth and alcohol, Hart reminded the graduates that alcohol-abuse awareness does not end with graduation.

"You have the power to change the world. Good luck, we'll miss you," he said.

About 90 percent of the 76 graduates will go on to college.

Intergerational Program Planned for Thursday, June 10.

South Shore Elder Services invites you to join elders and students from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull to discuss future issues that will affect both generations. Working together, we will begin to plan new ideas for getting elders more involved in helping students in their local schools and to get students more involved in helping local elders in their own towns. We are looking to expand the number of volunteers working with elders by tapping interested high school students. Also, we want to find new ways to get organizations in Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull to make these programs more accessible to local elders.

In Hull, an Elder Access Coalition has been formed from ten local organizations interested in building greater access for local elders to programs, services, transportation and safe contact with people of other generations. This is a piloted training program in gerontology for high school students who have done wonderful service projects to help frail elders be able to stay in their home. We have all learned a lot from our Hull Pilots and are interested in expanding our intergenerational efforts into Cohasset and Hingham. To do this, we have also begun to make needed changes in South Shore Elder Services.

If you are interested in more information, or if you would like to be part of our program, please call Kathy Bryanton, 383-9112, or Gena Leonard at SSES, 848-3910.

SOS for seniors

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall, in an effort to address the increasing number of reported crimes, con games, swindles and schemes directed toward senior citizens, has designed a program called, "Senior Outreach Services," or SOS.

SOS will operate with a "Triad Concept." a three-way network among the Sheriff's Office, your local police department and senior citizens groups in Norfolk County. SOS/TRIAD is also being assisted by the National Sheriff's Association and the American Association of Retired Persons.

The focus will be on pre-victimization (preventive) and post-victimization (support). Seminars, informative brochures and alert bulletins will be presented to various groups on a timely basis.

The SOS/TRIAD program is complete and ready for full implementation. volunteers are required to help with this valuable community service in Norfolk County. If you wish to help or have input regarding SOS/TRIAD please contact Dick O'Leary at (617)329-3705.

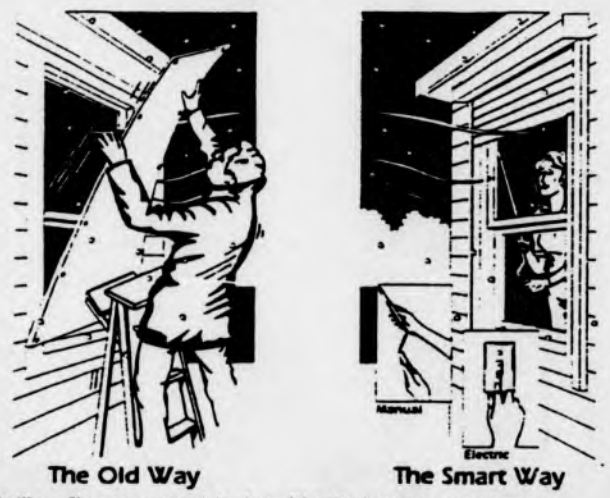
Whether to protect . . .
or weather the storm
Rolling Shutters



The Old Way — The Smart Way

Rolling Shutters provide the ultimate in year-round storm protection with European flair. Designed to withstand winds of up to 130 miles per hour, our tough rolling shutters shelter your home in hurricanes or Nor'easters. Whatever the weather, rolling shutters keep rain, snow, ice and flying debris off your windows, can greatly reduce your heating and cooling costs, and offer security to your home and family.

Early release day

Today, June 10 is an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools only. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Deer Hill School, 12:25 p.m. departure; Joseph Osgood School, 12:55 p.m. departure.

Lunch will be served in all schools.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at Osgood and Deer Hill to meet by grade level to order materials and supplies for next fall.

Childrens' council meets

The Coastline and South Shore Councils for Children will meet Tuesday, June 15 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the home of Marty Amdur, 5 Cape Cod Lane, Hingham.

There will be a pot luck supper followed by an opportunity for members, and anyone else who is interested in children's issues, to meet in small groups for discussion, and to hear an update on legislative matters.

The state budget will be voted soon by the Legislature, so now is the time to find out how the programs that are so important to our children will be affected in the coming year. A brief business meeting will follow. For directions please call Marty at 759-0691 or for more information please call Betty Tufankjian of Scituate at 545-0130.

All council meetings are free and the public is encouraged to attend.

The Councils are a volunteer group of people who live or work in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth who are interested in improving services for children and adolescents.

Third graders prepare

As this school year comes to a close, the third grade students in Cohasset are preparing for a big transition. They will be leaving Joseph Osgood and entering Deer Hill in the fall. In order to make this change as smooth as possible, some fourth and sixth graders along with Mr. Leonard, the school adjustment counselor, visited the third grade classes. The Osgood students had a chance to ask questions and get answers from the "experts" of Deer Hill.

A special thanks to Tim Grassi, Megan Cox, Kim Welby, Lauren Genovese, and Ryan Story whose visits to Joseph Osgood helped prepare the third graders for next year.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 93P1317E1

Estate of MARGARET LEONARD late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that LOUIS F. EATON, Jr., of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on July 7, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

SOAR dancers debut

The SOAR Dance Project Dance Troupe will perform a Works in Progress concert as part of Harborfest Friday, June 18 at 3:30 p.m. on the Cohasset Common.

Four Cohasset dancers, Andrew Walsh, Nick Bolster, Peter Kovach and Kyle Weber will perform their own choreography. Two pieces entitled "Flying Edge" and "Hoodlum" will be performed for the first time in Cohasset. The Troupe, directed by Sharon Weber, has performed at the South Shore Conservatory of Music and in the Hingham Schools. the performance is open to the public as part of Harborfest 93.

Fest bicycle revue

Join in on the fun and enter your decorated bicycle to ride in the Harborfest Parade Sunday, June 20! The Community Center will sponsor the bicycle revue as part of the Harborfest Parade. The parade begins at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon. All bikers should decorate their bikes at home and meet at Government Island at 2 p.m. to line up there for the parade.

This bicycle review is open to all ages! There is no fee, but we need to know the number of participants. Please pre-register by calling the center at 383-0088.

Gospel choir to perform

Saturday night, June 19, as part of the Cohasset Harborfest celebration, The Greene Aggregation, a Cambridge based Gospel Choir, will perform at the First Parish Unitarian Church on the Common in Cohasset. The group has performed for many audiences, including those at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston College, Wellesley College, Brandeis University, and the New England Conservatory, to name only a few.

The concert begins at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $7. A $2 discount is offered with the Harborfest Button. Buttons and tickets may be purchased at the First Parish Church office Monday-Thursday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Concert tickets will also be available at the door, but seating is limited.

Boat building race

Looking to spend some "quality" family time? The South Shore Art Center Art Festival and Cohasset Harborfest provide families with a host of fun and creative activities to share and enjoy. The three day festival, scheduled for June 18-20 on Cohasset Common and at the Art Center at 119 Ripley Road, includes a model boat building and race event for the whole family.

Sponsored by Ernst & Young of Boston, the boat building event takes place at the Creativity Tent on the Common Saturday, June 19 at 1 p.m. Families must pre-register by calling 383-9548 by June 18. After the boats are constructed, a parade will lead the boat builders to the Common Pond for races at 3:30 p.m.

Performing arts planned

A new feature at this year's South Shore Art Center Art Festival/Cohasset Harborfest is the Open Stage for the Performing Arts. Coordinated by Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church, 22 different music, dance and drama acts are booked to perform at the Main Stage on Cohasset's North Common, June 18-20.

The Cohasset High School junior chorus opens Friday's schedule at 2:30 p.m., followed by the senior chorus at 3 p.m. Both choral groups are directed by Brian Marks. The S.O.A.R. Dance Project Troup, under the direction of Sharon Webber, performs at 3:30 p.m., and the rock group "Fun in the Kitchen" is on stage at 4 p.m. Evlyn Montvila gives a poetry reading at 4:25 p.m.

Sally Wright directs the Cohasset Dramatic Club at 4:50 p.m. while Barbara Valovic presents "Sun Dance of India" at 5:40 p.m. The Art Festival Awards Ceremony takes place under the main tents from 6 to 7 p.m., followed by a gala benefit reception at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, from 7 to 9 p.m. Also at 7 p.m., Don Taylor directs the South Shore Men of Harmony on the Main Stage. Robert Barney gives an organ concert at St. Stephen's from 8 to 9 p.m.

Saturday performances kick off at 10 a.m. with Tiffany Zaniboni's Ballet & Jazz group from the Cohasset Community Center. At 10:30 a.m., Carolyn Curtis presents musical recitals, followed by Street Dancing, under the direction of Donna Joyce at 11 a.m. Mary Dorthery coordinates an aerobics demonstration at 11:30 a.m. and the Granite City Jazz Band takes the stage from noon until 2 p.m.

A roller blading demonstration is scheduled for Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. in the square. Then it's back to the Main Stage to bop to Frank Shooshan's Big Band from 3 to 5 p.m. St. Stephen's presents a carillon concert by Mary Kennedy at 5 p.m. and Dan Silvia's band, "Attomic Culture," rocks the Main Stage at 5:30 p.m.

St. Stephen's choirs, under the direction of Robert Barney, introduce Sunday's schedule at 3:15 p.m. The Cohasset Dramatic Club, led by Sally Wright, is back on stage at 3:45 p.m. Ruthann Sargent of the Cohasset Community Center offers gymnastics at 4:30 p.m., with mats on the common. A carillon concert by Mary Kennedy at St. Stephen's closes Art Festival/Harborfest at 5 p.m.

For a complete schedule of Art Festival/Harborfest activities, please call (617) 383-9548.

Strawberries and charity

Giving is at the heart of the Strawberry Festival sponsored by the Second Congregational Church during the Art Festival/Harborfest, June 18-20.

As Craig Muir, chairman states, "there is a tremendous amount of work that goes into this event — but we all pitch in because it is a bonding experience for us and because we freely give of our earnings to local charities, food pantries, and other national and international benevolences such as: Wellspring, Mary Martha Learning Center, DOVE, Rosie's Place, a Cohasset emergency fund, and many others."

At the Strawberry Festival, between the church and Cohasset Town Hall, the atmosphere is relaxed with tables, light music, and servers to refill your coffee or iced tea. The strawberry shortcake is truly old style — covered with mountains of strawberries and fresh whipped cream. The inside of the church will be transformed into a rural country emporium, offering a wide variety of strawberry-based foods and craft items for sale.

Art for everyone

Upholding its motto, "art is for everyone", the South Shore Art Center presents five art exhibitions, 24 art demonstrations, numerous paint-along opportunities, a Children's Creativity Tent, and an artisans market featuring over 100 craft booths in its 38th annual Art Festival, June 18-20. The three-day festival, which will be complemented by the Cohasset Harborfest, will be held on Cohasset Common and at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road.

Two juried exhibitions, one photography and one mixed art, will be housed under tents on the Common.

Art Festival/Harborfest hours are Friday, 1 to 8 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Harborfest activities include ongoing performances at the Main Stage over the three days; a pancake breakfast Saturday from 8 to 10 a.m. ($4), Blessing of the Fleet Sunday at 1:30 p.m. followed by a parade at 2:30 p.m. and the Chowder Tasting Contest at 3 p.m. ($4).

Selectmen leave door open for shared fire chief

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The possibility of sharing the position with Scituate will be looked into as Cohasset begins its search for a new fire chief for the second time in less than two years.

But if a local firefighter's outburst Monday is a harbinger of future debate, then plans to regionalize the chief's position are bound to make relations with the town's firefighters acrimonious.

"If the board feels it's a good idea to explore maybe sharing a chief with Scituate to oversee the Cohasset Fire Department, why didn't you explore this before you appointed the police chief?

"Why are the guns pointed at us?" Firefighter Linwood Davis charged. Selectmen recently promoted Brian W. Noonan from sergeant to police chief.

Ironically, Davis and Capt. Robert Silva came to the meeting to ask selectmen to participate in the fire department's Dunk Tank fund-raiser during Harborfest this weekend.

Citing personal reasons, Cohasset Fire Chief John R. Nadeau is resigning effective July 6 to accept the position as fire chief in Salem, New Hampshire.

(See page 14)

Classy crossings talks continue

Hwy. Supt. Harold Litchfield has had it with them, but selectmen are sticking by the town's classy crosswalk signs for the time being.

Litchfield notified the board by letter that as of July 1 the highway department will no longer have the time to set up and take down the pedestrian crossing signs due to road resurfacing and other projects.

He added that his department would be glad to help with installing permanent signs on posts or poles if the selectmen decided to go in that direction.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan wants the portable signs to stay.

"I think we should keep them and maybe reduce the number of signs," he said. "I've talked it over with the police chief who said they contributing to safety."

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the board ought to take advantage of Litchfield's offer of help to install permanent signs.

Cancer program shows beauty isn't only skin deep

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A local beautician, who has spent the better part of 20 years making people look good, is taking her talent one step further.

Starting in July, Olivia Peters will offer free make overs at Hernán's in Cohasset Village to cancer patients who are experiencing hair loss due to chemotherapy.

Peters is certified through the American Cancer Society's "Look Good... Feel Better" beauty program which is primarily offered in hospitals and clinics.

But thanks to the enthusiastic support of Hernán Rodriguez, the shop owner, Peters is able to the service outside of a clinical setting.

The shop is equipped with an newly decorated, private room where Peters will show cancer patients how to use makeup, hats, scarves, jewelry and even false eyelashes to help them look good in spite of their illness.

"I want people to look good, feel good and have fun in a safe place that's close to home", Peters says as she points out the newly painted walls and color-coordinated curtains which add the homey touch to the private room.

Peters, who is employed at Hernán's, plans to offer the service from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. by appointment the third Wednesday of every month.

The make over, which usually costs $30, is free. If the customers are interested in purchasing makeup products to take home, Peters will offer them at cost.

A California native, Peters came to what she describes as "a mission of love" in a round about way.

Formerly employed with an international beauty company, Peters travelled across throughout North America conducting makeup shows.

No-hitter leaves Mets shaking their heads

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

He's only 12 years old but Cohasset's Matt Lewis already has the mental toughness that could carry him a long way through his baseball career.

And he has already accomplished what many pitchers only dream of.

An All-Star pitcher for the Dodgers in the Majors division of the Cohasset Little League, Lewis threw the first no-hitter of the season and his career against the Mets on June 6.

Lewis admits he'd like to throw another someday, but knows there is only one way to do it: Go to the mound and concentrate on throwing strikes.

"It just happens," said Lewis, who is sporting a 5-0 record for the 15-0, first-place Dodgers. "You don't go into a game saying you're going to throw a no-hitter. If you do, you're just going to end up beating yourself."

The game marked the first time Lewis has gone past the fourth inning without giving up a hit. He has carried

Coast Guard rescue

Scituate Coast Guard officials rescued two men whose boat had stopped running from rocks off Cohasset at about 10:30 p.m. June 14, according to Coast Guard executive petty officer Andrew Fabbo.

Robert Di Bernardini, 7 Depot Ct., was driving his 25-foot pleasure craft when its engine died and it drifted onto rocks. He and his companion, Mark Froio, 321 Forest Ave., called out to a sailboat for help. The Coast Guard could not identify the sailboat.

The Search and Rescue alarm sounded loudly at the Coast Guard station, causing calls from neighbors in the surrounding homes, Fabbo said.

Two Coast Guard boats had engine trouble on the way to the rescue, Fabbo said. A 41-foot utility boat lost power from one engine, as did a 21-foot rigid hull inflatable boat, causing the boats to travel more slowly than normal.

The 21-foot boat reached the victims first, manned by BM2 Tom Reardon, SNSM James Hines and SN Dan Plumley. They rescued Di Bernardini and Froio from the rocks at about 12:30 a.m. and towed their boat to the dock outside the Chart House.

Doyon gets raise

Selectmen approved a 3-1/2 percent salary increase Monday for Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon. Doyon's current salary is $52,727. The board tabled action on the town accountant's annual increase.

Geology trip okay'ed

Sandy Beach is the site of a geology field trip for Abington Junior High students June 16. Selectmen approved the school's request to park at Sandy Beach for the two-hour field trip.

Money provided for maps

The mosquito control committee is authorized to spend up to $100 for topographical maps to depict mosquito breeding sites in town. Selectmen authorized the money Monday after listening to a presentation from mosquito committee representatives.

Festival licenses okay'ed

Food galore at the South Shore Art Festival/Harborfest includes iced tea, fried dough, sausages, yogurt, pretzels, lemonade, hamburgers, hot dogs, spare ribs, pancakes, chowder and more. Selectmen approved the necessary licenses Monday. The board also approved a license for the dunk tank which is being run by Cohasset firefighters.

Fred Suss

Name: Fred Suss.

Occupation: Assistant General Manager/Talent Buyer for the South Shore Music Circus and the Cape Cod Melody Tent.

Best day of your life: Day I left New York City and moved here.

Most embarrassing moment: I booked the Beach Boys band and only one of the original members — Mike Love — showed up. It came to be referred to as the "Beach Boy" show by critics.

Goal: To present affordable, quality entertainment to the public.

Favorite season: Autumn.

Worst vacation: Going to Acapulco when I didn't know it was the rainy season.

Pet Peeve: Buying tickets to a show and being so far from the stage that the performers look like insects — but that's not the case here. The furthest seat is just 50 feet from the stage.

Favorite holiday: Memorial Day, because that is when the box office opens.

Favorite book: "How to Run a Successful Facility," by Vincent Longo — my boss.

Favorite movie: "Key Largo."

Biggest worry: That there will be a lobster shortage and I won't be able to afford twin lobster night at the Red Lion Inn.

Favorite place: Cane Garden Bay, Tortola.

Favorite junk-food: Double-cheese burger with everything from Strawberry Parfait.

Person you would most like to meet: Frank Sinatra.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

HANDLING EMINENT DOMAIN

QUESTION: The local government is taking my property because they plan to run a highway through my living room. The offer they made seems a lot less than the property is worth. What should I do?

ANSWER: Even though your property may be taken for public use, you must be compensated at "fair market value." If the initial offer is unacceptable, discuss the facts with your attorney. If he thinks your position is fair, he'll arrange for one or more real estate appraisers to appraise the property. With their "fair market" evaluation, your attorney can represent you better at a board hearing or, if necessary, in court action.

Buttonwood can write book on customer satisfaction

By Lorraine Palmer
Mariner correspondent

Looking for the perfect gift for your little one to give at the big birthday party or a magical masquerade costume complete with a tiara or just a pail and shovel set for building sandcastles by the shore?

Buttonwood Books & Toys is not only a place where children's sandcastle dreams come true, adults can also find satisfying treasures as they bask in the sunshine of the friendly atmosphere that welcomes you the moment you walk in the door.

There is something for everyone at Buttonwood. From all kinds of books, toys and speciality cards, if you are a shopper with a taste for quality and a need for quantity in selection, Buttonwood is right in sync with your sense of style.

"Right from the start we wanted people to have a feeling that if they were looking for a book, this would be the place they would be likely to find it," says proprietor Betsey Detwiler. "We spend a lot of time tailoring our inventory to the needs of the customers we serve."

Buttonwood Books opened in Oct. 1989. The toy department being added two years later with the acquisition of more space. Detwiler's daughter-in-law, Katherine Detwiler is responsible for that part of the store now. A mother of two young children, she works three days a week in the store and she also works out of her home.

"She has a very good sense of toy buying," says Detwiler of her daughter-in-law whom she describes as a "real peach."

"In the size that we have for the toy department, we can't carry everything under the sun, so we don't try to be Child World or a KayBee Toys. We have a very special cliental who wants quality toys.

"We do a great birthday party business," Detwiler adds.

A lot of the time the customers buy the present on the way to the party.

"They get the card, the gift, have it gift wrapped, and they're on their way," she notes.

Despite the recession that forced other stores to relocate out of Cushing Plaza or to go out of business, Buttonwood Books & Toys has grown steadily and continues to grow.

Betsey Detwiler, proprietor of Buttonwood Books & Toys, says pleasing the customer is the key to Buttonwood's success story.

In addition to the wide inventory, Detwiler ascribes the store's success to her staff.

"Our mission statement says that everybody that comes in here should leave the store not only feeling good about us but good about themselves. They should feel that they were a good customer too, and we can make them feel that way," she says.

The satisfaction of owning a bookstore has far surpassed Detwiler's expectations.

"Everybody that come in is really on a mission," she says.

The mission can be finding a special gift that they can feel good about or seeking information to satisfy a personal need, whether it be learning how to cook or dealing with alcoholism.

"When you can find the book that someone enjoys or just absolutely satisfies that need that's really perfect for why they've come, then that's a great feeling."

Summer solstice celebration at World's End

If you've never been to World's End Reservation in Hingham, here is your chance to visit this magnificent property under the most charming of circumstances.

The World's End Committee has announced that its 10th annual Summer Solstice Celebration will be held Monday evening June 21, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. So pack a picnic supper, load the entire family into the car and join many of your friends and neighbors atop Planters Hill for a most entertaining evening.

Tractor-drawn hayrides will be offered from 6 to 8 p.m. and short orientation walks will be led beginning at 6:15 and 6:45 p.m. As always, soft drinks and popcorn will be available and cookies will be provided for dessert.

One of the highlights of the evening will be a brief nautical concert and sing-along led by the Unicorn Singers, beginning at 7:15 p.m. Sea songs, rounds and chanteys from the rich tradition of our country's seafaring days will be led by Margo Euler (Director) on accordion and Rich Jensen (playing banjo and harmonica), and the audience will be encouraged to join in on the refrains of such favorites as "Blow ye winds," "A-roving, a-roving," and "The drunken sailor."

Another high point will be a short program by local naturalist Phil Swanson during which he will explain just what the "Summer Solstice" is and how the Earth and sun are aligned to create the longest day of the year.

An admission fee of $3 for members of The Trustees of Reservations and $5 for non-members will be charged to cover expenses. Children 16 years and under will be admitted free.

World's End, a peninsula of two glacial drumlins joined by a narrow beach of rough sand, divides Hingham Bay and the historic Weir River. For over a century, this 251-acre property has been admired for its dramatic topography and magnificent landscaping.

Its winding, tree-lined roadways were designed by famed landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted in 1890 as part of a proposal to develop World's End as a "planned community" of more than 150 homes. Thankfully, the proposal never came to pass. The land was farmed and finally maintained by its owners as a private park.

In 1967, World's End was threatened by development. In an extraordinary effort, some $450,000 was raised from public subscription, primarily in Hingham and Cohasset and elsewhere on the South Shore, enabling The Trustees of Reservation to purchase the property and to preserve it in perpetuity. Originally known as "Cushing's Neck," named for the family who once owned large tracts of land there, World's End was owned until 1967 by descendants of John R. Brewer who commissioned Olmsted, designer of New York's Central Park and Franklin Park in Boston, to draw plans for the original development.

Today, World's End with its quiet walks and ocean views, offers visitors opportunities for a wide range of activities such as jogging, cross-country skiing, nature study and photography.

To reach World's End, follow Summer Street from the rotary at Hingham Harbor 1/4 mile to the first set of traffic lights and turn left onto Martin's Lane. Follow Martin's Lane 1/4 mile to its end where the entrance to World's End is located.

For more information about the Summer Solstice Celebration, please call Mary Campbell at The Trustees' Southeast Regional office. Tel: 821-2977.

Book store is a success story . . .

Detwiler says.

Another extra satisfaction Detwiler did not anticipate was the staff Buttonwood attracted.

"The women who work here are a lot of fun. They like working here and with each other," she says.

"When we had our second Christmas and all our college kids came back, we were all so happy to see each other, and I thought 'Wow, this is the staff I created!' "

The Buttonwood staff is rich in many talents.

"Some people are really good at detail work and they like to do that, others are really good at seeing the big picture and some are terrific at doing the window displays. They're so creative," Detwiler remarks.

Buttonwood also holds workshops for both adults and children. For adults, instructors are brought in to teach crafts like weaving and making May baskets. For children, an Easter egg workshop was held and also a costume party.

The company that sells the costumes to the store held a costume party for the children.

"They brought big trunks full of clothes and the kids just tried them all on," Detwiler recalls.

Buttonwood also rents out party boxes with enough costumes for ten girls and ten boys. Train sets are also available for schools for temporary periods.

Formerly a human resource teacher at South Elementary in Hingham, Detwiler became frustrated by the cuts Proposition 2 1/2 forced on the school system.

Detwiler's dream began about seven years before Buttonwood Books opened.

Originally, the site of the bookstore was to be in Norwell Village. A bank foreclosure postponed her plans and she went back to teaching, this time at Thayer Academy in Braintree, until the site became available again. She ultimately rejected that location because it did not have adequate space for shipping and receiving.

Cohasset was chosen because there was no other bookstore in town.

The store space, which had previously housed Casual Male, had been empty for over a year.

"I didn't want one of those long, skinny locations; they call them railroad stores. I didn't want anything with that shape, because it would be hard to make it seem homey," she recalls.

Buttonwood's library bays, reading nooks and wooden shelves, designed and built by her son, captures the homey feeling she hoped to create. It is a place where everyone, whether they are young or just young at heart can come, enjoy, and feel welcome.

GAIL PETERSEN BELL, CRB, HOME CENTER REAL ESTATE

Gail Petersen Bell, CRB, President of Home Center Real Estate was recently awarded The President's Award. This award is given by the President of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors to a member who has distinguished themselves above all other members in their volunteer efforts. Ms. Bell and Ms. Donna Wood together combined their leadership talents to organize the most successful fundraising event that the Plymouth Board has ever run, The Monopoly Tournament whose proceeds benefited the South Shore's Homeless. In addition Ms. Bell is spearheading the Coalition to Promote the South Shore, is on the Board of Directors of the Plymouth Board of Realtors, the Strategic Planning Committee of the Board, the Professional Standards Committee, and has just recently retired as the Chairperson of the Public Relations Committee.

Said Bell, "This past year has been a whirlwind of activity — between the outstanding success of Conservatory Park, our tremendous increase in market share, the success of our cable TV show, and my Board activities — but it has been a tremendously rewarding one. I thank Board President, Carol Pagliccia for her lovely acknowledgment."

Cancer program shows beauty isn't skin deep

Peters recalls how she met her husband, Jeff. She needed models for a show at a hotel in San Juan and was able to convince two female tourists from Massachusetts to participate. After a few minutes with Peters, one of the women said she'd make a super daughter-in-law.

The woman introduced Peters to her son and they were married 10 months later. The couple eventually made their way to Massachusetts and the South Shore.

Now in addition to four kids, Peters has four chickens, a rabbit, a cat and dog at her Cohasset home.

Although over the years she's held a few jobs away from the beauty business, it's never been far from her heart.

Even as a secretary at Brigham & Women's hospital, Peters provided dialysis patients with make overs and new hairstyles to lift their spirits.

And after losing her sister to cancer recently, Peters speaks from her own heart when she talks about how serious illness can affect a family.

"If I can help someone feel better that'll make my day," she says.

Please call Hernán's salon at 383-1490 for more information about Peters' program.

Classy crossings talk continues

Chamber of Commerce President Bob Martin offered to adopt one of the village signs and be responsible to put it out and take it in.

Selectmen decided that Sullivan and Martin could work together to see if they can get someone to adopt each sign.

The two-piece signs are held together with pins which break when a car hits the sign.

Cohasset voters appropriated $1,500 at the special town meeting last fall to repaint the crosswalks and buy the signs. There was considerable discussion at that time about obtaining signs that are more aesthetically pleasing than the pedestrian crossing barrels used in Hingham Square.

Since day one, the signs have been a big headache for the highway department. Litchfield says it takes about 15 minutes in the morning and 15 minutes in the afternoon to drop off and pick up the signs. He says in most locations the highway department could install pressure-treated posts and mount permanent signs like the ones at Depot Court and the library.

around town

❑ Paul and Joan Lawrence of Golden, Colorado, will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary June 29!

Paul, son of Dutchie and Adelle Lawrence, and Joan, daughter of Bruce and Mary Edmonds, will spend their anniversary doing mountain biking in the Amish countryside of Pennsylvania. After five to six days of biking, they will travel to our town for several days. Biking Pennsylvania should be a big change for Joan and Paul as all of their biking is normally done above 8,000 feet above sea level!

Be sure to ask them all about it when they are here for their visit!

❑ Had a nice chat with Marjorie and Fred Howe last week and they are flying high with their good news! They became great-grandparents June 2. Give a welcome to Eleanor, who came into the world weighing 6 pounds, and a real beauty we hear!

Donald Burton Palmer Jr. and wife, Eleanor, of Darien, Connecticut, are the thrilled parents. We hope they all come for a visit real soon!

❑ News from Skidmore College this week regarding two of Cohasset's own! During its commencement May 15, Kathleen Polley Lord of 173 Border St., received her BA in Biology-Chemistry, and Stuart William Weier of 95 South Main Street received his BA in Business-Economics. Here's to a grand life in the business world.

❑ Another graduation took place May 15, this one at Emmanuel College in Boston. Denise Louise Murphy received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in art therapy!

While at Emmanuel, Denise was involved in many activities, such as the art association and the psychology club. Denise is the daughter of William and Marjorie Murphy, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Louise Murphy of Worcester. Denise has accepted a position as the director of activities at the Jordan Rehabilitative and Nursing Center at the New England Baptist and Deaconess Hospitals, and we wish her the best!

❑ Here's hoping that you can help — it is really needed! Forty-two AFS students are looking for host families for six days in July. They have been in the States for a year and have left their families to return home. This will be an orientation period to help them learn how to be "homeward bound." They will arrive July 2 at 6 p.m. and will be leaving July 7 in the evening. There are lots of activities planned for them during their stay. They really just need nice people and comfortable beds! And you will learn as much from them as they do from you!

If you can help, call Lizzie Kuhn at 383-0580.

❑ Hats off to William Francis Murphy who graduated from Xaverian Brothers High School May 23!

❑ George Haley, trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, is thrilled to announce that the clock on the facade of the library is now in operation, thanks to the efforts of Noel Ripley. While out of commission it was missed. Be sure to thank Noel when you see him!

❑ We grandparents are sure proud of our grandchildren and their accomplishments! Nancy Snowdale is one. Her grandson, Kevin M. Snowdale, graduated from B.C. High with honors recently and will enter Colgate University in the fall.

Good luck in your college career, Kevin, and keep up your good work!

Hat's off to Cohasset's Robin L. DeVito, daughter of Allen and Bonnie DeVito, on her recent graduation from Thayer Academy!

❑ As most of you know, Noel Edwards lost his wife, Ethel, recently. Noel is presently at the Norwell Knoll and would love to have his friends pop in for a visit. Noel has many Cohasset friends. Here's hoping they don't all show up at once!

❑ Krista Kuhn, daughter of Jim and Lizzie Kuhn, recently graduated from Boston University's College of Communication. Krista received a Bachelor of Science in Communication and Advertising and is currently doing an internship at a Boston advertising agency.

Everyone who knows Krista knows that she will do well. We wish you the best!

❑ Give a real Cohasset welcome to James Vincent McKelvey, born May 23 at 3 a.m. at South Shore Hospital. James weighed in at a hefty 7 lbs. 15 ozs., and is the son of Mary and James McKelvey. James will sure get lots of love from his grandparents too. Edward and Judy McHugh live in Scituate and Jean and Vincent McKelvey live in Granby, Conn. Congrats!!

❑ Hats off to Robin DeVito, daughter of Allen and Bonnie DeVito, who recently graduated from Thayer Academy. Robin will be attending Navy Boost in San Diego, Calif. in the fall, and they are lucky to have her!

While at Thayer she was on the honor roll, the yearbook staff, the drama club, a member of SADD, on the soccer and track teams, and a member of Thayer Academy Peer Support Group! WOW! Good luck in California, Robin.

❑ Finally, don't forget the Art Festival-Harborfest Celebration this weekend. There is something for everyone! Art - Vendors - Programs for Children - a great Musical Program - Events on Stage - Pancake breakfast - Blessing of The Fleet - Parade - Chowder Festival and a whole lot of Good Fellowship. A banner weekend indeed!! See you there.

❑ That's the news for this week. What is new at your house? Call and let me know!

obituaries

Nicholas Christodoulou

Nicholas Christodoulou, 31 of Cohasset, an investment broker for Tucker Anthony Investors for three years, died June 7 in Hanover.

He was born in New Jersey and lived in Cohasset four years.

Mr. Christodoulou attended the University of Oklahoma and California State University.

He leaves his wife, Hilary (Aborn) Christodoulou; his parents, Louis and Maryann (Sisolak) Christodoulou of California; a brother Peter Christodoulou of Florida; three sisters, Mary Lou Bartoloni of Hanover and Karen Deschene and Stacy Estep, both of Florida; his grandmother, Nicoleta Christodoulou; and eight nephews and nieces.

A funeral service was conducted in Panagia Greek Orthodox Church by the Rev. John Meheras, pastor. Burial was in High Street Cemetery.

The Pyne-Keohane Funeral Home, 21 Emerald St., Hingham, handled the arrangements.

Mary Salvaggi

Mary E. (Scannell) Salvaggi, 76, of Cohasset, a waitress as Kimball's and Hugo's Lighthouse, Cohasset, for 20 years, and a thoroughbred race horse owner, died June 8 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, after a long illness.

She and her late husband, Philip Salvaggi, raced thoroughbreds at the Brockton Fair, Marshfield Fair and Northampton County Fair, at Great Barrington, Berkshire Downs and Suffolk Downs, and at Florida Downs in the Tampa Bay area. The last horse they owned was Formal Slippers.

Mrs. Salvaggi worked at the Cohasset restaurants from 1950 to 1970, and was manager of the snack bar at Woolworth's in Cohasset.

Mrs. Salvaggi leaves a son, Robert Salvaggi of Kingston; three daughters, Barbara Stover and Donna Herbert, both of Cohasset, and Joanne Jackman of Waterboro, Maine; two brothers, Robert Scannell and William Scannell, both of Florida; and 13 grandchildren.

She was born in Boston and lived in Cohasset 41 years.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 11 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association, 673 Main St., Norwell 02061.

Grace F. Russell

Grace F. (Frampton) Russell, 88, of Cohasset, a member of the Cohasset Garden Club, died June 13 in Scituate Ocean Manor after a long illness.

Mrs. Russell was born in Boston and attended Brookline schools.

Wife of the late William G. Russell, she leaves a son, William G. Russell Jr. of Cabot, Vt.; a daughter, Grace R. Tuckerman of Cohasset, seven grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and two nieces.

Arrangements for a private service later in Oak Grove Cemetery, Plymouth, were made by the Richard Davis Funeral Home, Plymouth.

Donations may be made to the memorial fund of Cohasset Garden Club, Mrs. Samuel Pease, 3 Sankey Road, Cohasset 02025.

Helen Tower

Helen (Gould) tower, 97, a resident of Cohasset for over 60 years, died June 11 in Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

Mrs. Tower was born in Kingston, R.I. and attended school in Rhode Island.

She was a member of the Sixty Plus Club and the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset and a former member of the Cohasset Woman's Club.

Wife of the late Sargent F. Tower, Mrs. Tower leaves four sons, Sargent N. Tower of Woodbury, Conn., Fred B. Tower of Sebestian, Fla., John Tower of Venice, Fla. and Eugene Tower of Scituate; two daughters, Jane T. Brown of Ocoee, Fla., and Helen T. Luscombe of Cohasset, 15 grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren. She was the mother also of the late David B. Tower and Dorothy T. Calderwood.

Arrangements for the private funeral service and burial in Central Cemetery were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 106 South Main St., Cohasset 02025.

editorial

Hail to the chief

We wish Fire Chief John R. Nadeau all the best with his new position in Salem, New Hampshire.

Selectmen were unanimous in their praise for the fine job that the has done during his short time here in Cohasset.

Ironically when the board interviewed Mr. Nadeau back in December 1991 he talked of the importance of getting staff involved in the decision making process.

As a consensus builder, the chief was able to tackle some sticky problems in the Cohasset Fire Department like rebuilding the call-firefighting division.

So maybe the time has come to build on what the chief started and bring some staff to the table to discuss the proposal of a joint fire chief between Cohasset and Scituate.

No one argues that selectmen are the appointing authority for position of fire chief and it is their ultimate decision who will fill the post.

But we agree with Chamber of Commerce president Robert Martin when he suggested the board involve firefighters on a committee to explore the possibility of a shared position.

Shutting the firefighters out of the exploration process might set moral back 18 months and undue some of the fine work that Mr. Nadeau was able to accomplish.

More on those signs

Pedestrian safety is a primary concern in Cohasset.

The new signs are not only pleasant to look at but go along way in educating drivers about the state law which requires them to stop for pedestrians in crosswalks.

Yet whether or not the signs — which have undergone some vehicular abuse in addition to the fact they have to be taken out and in each day — survive the summer remains to be seen.

But in any event, we think selectmen ought to take Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield up on his offer to install permanent signs on pressure treated posts or poles at the crosswalks.

The fact is that even when all the signs are in good repair they are not out there all the time. The highway department has been putting them out about 7 a.m. and taking them in about 3 p.m. And the signs aren't out at all on the weekends.

So while asking folk in town to "adopt a sign" isn't a bad idea, certainly the crosswalks could also handle a permanent sign as a backup when the portable ones aren't out or are out of commission.

American Legion thanks CFD

letters

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to the Cohasset Fire Dept.)

To Cohasset Fire Department:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Cohasset Fire Department for your participation, again this year, in the Memorial Day Parade. During the past number of years you have provided the Color Guard for our annual parade and I would like to extend our most sincere gratitude from the Son's of the American Legion.

Looking forward to next year.

Thomas W. Wigmore, Commander (state)
Son's of the American Legion Post #118

Blood donors answered call

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Red Cross blood drive delivered 90 pints of life-giving blood to regional hospitals Tuesday, June 1. The drive was held on the day after Memorial Day which added to the challenge. Many would-be donors were out of town or just getting back on schedule from the holiday weekend. The many volunteers and donors answered the call and ensured a safe and reliable blood supply for the region.

The Red Cross thanks everyone who contributed to this successful blood drive. Special thanks are extended to Reverend Ed Atkinson and the Unitarian Church for continuing to host the blood drive in the First Parish House.

Jack Cibelli
Chairman, Cohasset Red Cross

AFS brings the world to Cohasset

Would you like the chance to bring another part of the world into your home for a few days? July 2, a group of about 40 AFS high school exchange students from abroad will stop in Cohasset before they return to their respective homelands after a year in the U.S. These students are among 3,000 students from around the world who have lived with American host families in communities across the country.

In a few weeks they will say goodbye to their host families and head here to become a part of our community for 4-5 days before returning home. The Cohasset AFS Chapter is looking for families who would like the opportunity to participate in this year's "Bus Stop" by hosting an AFS student from the evening of July 2 to approximately July 7.

All the AFS students living in the U.S. are divided into 80 groups and travel cross-country by bus to settle in various communities like Cohasset before departing for their international flights home. This program allows them to prepare for their return to their homelands. The primary reason for the Bus Stop is to wean the students from their host families, with whom they've spent the past year; the second reason is to give them the opportunity to experience another region and culture of the U.S.

AFS established the Bus Stop portion of the exchange experience after studies showed that the students suffered more culture shock in returning to their native lands than they did upon arrival in the U.S. This program prepares them for the return home by having them share their experiences and feelings with other students who have been here for the year.

The students come from many and varied countries, including those in Scandinavia, nine Latin American countries, Thailand, New Zealand, Egypt, Japan, the Soviet Republics, and at least seven European countries. During their stay they will participate in a variety of scheduled activities such as a swim party, trip to Boston, picnic, and more.

Host families are still needed for many of these students, as only about a dozen have been placed at this time. Families have the opportunity to teach something about Cohasset, learn about diverse cultures, and develop livelong friendships with these students. This is an excellent way to experience what hosting is all about, without making a year-long commitment, and gives families a way to get involved with AFS for the first time and learn about all it has to offer.

Formerly known as the American Field Service, AFS Intercultural Programs is an international, not-for-profit organization that promotes intercultural understanding through worldwide exchange programs for students, teachers and adults, as families. If you are interested in the opportunity to host a student from the Bus Stop or would like to learn about other AFS activities, please call Lizzie Kuhn at 383-0580. By volunteering to host a student you'll help to bring the world closer together, one person at a time.

political notes

Democratic caucus set

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, June 19, at 9:30 a.m. to elect delegates to the 1993 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Cohasset will be electing four delegates and four alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention.

Chartis Langmaid, chairperson of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, which is accessible to handicapped persons. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in the town, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the town as of April 15, 1993. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present, voting, and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas. Slatemaking is allowed but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston, MA 02108 no later than June 21, 1993.

The area around Town Hall and the Cohasset Common will be busy Saturday, June 19, with the Arts Festival getting under way at 10 a.m. The caucus must begin promptly at 9:30 a.m., and no one can be admitted to the hall after that time. In the past, a caucus has taken no more than 90 minutes, usually less than one hour.

Passage of bottle bill urged

(The following is a press release from MASSPIRG which is spearheading a campaign to reduce, reuse and recycle.)

MASSPIRG, Sen. Lois Pines (Newton), and Rep. Warren Tolman (Watertown) have called for the passage of legislation to expand the Bottle Bill to cover juice, wine coolers, mixed spirit drinks, wine, alcohol, iced tea and bottled water. MASSPIRG also recently announced the kick-off of a statewide, grassroots campaign in support of the proposal.

"The Bottle Bill is a popular and successful program which preserves natural resources, reduces litter and pollution, and increases recycling without stretching local budgets. We should expand on our success by expanding the Bottle Bill," said Sen. Lois Pines, the original sponsor of the Bottle Bill in the 1970s.

"Each year, Americans buy over 100 billion cans and bottles. Like the rest of our garbage, most are either burned in polluting incinerators or buried in dangerous landfills. But thanks to the Bottle Bill, Massachusetts recycles more beer and soda containers than any other consumer package. It's now time to do more," said Amy Perry, Solid Waste Program Director for MASSPIRG.

Rep. Tolman added, "Our neighbors in Maine, Vermont, and New York already put deposits on more containers through their Bottle Bills than we do, providing a successful example for us to follow. Passage of this legislation will ensure that Massachusetts moves forward on recycling."

Perry stated that MASSPIRG citizen outreach staff will contact thousands of people statewide over the next month, urging them to lobby their state Senators about these bills in order to win majority support in the Senate. Senators who have already announced their support include: Pines, Matthew Amorello (Grafton), Michael Barrett (Cambridge), Lucile Hicks (Wayland), Cheryl Jacques (Needham), Charles Shannon (Winchester), and Richard Tisei (Wakefield).

Legislation could destroy New England's economy

(Editor's note: the following was submitted by the Marshfield Coastal Advisory Committee)

Last year at this time, two bills, HR1236 and S1650, died on the floors of the House and Senate as a direct result of grass roots opposition from people in Marshfield and Scituate and towns like them throughout the country. Congratulations!

However, environmental interests, such as Audubon and the Sierra Club, as well as state Coastal Zone Management agencies, with their vested interest in the National Flood Insurance Fund, have reincarnated these bills as House Bill HR62, cosponsored by Congressman Barney Frank.

The bill seeks to redirect the purpose of the National Flood Insurance Program from a flood-plain resident-funded disaster-relief program to a vehicle of political correctness. The bill would require a 25 million dollar study of the east and west coasts, as well as the coasts of the Great Lakes. The study would establish erosion zones and define 30- and 60-year setbacks. Development and improvement of properties seaward of the 60-year-setback line would either be eliminated or severely curtailed.

Any property seaward of the 60-year-setback line could eventually have to relocate, be demolished, or face having their flood insurance dropped. Another aspect of the bill would force lending institutions to require flood insurance as part of the requirements of getting and keeping a mortgage. The result for property owners seaward of the 60-year setback would be that their property could not be sold.

The Coastal Advisory Committee of Marshfield sees this bill as a vehicle of negative economic consequence. Marshfield, as well as any other seacoast community whose sole tax base is its real estate, would face a period of declining tax base that could span 60 years. As homes on the waterfront or within walking distance of the beach are removed from the tax role by demolition or their market value plummets, inland property owners would see their taxes sky-rocket to take up the slack.

Commercial properties may not be eligible for flood insurance. Waterfront resort values would plummet, and Cape Cod's real estate and tourist industries would be devastated.

The Federal Insurance Administration is opposed to sections of the National Flood Insurance Reform Bill. Frank Reilly, Deputy Administrator of the Federal Insurance Program, has criticized the legislative attempts to restrict the purchase of flood insurance in the name of pursuing environmental goals.

Taxpayers should insist that the National Flood Insurance Program retain its integrity as virtually the only federal program to have been self-sufficient and not requiring any taxpayer funds since 1985.

To learn how this bill will impact you, your property value and the New England economy, the Coastal Advisory Committee of Marshfield will guide you through the legislative maze! Attend the informational meeting at St. Ann's by the Sea Parish Hall, Route 139 (591 Ocean Street), Marshfield, Sunday, June 27, from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Family-owned Log and Line restaurant rolling along

Cohasset's family-owned Log and Line restaurant has been around a long time. June 16, this small coffee shop, which has been in the business of serving up four-egg omelets to locals after Sunday church services, celebrates its 21st anniversary.

Over all these years, owners Panos and Judith Kulturides have kept the heart of their establishment in the right place. Whether it's the smell of inch-thick home fries, fresh baked muffins and Winslow's coffee, or the sight of families circled around hot cakes and French toast, good home-cooking and family values abound.

It is also not unusual to see Sunday papers spread across the sun-drenched tables in the greenhouse portion of the restaurant, where patrons have the time to read a section and complete crossword puzzles.

Nobody gets rushed in or out and anyone who wants a table seems to get one. For a small place like this, it's a miracle, but it happens!

The restaurant sits on the original site of the town's railroad station and depot which closed in the early 1950s, when the train stopped coming through Cohasset. And though the restaurant has had many incarnations, including an ice cream counter which used to sit smack in the middle of the restaurant, owner Panos Kulturides hasn't forgotten town history. An old electric train suspended from the ceiling chugs along, the Log and Line's signature, providing family entertainment for all.

Now, after 21 years of being open for breakfast and lunch, the Kulturides are expanding their own traditions. Starting June 16, they are opening their restaurant for dinner.

They are also handing over the executive chef's hat to their son, Peter, who is in the culinary arts program at Newbury College and a former saucier at Boston

The Log & Line as it looks today. To the left, that's the executive chef Peter Kulturides. During the Arts Festival/Harborfest this weekend, the Log & Line is firing up a huge barbecue pit to cook ribs and other Southwestern favorites.

University. This is good news for everyone.

The restaurant will offer a new express lunch of gourmet sandwiches and homemade soups, as well as their past menu.

Dinner will include the lunch menu and many new grilled and broiled dishes, stir fries and barbecue. In fact, Peter already has a secret sauce recipe that he will not divulge! Locals can get a sneak preview Friday evening, June 17, when the Kulturides will fire up a large grill and barbecue pit outside the restaurant, in connection with their dinner grand-opening and the 38th South Shore Art Festival weekend on Cohasset Common, June 18-20.

Happy anniversary Log and Line. Here's to tradition and new ventures. Restaurant hours are Monday, 6:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., breakfast and lunch only; and Tuesday through Sunday, 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., breakfast, lunch and dinner.

Barbershoppers wanted

Lots of old songs bring back memories of the good old days and the fun that people used to have while singing. Barbershoppers are still enjoying that fun.

"We don't cut much hair or hang around the barbershop anymore," said Bud Moffatt, president of the South Shore Men of Harmony, "but we do sing that old-time style of four-part harmony.

"We're having an open house at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 17, at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., Hingham. Interested men should come, and bring a friend, or their wife or sweetheart, since we love to have an audience to entertain. Light refreshments will be served. Anyone who wants information, or needs transportation, should call me at (617)749-6922 any evening," George O'Brien said.

Cohasset festivals are celebrating the arts

Traditionally quiet, seaside Cohasset will be transformed this weekend into festivals galore, beginning Friday, June 18, as the South Shore Art Center's 38th annual festival opens on Cohasset Common.

The art show, the oldest continuing festival in the country, will combine with the third annual Cohasset harborfest and the second annual strawberry festival, offering something pleasing to the senses.

The festival will open from 1 to 8 p.m. Friday and continue from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Artists schedule to work in their respective media are Kay Shaw, JoAnne Chittick, Page Railsback and Ann Lane, watercolor, and Susan Kilmartin, in oil sketch, fro 2 to 4 p.m. Friday.

From noon to 2 p.m. Saturday Donna Basile will work in pencil, while Julie Blanchard and Katherine Smit, will demonstrate watercolor, and George Dalton and Judy Rossman, clay, and Ros Farbush, acrylics. From 3 to 5 p.m. Mandy Avery will demonstrate printmaking; Nancy Connolly, puppet-making; Helen Gallup, watercolor; Elizabeth Robinson, Oriental brush;, and Paula Villanova, acrylic.

Sunday's demonstrations from 1 to 3 p.m. will include Julie Blanchard, Mary LoPiccolo and Rita Kirk, working in watercolor; Betty Burke, acrylic; Syma, clay, and Myrna Kustin, computer paint programs and animation.

Visitors who bring along their own art supplies may work alongside the artists. A wet paint exhibit of all art created during the weekend will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday at the art center, 119 Ripley Road.

In addition, more than 100 artisans will set up booths around Cohasset Common and demonstrate their crafts and sell their handmade wares — from weather vanes, wall hangings, needlepoint and woven bedspreads to jewelry, clothing, dolls, children's books, pottery and wooden figurines — during the three-day festival.

For youngsters, an activity tent will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Among the projects will be a family model boat-building contest, sponsored by Ernst & Young, at 1 p.m., Saturday, but pre-registration is required by calling 383-9548 by Friday.

After the boats are built, a parade will lead the young boat builders to the Common Pond for races at 3:30 p.m.

New this year will be a young artists' exhibition of work created by artists between four and 18. Their work will be displayed in a special tent in front of the art center.

PERFORMING ARTS

Another new feature will be the Open Stage for the Performing Arts, coordinated by Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church.

Twenty-two different music, dance and drama acts will perform on the main stage at the North Common.

The Cohasset High School junior chorus will sing at 2:30 p.m. Friday, followed by the senior chorus at 3 p.m., both of which are directed by Brian Marks.

The S.O.A.R. Dance Project Troupe, directed by Sharon Webber, will follow, with "Fun in the Kitchen," a local rock group, will go on stage at 4 p.m.

Evlyn Montvila will read poetry at 4:25 p.m., and Sally Wright will direct an act by the Cohasset Dramatic Club at 4:50 p.m. Barbara Valovic will present "Sun Dance of India" at 5:40 p.m.

The awards ceremony or the juried art festival will take place under the tents at 6 p.m., followed by a gala champagne benefit reception from 7 to 9 p.m. at the art center. Tickets are $15 each, and proceeds will benefit the center's educational programs.

In the center's Dillon Gallery, members' art will be displayed, and in the Bancroft Gallery, the President's Choice exhibition, "Bits & Pieces: Artists Using Computers," will be featured.

Curated by Dorothy Krause of Marshfield, the show includes Judi Montcrief of Norwell, Jennifer Hall of Boston, Meg Hickey and Myrna Kustin, both of Cambridge, Dianne Roman of Somerville and Jim Weiner of Brookline.

Also at 7 the South Shore Men of Harmony, the award-winning barbershoppers, will entertain on the main stage. At 8 p.m., Robert Barney will give an organ concert at St. Stephen's Church.

Saturday performances begin at 10 a.m. with Tiffany Zaniboni's Ballet and Jazz group from the Cohasset Community Center. At 10:30, Carolyn Curtis will present musical recitals,followed by Street Dancing, directed by Donna Joyce at 11.

At 11:30, an aerobics demonstration, coordinated by Mary Dorthery, will be on stage, followed by the Granite City Jazz Band from noon to 2 p.m.

From 2 to 3 p.m., rollerblading will be demonstrated in the square, then it's back to the main stage to bop to Frank Shooshan's Big Band from 3 to 5 p.m.

A carillon concert by Mary Kennedy will begin at 5 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, and at 5:30 p.m., Dan Silvia's band, Attomic Culture, will rock.

Sunday's entertainment is a bit more subdued, with St. Stephen's choirs, under the direction of Robert Barney, performing at 3:15 p.m. The Cohasset Dramatic Club will return to the stage at 3:45 p.m., and Ruthann Sargent of the community center will present a gymnastics exhibition with mats on the common at 4:30 p.m.

Mary Kennedy will give another carillon concert at 5 p.m., at the close of the festival.

PLEASING TO THE PALATE

For hungry visitors, a pancake breakfast will be served from 8 to 10 a.m. Saturday. Tickets are $4 each.

And a food court will feature sausages, sandwiches, hamburgers and hot dogs, Chinese food, tropical yogurt, fried dough, iced tea, pretzels, lemonade and desserts.

But the tastiest of all will be the strawberry shortcakes whipped up by members of the Second Congregational Church. They will be served Saturday and Sunday beneath a pavilion between the church and the Cohasset town hall.

For further details and a complete schedule of events, call the art center at 383-9548.

Selectmen leave door open for shared fire chief

Scituate's town administrator Richard Agnew informally approached Cohasset about 18 months ago during the town's search for a chief to replace Daniel Brock, who's contract was not renewed. Brock served as chief for about six years.

Reached by telephone Tuesday, Agnew said the door is still open to possibly combining the fire chief's position between the two towns.

"We are willing to talk to them about it," he said.

Agnew, who is the appointing authority in Scituate for the position of fire chief, said he informally broached to idea of sharing the position with Cohasset during the town's last search for fire chief.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said Monday that two years ago the town faced "serious issues within the fire department that needed straightening out" such as ambulance billing making it necessary for the town to have its own chief.

Answering firefighter Davis, Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said the police and fire departments shouldn't be compared.

"I really don't see police coming together as well as I see the administrative aspects of the fire department being managed by the chief of Scituate," he said.

Sullivan said the board has a fiscal responsibility to look into the matter because it might save money.

The board decided to advertise for a new chief so it can weigh the pros and cons of the town having its own chief as opposed to sharing one. Selectmen will also ask Nadeau to recommend an interim chief or chiefs. It's not clear if interim chiefs would be appointed from members of the department on a rotating basis as was the recent case with the police department.

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said an appointment of a shared fire chief with Scituate may require town meeting approval depending on whether a contract between the towns is required of if the chief was employed by one town and worked independently for the other.

Scituate's fire chief James Breen is employed under state Civil Service rules and Cohasset's is not.

Goedecke stressed the concept of a shared chief is "only exploration" among other possibilities to be considered. But she added that it may "take a leap of faith" for someone to take the job in Cohasset now since regionalization of area fire departments is being studied.

Cohasset is one of five towns participating in a fire department regionalization study. Area firefighters oppose regionalization unless an independent fire protection district is formed and they are upset that their state union has not been able to formally represent them in regionalization talks.

Although no Cohasset firefighter applied for the chief's post last time, Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the fire chief ought to be promoted from within the department.

"To me just exploring is a slap in the face to our employees in the town.

"..There is no incentive for employees when we do something like this."

During the discussion Robert Martin, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, suggested the board invite firefighters to the table.

He said in business management looks to its employees to find out problems and work out solutions.

Chief gets high marks on short stay

Although he is leaving mid-way through a three-year contract, selectmen had nothing but praise for Fire Chief John Nadeau, Monday.

Nadeau is resigning to accept a job as fire chief in Salem, New Hampshire. His last day is July 6.

"It is with sadness that we have this item on our agenda," Selectmen Chairman Martha K. Gjesteby said. "We appreciate all the work you've done for us."

Gjesteby said Nadeau helped the image of the fire department, increase the call firefighting force and was amazingly successful at town meeting.

"You got everything through," she said.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said Salem's gain is Cohasset's loss.

"They are very lucky people," she said. "We are sorry that you're not going to be with us longer."

Selectman Merle Brown said Nadeau "had done a great job and will be missed."

Selectmen picked Nadeau for the job of Cohasset fire chief out of a field of 60 applicants in December 1991. Nadeau had been deputy chief in charge of operations in Sandford, Maine for a year prior to accepting the job in Cohasset. Before that he was deputy state fire administrator for Maine Fire Training and Education.

When interviewed for the post in Cohasset, Nadeau was questioned at length about his commitment to Cohasset and said he wouldn't be interested in less than three years.

In his June 7 letter of resignation to the board, Nadeau wrote "with any job change, personal as well as professional factors present themselves. Unlike the professional transition to Cohasset, my personal transition has not been successful; my personal goals are beyond reach in Cohasset."

During his interview in 1991, he also spoke at length about getting the staff involved in the decision-making process and talked about doing some marketing for the department.

Accomplishments in his 18 months as chief include: increasing the number of call firefighters from 14 to 21, increasing inspections, and a nearly 700 percent jump in ambulance billing collections. Under Nadeau's watch the town and firefighters were successful in reaching a collective bargaining agreement, the first in three years. Purchases during his tenure include a new ambulance, rescue boat, and vital sign monitor.

Nadeau praised Cohasset's firefighters for their ability to change.

"Their tolerance and acceptance of significant change in a very short period of time is commendable," he wrote.

During Nadeau's time as chief, the fire department wasn't without controversy.

In October, selectmen acted quickly to back Nadeau up by issuing a strong reprimand to firefighters when some veteran firefighters defied management by refusing to help with training of the call force

The Cohasset firefighters union responded that the board had not investigated both sides of the issue and called for more communication.

Nadeau also worked with the firefighters to bring sick leave use down from 72 to 58 hours a week.

Let there be lights

Little League teams could be playing under the lights as early as next year.

John Carr, representing Cohasset Little League, told the school board last week that lights could be installed at Milliken Field in time for the 1994 season at a cost of about $40,000.

Lighting Milliken Field would help alleviate current scheduling problems which arise due to the shortage of fields and limited time which they can be used, Carr explained.

Lights would also make the field available for high school night football and soccer games.

The group would also like to install lights at Barnes Field and possibly on a proposed new field behind the Deer Hill School.

Carr said the money for the lights would be raised privately. Because the fields involved are either owned by the town or school department, permission for the lights is needed from both groups.

Carr plans to meet with other Little League organizations to explore purchasing lights as a group .

A (non-competitive) league of their own

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

There are no nerve-racking tryouts. You won't see a coach chewing out a player for allowing a ground ball roll between her legs. A player isn't benched for striking out with the bases loaded.

That's not what you'll find in the Cohasset Girls Softball League. As far as the league's directors and coaches are concerned, every negative has a silver lining. All positives are accentuated and the girls are built up rather than penalized for their play.

"We want to encourage the athletes," said the league's co-director Lisa Smith, "but we also want to encourage those girls who may not have played before.

"We want to emphasize fun. Instead of pointing out what they did wrong, there have to be a couple of things they did right."

The league's other co-director, Rose Collins, a teacher at the Osgood School, fully supports the philosophy.

"We wanted to downplay the competition and focus on good sportsmanship," Collins said. "We have had positive comments from the parents."

Since starting up four years ago, the CGSL has improved and grown every season. In its initial season there were 60 girls in the league, made up of strictly fifth and sixth-graders. More than 130 girls donned their spikes and gloves this spring.

The league is currently made up of two divisions: Grades 4-6 and 7-9. Each grouping plays 10 games a season. Paperwork begins in February and an evaluation session is held two weeks before the start of the season. Every girl who enters the league goes through hitting and fielding drills. The coaches then give them a grade of one, two or three.

"We create teams based on these numbers," Smith said.

A practice is held the following week and opening day is a week later.

It begins in the the second week in May and runs through June, climaxing with a jamboree and cookout at the end of the season.

The CGSL is unique in that it doesn't keep standings and there is no All-Star game or playoffs at the end of the season.

The league recently became part of the National Youth Sports Coaches Association (NYSCA) of West Palm Beach, Florida. Smith says NYSCA holds the same philosophy as the CGSL.

"Winning shouldn't be the priority," she said of the shared beliefs between the two organizations. "It should be to have fun, provide instruction and safety. Their message is just what we want to convey in our league."

Through the NYSCA, coaches sign a code of ethics pledge and watch a video which focuses on the coaching of young children in several different sports. The coaches are then certified, but must renew their certification every season. Ninety percent of the coaches in the league are certified and the number is expected to rise before the start of the '94 season.

Another positive is that several of the coaches are high school students, who serve as excellent role models for the younger girls. The umpires are students as well.

"The fact that they are interested in the kids (provides encouragement)," Collins said. "We need more of that."

Both Smith and Collins believe the program offers the town another well-run league, along with an excellent feeder system for the high school program. Several girls, including Julie Smith, Caty Campbell, Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Michelle Ward, Lauren Dooley and Erica Hettstrom all were members of the JV squad this spring.

Smith said she would like to see the league eventually expand to include Grades 7-9.

extra points

Joe Reardon

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

There's nothing like a long hot softball game on a long hot summer afternoon.

Last Saturday such a game was held between the Mariner Newspapers and the Patriot Ledger.

Now, we don't like to brag but the Mariner team beat that Ledger crew like a dusty rug. (Actually, it was a pretty close 13-5 game but we need a little hyperbole in Extra Points.)

Everyone in the Mariner line-up played a great game, except fellow Extra Points member Joe Reardon who missed the game with that perennially lame excuse, "I have to see a guy about some stuff." (Actually, he had some work to do, but once again, hyperbole.)

The other Extra Crew member atoned for two pathetic fielding errors with a wind-blown home run that bounced off the glove of a Ledger outfielder and landed

(See page 16)

Lewis' mental toughness produces no-hitter . . .

no-hitters into the third and fourth, but even then he knew it was far too early to even consider posting a goose egg in the opposing team's hit column.

June 6 proved to be a different day altogether.

Lewis was overpowering against the Mets. Despite five walks, he stuck mainly with his fastball and an occasional change-up to strikeout 15 Met batters.

Prior to the game, Lewis didn't feel especially strong during his warm-up tosses, "just normal." Once he took the mound and worked up a sweat, however, Lewis cruised through the early innings without any sign of tiring.

"My arm was feeling pretty good," he said. "It was lasting a pretty long time."

Lewis knew he was pitching a strong game, but he was well aware he was up against a tough pitcher in Met hurler Greg Taylor, who sat down 15 Dodger batters on third strikes himself.

"He pitched a very good game," Lewis said of Taylor. "He's a very good player. We came through with some big hits and that's what did it for us. If we hadn't, it would have been a close, close game."

Lewis wasn't aware he hadn't given up a hit until the fourth inning when Dodger shortstop Jim O'Sullivan pointed it out to him. Amazingly, Lewis wasn't aware of it until then.

"I thought it was just a normal game," he said.

Lewis went to the mound in the sixth and final inning with the no-hitter well within his grasp. Even then, though, he tried to block it out of his mind and concentrate on sealing up another win for the Dodgers. He knew the threat of overthrowing the ball could cause him to lose his feel for the strike zone.

"The sixth inning it (thinking of a no-hitter) was really happening," Lewis said. "Then I walked a couple of kids and I concentrated on getting out of the inning after that.

Matt Lewis goes into his windup during a Minor League game two years ago. The 12 year old used his fastball to mow down 15 Mets' hitters to record his first no-hitter ever on June 6.

"I think my arm may have been a little tired after that (two walks). But then I started throwing strikes again and got back into a rhythm. I was kind of getting excited. I knew I couldn't let this kid get a walk or anything."

Lewis posted strikeout No. 15 when he sat down the final batter. The first player to congratulate him was shortstop Jim O'Sullivan.

"He ran over to me and told me 'that's a no-hitter,'" Lewis said.

Next up for Lewis is this Saturday's All-Star game, where a rematch against Taylor is a strong possibility. And although the Dodgers have finished first at the end of the regular season, Lewis has never won the league championship on the team in his four years in the Major League.

"I just want to win the championship and keep playing well," he said.

Lewis, who has played Cohasset Little League since he was a six year old in the Farm League, will be entering the Pony League next season. He began pitching in the Minor League and has continued through the Majors.

Lewis is no slouch as a batter with an average well above .300. He admits, however, that his father Kevin, the Dodgers' coach, had to change his attitude toward hitting.

"I want to hit home runs," Lewis said with a smile, "but my dad says to concentrate on hitting line drives. He says I'm doing fine now. I'm starting to take my dad's philosophy. I've come close (to a home run) a couple of times. Now I'm just concentrating on hitting the ball hard and finding the gaps."

Lewis's baseball participation does not stop with Little League. He played some JV baseball at C.H.S., against kids up to five years older than him. The experience should prove to be invaluable in the years to come as Lewis works his way towards the varsity squad.

"I didn't hit as well as I wanted," he said, "but I did pretty well in the field. It's a big adjustment hitting."

Along with soccer in the fall, Lewis also plays for the Bay State Sharks in the Metro Boston Hockey League, along with JV and "some varsity" for the Skippers. His hockey season lasts from early August and puts in close to 60 games by the time the season ends in April. Lewis switches his skates for baseball cleats during his three-month respite from banging players around on the ice.

With five remaining games to go in this baseball season and several years still in front of him, Lewis will be heading to the mound to pitch. He'll savor his first no-hitter for quite a while.

"It would be nice to throw another no-hitter though," Lewis said with a hint of a smile.

Chances are, it will be the furthest thing from his mind when he goes into his wind-up. After all, that's the only way they come.

Giants take on parents to finish season

By Mary-Beth Curry
Special to the Mariner

The Giants concluded a winning season with a rousing family game of kids vs. parents. Although the parents jumped off to an early lead (thanks in part to a pair of triples hit by Linda Keller and Michael O'Connell), the kids prevailed with the youngest player, Mathew O'Connell, scoring the go-ahead run.

The combined efforts of coaches Ralph Kidder, Andy Krueger, and Phil Lehr resulted in a great season for all of the Giant players. The coaches and assistant coach Sarah Kidder kept the emphasis on learning the baseball fundamentals, teaching all the players to play all positions and having fun.

The following is a brief list of Giant highlights for the 1993 season:

Caroline Carr showed great spunk as a baserunner and one of the Giant catchers.

Megan Chastain went right after those ground balls as a Giant shortstop and was an asset at second base.

Mathew Corry was a solid player in the field, a good pitcher, and an excellent batter—he had a grand slam but it was called a ground rule double because the ball rolled under the fence.

Trey Curry had one of his best games against the Phillies when he caught a fly ball at third base, hit a home run with two Giant players on base and pitched the final inning—striking out three Phillies players.

Ian Kidder is a great all-around baseball player but he really came alive in the Giant's last game against the Cubs. He slammed a couple of great hits and was responsible for all three Cub outs in the final inning.

David Krueger really knew his baseball fundamentals and was a solid Giant infielder as well as a good outfielder—he knocked down quite a few hard hit balls.

Robby Lehr used his full height when he stretched to catch balls at first base and as one of the Giant's better pitchers.

Anna Jane Murphy showed her baseball potential by playing all positions—while pitching against the Reds she struck two players out and assisted in the third out by fielding the grounder and making the throw to first base.

Greg O'Connell is a real natural at the game of baseball, playing lots of positions extremely well—he had a double play as shortstop when he made a leaping catch and also tagged out the baserunner.

Kevin O'Brien made a tremendous contribution to the team while playing the infield—he caught a high pop fly while playing left field against the Cubs and provided many other assists.

Majors—winding down or gearing up?

Although seven games were played this week, only the Dodgers, as they nurture their perfect season, have reported in. Normally loquacious coaches have been keeping mum and the question is, are they becoming more mild mannered or are they saving their hype for the playoffs, which begin next week? Nothing is sacred in little league ball, and with five games still on the schedule, anything can happen.

Meanwhile, Bilton's two grand slams this past Sunday extended the Dodgers' streak. Defying baseball odds, Greg Bilton accomplished this feat and his ninth and tenth homers of the season. In the same inning in a game against the A's, Matt Lewis, Greg O'Keefe and Jake Motley also had hits, as did Adam Leahy, Brian Hurley, Sean Chase and Dennis Rooney. Marc Verrochi, Bobby Morgan and Mark Equi all scored for the winners. On the mound, Lewis, O'Keefe and Leahy pitched well. The A's were hitting and scoring all afternoon with Evan Cutler and Peter Minnar pounding out hits and Eric Hanlan, Jay Whoriskey, Mike the Mighty Rossi, Jeff Flanagan, Danny Sullivan and Cutler crossing the plate.

Earlier in the week, the Cards and Dodgers played another one of those "it ain't over til it's over" shows of baseball. The Dodgers came from behind with six runs in the fifth to defeat the Cards. Jimmy O'Sullivan and Greg Bilton pitched for the blues. Lewis, O'Keefe, Bilton and Motley had hits. Motley's winning run came from a clutch hit, keeping the phenomenal Dodger no-loss season going.

Extra points . . .

beyond the fence. It was cheap but you have to take 'em anyway you can.

Mariner cartoonist Peter Menice, (look for his biting cartoons in the editorial section) played a flawless game at shortstop. He also had several key hits and emerged with the best tan.

And Stoughton Journal editor Joe Mont, (a late show to the game because of a long night at J.J. Foley's) made a catch that left the two fans in stands screaming, "Dewey, Dewey" or was it, "Huey, Dewey and Louie?" We can't remember for sure.

Anyway, back to the win over the Ledger. To quote a few high school coaches we cover, "We made all the plays we had to make and got a few breaks at the plate. Both teams played hard but we were lucky to come out of it with a win."

Confidence is running high at the Mariner and we have left a message with Lou Gorman. We want the Sox and we'll make it worth their while.

You've heard of "Indecent Proposal" with Robert Redford offering $1 million for a night with Demi Moore. Well, we can't swing $1 million at the Mariner, but we could round up $25 for one game and I figure Lou could use the cash when he gets canned later this summer.

The conduct of the league officials, coaches and parents at Saturday's Cohasset Little League All-Star game in the Minor League division was an inspiration to anyone who has been led to believe adults involved with Little League are overbearing ogres.

Harold F. Barnes Field epitomized what Little League baseball should be for kids: Nothing but fun and an opportunity to improve their skills.

Coaches from both sides offered nothing but encouragement during the game. If a player happened to make an error, nothing but "nice try" was heard from the coaches, along with a suggestion or two on how to handle that hot grounder or cut-off throw the next time the player was faced with the same type of situation.

The coaches made sure the kids knew how many outs there were and where the play was if the ball was hit to them. While at bat, the kids were told to wait for a good pitch to hit and concentrate at all times, in the field and in the batters box.

When one player came back to the dugout and threw his helmet down in frustration, a coach said to him "It's only a game. Don't get upset about it." When was the last time you heard that from a Little League coach.

Granted, you could often see the coaches' frustration on an error or strikeout, but they would keep it to themselves before advising the player to shrug it off and get back to the task at hand. The coaches refused to let the players get down on themselves, something that can happen very easily in Little League play.

Remember, the encouragement shown to these kids was not just for one inning but rather the entire game. There were plenty pats on the back and it wasn't hard to see the players were genuinely enjoying themselves.

When the game ended, many of the players stayed on the field as they gathered in the field to throw the ball around, take a few more swings at the plate or just to goof around, the way kids do.

The lasting impression that the game left on the Extra Points crew is that baseball is alive and well in Cohasset, thanks to adults who care about the community's youths. If Abner Doubleday was watching, he surely would have had a smile on his face. The folks in Cohasset proved baseball still is the All-American game, at least in their town.

Dwyer scores hat trick in season finale

By Ruth Wilcox
Special to the Mariner

John Dwyer led team 4 to a 3-1 win over team 2 in Saturday's season finale for the boys' under 8 teams.

John scored three exciting goals in this tightly contested game, with able assistance from Trey Curry, Brian Bilton, Phillip Strazzulla and Andrew Musto. Team 4 had to contend with Team 2's effective defensive wall of Jeff Drybanski and the skilled goal work of Paul Cotter.

Robbie Carpenter scored a dramatic goal for Team 2 early in the game. Robbie, Nathaniel Wilcox, and Craig Laugelle worked hard, without rest, to increase their team score, but couldn't get through the effective defense of Team 4 led by John Downing and David Krueger.

In another tightly contested game, Greg Smith and Chris Flynn each scored a goal to lead Team 5 to a 2-0 win with Team 1.

Team 5 effectively controlled the ball, but Team 1 took opportunities to score wherever possible. Team 5's Mark Chapman and Ross Lieb-Lappen made several fine saves.

Team 1 made many effective defensive plays. Team 5 had the ball near the goal so often without this defense, it would not have been such a tight, exciting game.

Saturday's games marked the end of the spring soccer season, and the coaches who volunteer their time to help these youngsters learn this wonderful game must be lauded. The parents of the Under-8 boys' teams thank Tom Barrett, Peter Berg, David Buick, Paul Cotter, Paul Musto and Bill Pestone.

Soccer camp registrations underway

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8 through 18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fourth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you contact the Cohasset Recreation Department at the town hall, or call 383-6791.

Soccer Camp for boys will be held during the week of Monday through Friday, August 2 through 6, and for girls the week of August 9 through 13, Monday through Friday. Both camps will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Cohasset's Milliken Field. The cost for camp is $165 and $10 discounts are available for subsequent children registering from the same family, as well as team-enrollment discounts. South Shore Soccer represents top flight soccer training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players, from the New England Area.

Baseball camp set for June 28

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held the week of Monday, June 28, at Milliken Field.

Two camp programs are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over and a half-day, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5 and 6 year olds.

The week-long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, July 2.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for Baseball Camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office.

Parcells talks football at NDA

By David McKee
Mariner staff

New England Patriots coach Bill Parcells generally enjoys rubbing elbows with fans and talking football with the press about as much as heart surgery.

Last Monday night, however, the two-time Super Bowl champion coach was a gracious and cooperative guest at a fund-raising dinner for Notre Dame Academy in Hingham.

Parcells posed for pictures, signed autographs and gave a rousing and funny speech to the more than 100 guests at the function to raise money for the school's athletic program.

Parcells even met with the press and talked football.

Parcells told the Mariner before the event that things have been going well as the Pats head coach and franchise savior.

"Things have been going pretty good," he said. "We just finished with the rookies (at rookie camp) and I like a lot of what I've seen. Most of the players have worked really hard and we've got a lot done in a short time."

As for why he would want to get back into coaching with the lowly Patriots after winning two Super Bowls with the New York Giants and undergoing heart surgery, Parcells said coaching is what he enjoys the most.

"It sure beats working," he laughed. "This is what I like to do the most and I feel I can help the Patriots. I'm coming into a tough situation but I wouldn't be here if I didn't think we could win."

He was asked for advice for young football players.

"Football is a physical game so being in top condition is important," he said. "Also it is important to listen to your coaches and work hard on the fundamentals. But, remember it is only a game and don't take it too seriously. There's more to life than football."

Will McDonough, Boston Globe reporter and NBC football analyst, was instrumental in getting Parcells to attend the fund-raiser.

Since Parcells was hired as Patriots coach earlier this year he has met with the press on few occasions and has revealed very little about his long-range plans for the Patriots.

As for football matters, he said he cannot estimate how many games this year's team will win.

"The objective as a coach, like many classroom teachers with their students, is to get a team to play to its potential. And I don't know what the potential is for this team. But I will find out. I do know that I will try to win every game whether its pre-season or regular season. But I don't know if this team is capable of winning just yet."

Parcells also addressed the issue of the Patriots possibly moving to St. Louis or gaining a new megaplex stadium in Boston.

"I stay out of the stadium stuff and the ownership," he said. "I was hired to be just a coach. If they want to play games on Boston Common or Route 1 that's fine with me. I don't get into the politics. But when you're talking about a new facility. I support anything that will increase enthusiasm and support for the team but I'm not campaigning."

Parcells closed by thanking Notre Dame Academy and asking the sisters to say a prayer for the Patriots before each game.

"We need all the help we can get," he said.

Jazz brunch benefit lifts lightkeeper's booty

Community celebrates for a cause in beautiful setting

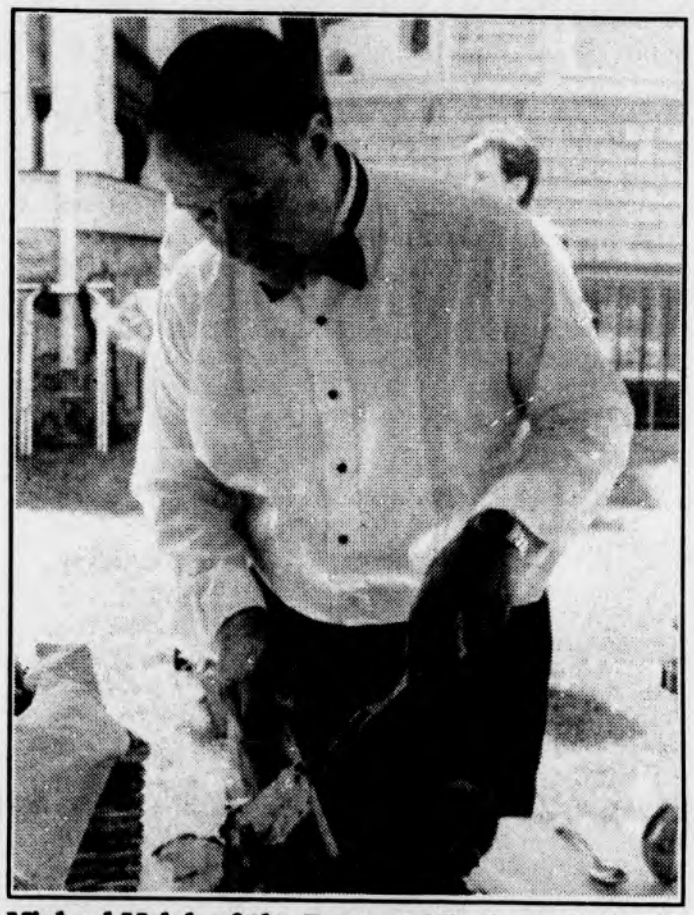
Perfect weather, combined with the beautiful setting of Peter and Jane Goedecke's coastal estate, made helping the Cohasset Lightkeepers' renovation project a community celebration.

The Mark Kross Trio provided a musical background for relaxed conversation, as a broad cross-spectrum of Cohasset and South Shore residents donated close to $15,000 to help preserve and adapt for public use the former Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' Residence.

Approximately 200 guests enjoyed the manicured gardens and stunning view of the Atlantic, while dining on gourmet food catered by the Borrowed Butler. The strong commitment of local garden clubs was reflected in beautiful table settings. Local florists including Sestitos, Reed's Country Gardens, Espositos, and Flowers by the Sea contributed geraniums and other floral arrangements.

Polly Logan thanked the Goedeckes for hosting the brunch, as well as the organizing committee that had been especially formed for the occasion. Polly observed that she can't remember a local service project that has so totally involved all elements of the Cohasset community.

There was lots of talk and socializing at the brunch.



Michael Melch of the Borrowed Butler in Scituate slices ham for hungry brunchers.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation had a display table that provided a model showing the renovated Lightkeepers' Residence with pictures depicting progress to date. The model also identified a number of windows and other architectural features for which memorial donations have been received. Windows priced at $250, $350, and $500 are still available, as are other opportunities for memorial donations to include the kitchen at $5,000. Inquiries about memorial donations may be referred to Polly Logan at 383-0031; while Bob Martin, at 383-0787, is continuing to enroll individuals on the Plankowners' Wall for $50 (that includes a plank and plankowners' cap).

Joe McElroy, president of the non-profit Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation, noted that the upstairs rental apartments are expected to be available for occupancy by Oct. 1. He said that it is possible that the community meeting room may also be ready this fall, but that it is not certain, as much of the work is being done by volunteers which creates challenging scheduling issues.

McElroy stated that there has been a tremendous outpouring of help from the trades and those who

All Paws meet

The next bimonthly members meeting of All Paws Rescue Inc. will be held Tuesday, July 13, at Days Inn, 830 Hingham St., Rockland. It will start promptly at 7:30 p.m. All members and friends are cordially invited to attend.

Carillon recitals begin

The 69th Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset on ten successive Sunday evenings, beginning June 27 and continuing through August 29, at 6 p.m. The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs, and blankets.

Printed programs will be distributed on Cohasset Common, and also will be available in the church courtyard on Highland Avenue. The best listening places will be noted on the back of the program. The concerts are held rain or shine, and in case of bad weather, the bells may be heard from parked cars.

The first program June 27 will be performed by Ulla Laage, carillonneur of Our Savior's Church in Copenhagen. Ms. Laage will play a varied program of interest to all listeners, and including some Danish compositions for carillon. Following the recital there will be a reception in the parish hall, to which all are invited, compliments of the Taylor Bell Company.

On July 4, the guest-artist will be Terence McKinney, assistant carillonneur of the Bok Tower, Lake Wales, Florida. David Hunsberger, assistant carillonneur of the University of California at Berkeley, will play on July 11. On July 18, Claude Aubin of St. Joseph's Oratory in Montreal will be heard; Peter Langberg, Director of the Church Music School at Logumkloster, Denmark, will perform July 25.

On August 1 the carillonneur will be Daniel Kerry Kehoe of Trinity College, Hartford, CT; August 8, Karel Keldermans of Springfield, IL (President of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America); August 15, Edward Nassor, carillonneur of Washington National Cathedral, Washington, DC; August 22, Dr. Lucy Dechene of Fitchburg, MA.

The final recital August 29 will be given by Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of Cohasset, and the program will include requests submitted by listeners at previous recitals.

Following each of these recitals, visitors may climb the 45 steps to the tower's playing cabin to see the keyboard. For further information, phone St. Stephen's Church at 383-1083, or Sally Slade Warner at 508-475-2599.

Art winners named

Judges had their work cut out for them in selecting the Juried Art and Juried Photography exhibitions that will be a main feature of the South Shore Art Center's Art Festival. After reviewing 345 art entries and 152 photographs, judges selected 191 pieces for the Juried Art Exhibition and 59 for the Juried Photography Exhibition. Both exhibits will be displayed under the Main Tent on Cohasset Common, June 18-20.

Awards will be given out at a ceremony at the tent Friday evening, June 18 at 6 p.m. Best in Show in the Juried Art Exhibition goes to Virginia Allen of Scituate for her oil painting, "Broken & Mended". Tony Andrade of Hingham wins first prizes in oil & acrylic and drawing & pastel. Second prize for oil & acrylic goes to Gene Zupkofska of Stoughton with M.F. Mangrove of Norwell taking third.

Second prize for drawing & pastel goes to Donna Basile of Scituate while Katherine Smit of Duxbury wins third. In the Graphics category, first prize goes to Don Lettis of Hingham, second to Mandy Avery of Weymouth and third to C.M. Harden of Scituate.

Jean Fox of Stoughton wins first in mixed media with Judyth Emanuel of Wellesley and Shawn Robertson of Scituate taking second and third, respectively.

Saverio Truglia of Jamaica Plain wins first place in color photography, with Nicolas Nobili of Eastham taking second and Ronald Wilson of E. Bridgewater capturing third. Weymouth's David Murray is first place winner in black & white with Gayle Hilary of Hingham winning second and Jack Foley of Hanover winning third. Special effects awards go to Leslie Kilduff of Greenbush, Sheryl Albano of Scituate and Molly Lynch of Cohasset.

The SSAC Members Exhibition has 73 art pieces on display with four artists receiving special awards for excellence: Kimberlee Alemian, Mary Lou Clark, and Tom Lucas, all of Cohasset and Nicolas T. Nobili of Eastham.

Art Festival hours are Friday, June 18 from 1 to 8 p.m., Saturday, June 19 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday, June 20 from noon to 5 p.m. Admission to the exhibits is free. A benefit reception on Friday, June 18 from 7 to 9 p.m. opens the President's Choice Exhibition: Bits & Pieces: Artists Using Computers. $15 tickets for this event benefit the Art Center's educational programs. For more information, please call 383-9548.

Logo design contest

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 is holding a logo design contest for Cohasset students in grades 7-12. The prize is a $100 savings bond.

Logo designs for T-shirts for the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund must be submitted by July 31 to the American Legion Post, 93 Summer St. (between the hours of 3 and 10 p.m.) or mailed to PO Box 118, Cohasset 02025.

Christine was a student at Cohasset High who lost her life in an automobile accident in 1987. T-shirts bearing the winning logo will be on sale at the Christine Burke Memorial Fund Clambake Sept. 11 at Sandy Beach. A scholarship in Christine's memory is awarded annually to a student selected by the American Legion post.

NOW group meets

South Shore Chapter, National Organization for Women (NOW) meets June 13, 2 to 4 p.m., New North Church, Lincoln St., Hingham. Call Suzanne 749-3342; Jeannette 337-6725.

Guest Speaker: Attorney Jamie Sabino, who specializes in assisting minors seeking abortions through the parental notification laws.

Starting in July, NOW regular monthly meetings will be held the second Tuesday or the month, at 7 p.m., at the New North Church, Lincoln Street, Hingham.

Celebrate with ballet

In celebration of Children's Ballet Workshop's 20th year, Nan Cogswell Keating, Director, has chosen excerpts from her favorite ballets for her final performance. CBW will merge with Boston Ballet in September, and the new site will be at the former Nickerson Theatre complex in Norwell.

Keating will be the principal for Boston Ballet, South Shore Location, and everyone is excited about their new endeavor.

June 17, 18, and 19, at Hingham High School, the curtain will open at 7 p.m. for the first ballet "Graduation Ball." This is a lively frolicking ballet set in a formal girls' school at graduation.

Please join CBW in its celebration. Tickets are $10 and will be available at the door.

Derby Academy news

The nominating committee of the Derby Parents' Association announced the following officers from Cohasset for next year: President, Linda Wakeman; Secretary, Patsy Dean; Fall Fundraiser, Mary Larson; Newsletter, Motoko Deane; Grade II Representative, Margie Steele; Grade IV Rep., Peggy Gaughen; Grade VI Rep, Connie Noon; Grade VII Rep, Janet Pierson and Grade VIII Rep, Judy Simons.

Derby also announced that Wiley Wakeman, son of Sam and Linda Wakeman, won top honors for the fifth grade in the National Social Studies Olympiad, a national competition among students in various history and social studies areas.

Study skills workshop

A series of two-session study skills workshops for junior high and high school students will once again be held at the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library on Tuesday and Thursday, August 24 and 26, or Monday and Wednesday, August 30 and Sept. 1 from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The workshops are designed to teach students, regardless of current skills or grade level, how to better organize themselves for school. Topics will include note-taking, outlining, time-management, and test-taking strategies, along with practical solutions to better prepare students for the upcoming school year.

Classes will be taught by Leslie Goldberg, M.Ed., Educational Consultant and Nancy Blumberg, M.Ed., Learning Specialist; both of whom specialize in methods and motivation. Enrollment is limited to 20 students per session, and an early registration discount is available to those paid by July 15. For information call 749-2074 or 749-4929.

College financial help

MassPlan, a comprehensive, easy to understand college loan program for middle-income families is now available.

Fifty-six participating Massachusetts colleges and universities recently began offering the MassPlan to students and their families.

The MassPlan, administered by the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority, is a set of financing options including a fixed or variable interest rate and a home mortgage option. The program's interest rates are among the lowest in the country.

The MassPlan is designed to help middle-income families who do not receive sufficient financial aid from traditional sources and who can benefit from the program's simplified approach to college financing.

Loan volume for the MassPlan program is to exceed $50 million dollars for the 1993-94 academic year. For more information about the MassPlan, or for a brochure and application, call 1-800-842-1531. Brochures may also be obtained by calling Senator Brian McDonald at 722-1646.

Caitlin Welby poses in front of the bulletin board in Mrs. Horigan's class at Deer Hill for the students' social studies unit on the wild west.

"Hoedown" at Deer Hill

Mrs. Horigan's class culminated their unit on the western states with an old-fashioned "Hoedown." With the help of Mary Brennoch and Bill White, a professional square dance caller, the students participated in a real live square dance.

After hooting, clapping and reeling, they returned to their classroom for a luncheon of chili, corn bread and tortilla chips. Several of Mr. Biagini's sixth-grade students entertained the class with a medley of western songs. Timmy Grossey, one of Mrs. Horigan's students, soloed on the keyboard, playing "Old Suzanna" and "The Mexican Hand-Clapping" song. A wonderful time was had by all.

Please take note

SERVICES FOR SENIORS JOB REGISTRY: Services for Seniors is a job registry that maintains a list of private pay workers offering in-home support services to seniors. Workers' names are provided free of charge to elders or family members caring for elders at home. Rates are directly negotiable by the client with the workers. Workers include homemakers, home health aides, and private duty nurses. Their services include assistance with personal care, meal preparation, light housekeeping, companionship and/or respite care. To learn more about the program, call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

VISION FOUNDATION INC.: Are you experiencing problems with your vision that make it difficult for you to read your mail, cook your meals, or perform other tasks? If so, a rehabilitation teacher from Vision Foundation can visit with you to help you make the most of your usable sight. This help is for seniors 60 years or older. Vision Foundation is a nonprofit United Way Agency. For further information please call 1-926-4232.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Council on Aging provides transportation to the Senior Center for lunch Tuesdays and Thursdays. A hot, nutritious meal will be served to senior citizens for a donation of $1.50. Lunch reservations must be made before noon the preceding day. Those in need of transportation should notify the Center. To make lunch reservations, call the center at 383-9112.

Volunteers are needed to help Lindsay in the kitchen on Thursdays. If you can spare a few hours, please call Lindsay at 383-9112.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: The Homestead Exemption for those under 65 years of age and not disabled is $125,000. For anyone over 65 or disabled, it is $200,000. If you want to learn more about this act, please call the Council on Aging and ask for Kathy or Sue at 383-9116.

HEALTH CARE PROXY FORMS:

These forms are also available at the center. A Health Care Proxy is a legally recognized document which allows you to appoint someone you trust to make medical treatment decisions for you if you lose the ability to decide for yourself. There are many interesting points to this law, so call Kathy Glenzel at 383-9116.

TRANSPORTATION SERVICE: The shuttle is available to all residents who are 60 years or older. Monday, Wednesday and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for grocery shopping. Sunday mornings you can ride to church by calling Marion Smith at 383-0431.

MEDICAL TRIPS: Call FISH at 545-7073. Volunteers are available to drive Cohasset residents to medical appointments.

A RIDE OR MAP-5: This service is also available for anyone who is in need of specialized transportation. If you need a ride call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

SOS for seniors

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall, in an effort to address the increasing number of reported crimes, con games, swindles and schemes directed toward senior citizens, has designed a program called, "Senior Outreach Services," or SOS.

The focus will be on pre-victimization (preventive) and post-victimization (support). Seminars, informative brochures and alert bulletins will be presented to various groups on a timely basis.. If you wish to help or have advice, input or questions regarding SOS/TRIAD please contact Dick O'Leary at (617)329-3705.

REPLACE YOUR UST WITH A SAFE, DEPENDABLE ABOVE GROUND OIL TANK.

Anderson Fuel, along with local contractors, will remove your existing underground storage tank (UST) and install a new above ground tank. Our competitive price and quality workmanship ensure for a quick and thorough solution to this growing concern. Please call today for a free estimate.

'Must see' programs on cable-TV this week

There's lots on cable-TV this week. Don't miss Pierson to Person at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 3 to see Wigmore Pierson's guest Warren Noble of Noble's talk about the gift and card business and the state of the economy on the South Shore.

At 8:30 p.m., Pierson hosts Lanci Valentine, executive director of the South Shore Art Center. The discussion will focus on the annual Art Festival/Harborfest this weekend.

Wednesday, June 23 on Channel 3, Cohasseters can see Children's Corner at 6:30 p.m. with Bob Detwiler. Detwiler will read "Cranberries," "Frog Prince," and "I Wonder if I'll See a Whale." On the Detwiler Journal at 7 p.m. that same evening, Detwiler interviews Cohasset resident Ubaldo DiBenedetto (writing as Kyle Donner) about his new novel, the nail-biting techno-thriller, "Polar Day 9."

business notes

George J. Rabstejnek has been named chairman of the Reynolds Society at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston, announced Alexander Bernhard, chairman of the Infirmary's Board of Directors.

The Reynolds Society recognizes the Infirmary's most generous friends and benefactors and is named for Edward Reynolds, M.D., co-founder of the Infirmary. Reynolds Society members have contributed more than $4.3 million to the Infirmary since the group's inception in 1986

Rabstejnek has been a trustee of the Infirmary since 1984 and a member of the Board of Directors since 1991. Rabstejnek is the former chairman of Harbridge House, Inc., an international management consulting firm based in Boston. He retired this year after 11 years as the firm's chairman and chief executive officer.

Rabstejnek is active in numerous community organizations and has served as past president of the World Affairs Council in Boston. He lives in Cohasset, with his wife and daughter.

Founded in 1824, the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary is an international center for treatment and research and is a teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School.

Marilyn T. Keane of Boston and Cohasset was recently elected to the position of Overseer of Plimoth Plantation, the 17th-century living history museum in Plymouth, Mass. Elections took place at the museum's annual meeting Saturday, May 8.

Mrs. Keane, who is also an Overseer of WGBH Boston, is a Director of the World Affairs Council and Chairman of diplomats Off the Record. She is a graduate of Belmont High School in Belmont, Mass. and holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Tufts University.

Lot hours cutback urged to curb beach boozing

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Drinking has reached epidemic proportions at Sandy Beach — again, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

Cohasset police are trying to combat the problem but don't have the staff to baby-sit the Sandy Beach parking lot seven days a week.

So in addition to providing a presence there on Friday and Saturday nights, police will take the matter one step further.

Noonan will ask selectmen for support in addressing the problem by seeking a by-law change which would cut the hours back that the Sandy Beach parking lot is open.

"There is really no reason for anyone to be there after dusk," Noonan explained. The parking lot is now open from 5 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Currently, an officer is stationed at the parking lot gate on Friday and Saturday nights. To deter out-of-towners from trying to park there, the officer checks for current beach stickers. The officer also takes a cursory look for any alcohol in the vehicle. Cars are not being searched, Noonan said.

Alcohol consumption is not allowed in parking lot under the town by-laws and Sandy Beach Association rules and regulations prohibit drinking on the beach.

Police have made arrests down there and will make more if necessary.

"We will get as tough as we can possibly get," Noonan said.

He explained that the abuse of alcohol at the site exposes the town to liability. As a result of drinking, fights can break out or someone could drown or be run over, Noonan warned.

Underage drinking is a big problem at the beach.

Noonan said the recent high school prom night "got completely out of hand" and the kids "trashed the parking lot."

"There was broken glass from one end to the other," Noonan said. He plans to ask selectmen to put a stop to the annual practice of opening the parking lot up

Festival weekend is biggest ever

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

For Cohasset's Jim Lagrotteria, the success of the annual South Shore Arts Festival/Harborfest was the best present a dad could have.

"Look at all the people who came to my Father's Day party. I love it!" said Lagrotteria, an organizer of the event.

No one was sure of the numbers, but most agreed that there were many more at this year's festival than the 10,000 estimated in attendance last year.

Whether is was art, food, fun for your kids, or shopping — the event had something for everyone.

"The marriage (of the harborfest and arts festival) is marvelous," Lagrotteria noted. "It draws all kinds of people.

"This year the performing arts drew a different group and the art, vendors, events, parade, blessing of the fleet, and chowderfest all draw," he said.

Lanci Valentine, director of the South Shore Arts Center, also gave the three-day event enthusiastic reviews.

"It's been absolutely terrific. I've never seen so many people," she said. "This is a wonderful family event.

"Three hundred people helped put this together — it was a community effort and we're loving it!"

There was a little rain on both Saturday and Sunday, but not enough to dampen the fun.

Cohasset's week

DARE study is in

A committee studying DARE, a drug awareness education program geared to the schools, has decided that a modified version of the program might fit in the Cohasset school system.

Supt. Stephen Hart said because a comprehensive health education program already exists in grades K-12, DARE might be redundant.

With that in mind the committee, which is made up of representatives from selectmen, the school board, police, the drug and alcohol committee, and school department, will meet over the summer to determine how the existing health education program can be augmented without fully adopting the DARE curriculum.

"The whole study committee felt that our program needs reinforcement," Hart said.

The committee is positive about fostering a relationship with kids and police.

"We all want better relationships between the police department and students," said School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell.

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said he recently returned a $1,000 grant from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office to help institute DARE, which consists of a 17-week program using a national curriculum.

Noonan stressed the importance of getting police involved with drug education in the schools so "kids meet and trust police before their high school years," he said.

Minuteman Richard Shaner enjoys something very "20th century" at the annual South Shore Art Festival/ Harborfest — a hamburger. Shaner marched in the parade Sunday along with other members of the Hingham Militia. For more photos, please see pages 12 & 13.

Appointments are made

Town Moderator, George L. Marlette announced that the town's appointing authority, "Troika" comprised of Marlette, Board of Selectmen Chairman, Martha Gjesteby, and Advisory Board Chairman, Nan Roth have filled many of the vacancies on town boards and committees. The following positions have been filled:

Committee to study town government structure: Louis Simeone, James Whalen, and Stacey Weaver. Personnel committee: Denise Perez-Botts. Design review committee: Maxwell R. Pounder and Robert C. Hunter. Advisory committee: Michael T. Putzgler. Drainage advisory committee: Lyle E. Branagan and Boyd J. Livingstone. Capital budget committee: Kenneth R. Warner and George S. Kovach Jr.

Marlette noted that the list includes reappointments of persons who have served the town previously in various capacities and new faces .

"We opened the screening process and identified available positions in an attempt to increase awareness of volunteer opportunities on key boards and committees in town. It was gratifying to see persons not previously involved in town government come forward to express an interest in improving the quality of life in our town. In fact, due to an unprecedented response to our candidate search and our desire to give everyone a fair review and level playing field, it will be necessary for "Troika" to meet again June 29, to screen the qualifications of the remaining applicants and make the final appointments."

Pearl lovers can prolong the life of their pearls by being aware that they should never let their pearls come in contact with hairspray or perfume, it will discolor and damage them.

You should have your pearls restrung every year or two, depending on how much you wear them. You can check to see if they need restringing by looking at the knots to see if they are right up against the pearl or if they can move back & forth between the knots. If they can move it means the silk has stretched and they should be restrung.

Come see us at King Jewelers, where we offer professional, reliable restringing as well as the selling of fine pearls.

Abbey benefit tea is a real Southern treat

Sixteen local citizens dined in the elegant style of the Old South last week thanks to an enthusiastic group of volunteers whose efforts support Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham.

A "Gone With the Wind" tea for 16 guests was one of the "theme" dining events on offer at the annual Glastonbury auction this spring. Proceeds from the auction benefit the abbey and its charitable works.

The tea, which was won by Charles Mundhenk of Cohasset, was held at the Meallo home on South Main Street. The menu included southern dishes like smoked oyster roll; buckwheat biscuits with sour cream and caviar; Roquefort,walnut and cognac sandwiches; almond apricot torte; and 86-proof bourbon cake — just to name a few.

The tea was prepared and served by characters in the Margaret Mitchell novel: Melanie Wilkes, Aunt Pitty Pat, and Scarlett and Sue Ellen O'Hara (portrayed by Barbara Mirabito of Norwell, Paula Meallo of Cohasset, Audrey McAllister of Hingham, and Kathy Kisiel of Cohasset, respectively).

The guests were also encouraged to come in costume.

Official permission slip = trip ticket, school says

Two student trips to the Red Sox game last week couldn't have been more different.

One bus full of kids left from the high school the other bus left from town hall.

Adult chaperones accompanied the students on one trip and not the other.

One trip went without incident. During the other some of the teens allegedly consumed alcohol.

The difference: the Friday night trip was school-sponsored requiring permission slips and chaperones. The Thursday night trip was organized by members of the sophomore class including a class officer but was not sponsored by the school, school officials said.

In response to concern by parents about the alleged drinking and lack of chaperones, high school officials sent a letter home explaining the sophomore trip was not a school-sponsored event. The letter explains that parents should be on the look out for permission slips on school stationery signed by the school administration before they allow their child to attend a field trip.

The student organizers of the sophomore trip handed out flyers advertising the event which caught some parents off guard. Some parents apparently sent their child along thinking the trip was sanctioned by the school.

Sophomore Class Advisor Ed Leary said when he saw one of the handouts in the hall, he called a meeting after school with the class officers and said told them "the trip's off" but the students went ahead anyway. He warned the organizers that the trip was not authorized by the school.

Leary said parents should not be naive about unsupervised trips.

"They must make a realistic assessment of the motivation for the trip. It's usually to get out of the normal structure of authority," he said.

In contrast, the ninth-grade trip to Fenway last Friday was school sponsored and had adults acting as chaperones. Assistant Principal Jack DeLorenzo met the bus before and after the trip. He checked off the kids and their permission slips.

Parents should ask themselves a couple of questions before allowing their child to attend a field trip, DeLorenzo said.

"Have I signed a slip? Do I bring my child to school to meet the bus?

"And if parents have any questions they can call me up and ask if the trip is school sponsored or not," he said.

(For two letters on the field trip, please see page 10).

Lot hours cutback

after hours to prom goers.

He explained that even with an officer at the gate, the problem becomes impossible to police because of number of kids involved. The prom goers were "herded out" early, Noonan said.

"People say kids need a place to hang out, but we're not going to condone what goes on down there," he said. "We are going to get more control of the situation and not open the town up to liability."

Cohasset Rotary's Cathy Dwyer is one of a kind

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Cathy Dwyer helped the Cohasset Rotary hit a milestone: election of its first female president.

The local Rotary chapter elected Dwyer — the group's only female member — president of the philanthropic business-owners' organization last month.

Local rotarians will hold a special induction ceremony for her at 6:30 p.m., June 28 at the Log and Line.

Dwyer, 33, said her tenure with the club has been marked by good-natured kidding about her status as the only woman.

"This is a great group, and there's been a lot of teasing," she said. "They are always saying they will put me on the clean-up committee, and if I am lucky, they will make me cook."

The Cohasset Rotary opened its doors to women in the mid-80s, Dwyer said, but few women have joined. She hopes her tenure as president will encourage more female business-owners to become rotarians.

Dwyer, and her brother Robert, own Dwyer's Cleaning Spot in Cohasset. They also own nine other dry cleaning stores on the South Shore.

The newly-elected President said while she doesn't think of herself as a pioneer, her lifestyle gives fellow Rotarians a first-hand glimpse of the challenges she faces as a business-owner with a husband and child.

"I'm probably the only Rotary member who has brought their child to meetings while waiting for their husband to pick him up," she said.

Jamie, Dwyer's nine-month old son, frequently accompanies his mother to work.

"I think it will be interesting," Dwyer said. "I'm female, young and a new mother."

She added that her fellow rotarians have consistently defied the stereotypical behavior of businessmen.

"They threw a baby shower for me," she said. "That was unbelievable that a group of men could think of it and then do it."

The Cohasset Rotary was founded in 1942 and is one of 25,000 local clubs in 175 nations that form Rotary International.

Rotary began in 1905 by a transplanted New Englander, Paul Harris. A native of Vermont, Harris became a Chicago attorney and founded Rotary as a way to encourage philanthropy.

Locally, the Cohasset Rotary gave $20,000 in scholarships to graduating seniors this year, Dwyer said. The Cohasset Rotary has also joined forces with other clubs in its district to purchase livestock for a village in the Dominican Republic and build a well for a village in Ghana.

Dwyer said Rotary, unlike other charitable organizations, uses all donated money toward its cause. She added that none of the money goes toward administration.

"What is so great about Rotary is all the money is used for a project," she said. "You know if you give money to Rotary, it will all go to that project."

Dwyer said Rotary International matches all local contributions to international projects.

The Cohasset Rotary raises money by holding an annual road race, pancake festival, auction and selling advertisements in the local phonebook, she said.

The disease Rotary International has dedicated itself to eradicating, Dwyer said, is polio. Rotary International has raised more than $230 million in pledges to help provide the money to vaccinate children around the world. On "national immunization days," rotarians across the world help health workers dispense the vaccine.

Dwyer said Rotary International is also planning to launch a program to combat the spread of AIDS.

Special pancake breakfast

One of the most popular of recent Cohasset Historical Society events was the special pancake breakfast held on the grounds of the Caleb Lothrop House in celebration of the Lothrop House's 170th anniversary.

This summer the Historical Society will hold a repeat of the special event; a pancake breakfast Sunday, July 11, on the grounds of the famous old house.

Serving hours for the breakfast will be from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tickets will be be available for $5 per adult, $2.50 for children, available from the Society at its Lothrop House headquarters or at the Maritime Museum, Elm Street in the village, during open hours 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays. The Historical Society's phone is 383-6930.

❒ Happy belated fourth birthday to Amelia Catherine Rose Butman!

Amelia celebrated her special day with 47 kids and a purple dinosaur — Barney and Friends. The weather was perfect. Everyone enjoyed themselves, even the moms!

❒ Stop the presses! Rumors says that State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is smiling even more than usual because of the arrival of her brand-new grandson.

Benjamin Philip Curley came on the scene June 22 weighing in at a hefty 9 lbs., 1 oz. (Does Bill Parcells know about this new recruit?) Ben's proud parents are Lillian and Jim Curley of Cohasset. And his paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Curley.

Word has it that Ben's big sister Jenny, 14 months, is tickled "blue" with his arrival too!

Welcome to the world, Ben!

❑ Hats off to Doug Schultz, and don't be surprised if you see him wearing a gold medal around his neck! He was one of eight that placed first when their eight-shell cox came in first on the Charles River.

Called the Youth Invitational Regatta, the race is part of the community rowing program and the time that Doug's boat was clocked was the fastest out of 16 boats! And, Doug's name will be on a plaque in Cambridge!!

Doug and Matt Banks both say that their interest in rowing was started by Jack Buckley's enthusiasm (that's Jack of Cohasset High School fame, a great teacher and a wonderful person!!).

Doug will be attending Colby College in the fall, and hopes to continue rowing, and Matt will be going to Colorado College, hoping to row also. We hope to hear from both!

❑ Seems like we just wrote about it, and it's back!! For the fourth year in a row there will be a tennis tournament to benefit the Children's Hospital. Various courts will be used for the two-day event, to be held July 24 and 25. Details can be given to you by a quick phone call to either Annie Abbruzze or Joy Pratt at 242-9242. Lots of fun was had by all last year, and $$$ were made for the hospital; be a part of this successful event this year.

Marjorie Steele serves up some strawberry shortcake at the Second Congregational Church over the weekend. The strawberryfest has become a Harborfest tradition.

❑ Alison Welz, daughter of Bryan and Eloise Welz of Windsor Rd. earned honors during the spring semester at Skidmore College in New York, and we congratulate her for her efforts! Alison is a 1992 graduate of Cohasset High School.

❑ Hats off to Erin O'Leary who graduated from Notre Dame Academy last month. We wish Erin every good wish as she heads to Washington D.C. to attend Catholic University in the fall. Hope to hear more good things from you, Erin.

❑ Matthew R. Beggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beggan of Sankey Road, earned his BA in history from Saint Anselm College in New Hampshire. Good luck to you and with your future plans, Matthew.

❑ More graduation news, this time from Bryant College. Michael Stevens earned himself a B.S in Business Administration, management concentration.

Congratulations!!

❑ If you see Priscilla Daniels walking around with her head in the clouds, there is a mighty good reason. His name is Myles, and he was born June 14 and he weighed 8 lbs. 8 ozs.. Dad, Jim, and Mom, Kim, are thrilled of course, and Priscilla saw Miles when he was 17 hours old, so she must have some photos — ask her!!

❑ St Lawrence University sends news of two Cohassetites that graduated from the fine school. Daniel Bliss received his Bachelor of Arts Degree. He was an economics major. Dan was also a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity.

Jennifer Martin earned a Bachelor of Science Degree. She was a psychology major and a French major, a member of Chi Omega Sorority, and participated in the International Study Program in France.

❑ Robert V. Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davenport, graduated from Ripon College May 15. He was a history and leadership studies major, and we surely wish him luck in his future endeavors.

❑ Aquinas College at Milton tells us that Martha Maynard received her Associate in Science degree June 6, and we congratulate her!

❑ Had a nice chat with Tom Wigmore recently, he had lots of Sons of the American Legion news to report. Dan Christofell went to Boys State thanks to that organization, and Tom was proud of Dan and his efforts. Tom also attended a convention in Chickopee for three days. And, as most know, Tom was the Commander for the Sons of the American Legion, and is now the Vice Commander, which is a lot of work! Tom is known for his attention to detail, he will continue to do a super job!

❑ Hats off to Andrew R. Kilgore, who made the Dean's List at Emory College.

Continue your good work Andrew!

❑ Charles David Henry graduated from St. Mary's College of Maryland with a major in Economics, and we salute him and wish him a grand future!

Barbara Bursk

Barbara J. Bursk, 59, of Cohasset, a longtime social worker and an accomplished pianist and painter, died of ovarian cancer at home June 20.

A consultant in psychotherapy, she dealt with family issues and relationships for the Marshfield Public Schools, Derby Academy, the Protestant Social Service Bureau in Quincy, Duxbury Counseling Services, and Family Service of Greater Boston.

Mr. Bursk wrote several articles that were published in professional journals.

A native of Pittsburgh, she graduated from Wellesley College in 1955 and received a master's degree in social work in 1976 from Boston University.

She lived for a time with her family in Paris, France, where she played the piano and exhibited her art work in 1969.

She leaves her husband, Edward C. Bursk, Jr.; a son, Edward C. Bursk III of Centreville, VA; two daughters, Dawn Monahan of Seminole, FL., and Katherine Greiner of Buffalo, NY; two brothers, Bradley L. Jacobs of Mission Viejo, CA, and Albert L. Jacobs, Jr. of New York City and five grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. today (June 24) at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Central Cemetery.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Dana-Farber Cancer Center, 44 Binney St., Boston.

Mediocre reformers

In the all too familiar tradition of American politicians, Massachusetts legislators have passed a watered down version of the much vaunted education reform package.

In the words of Silver Lake Regional School District Supt. Paul Squarcia, "(it) will not have a significant impact," on his regional system.

Unfortunately Squarcia's assessment may be applied across the entire commonwealth.

Students, teachers, parents, administrators and society in general, in every town and city, anticipated real reforms and options in schooling.

Typically, the legislators dodged the hard question of school choice, in its many manifestations.

Instead of making difficult decisions regarding public and private school vouchers and real choice, the legislature in this less than courageous act, has made public school choice voluntary at the option of the local school board.

In this way the lawmakers deny real leverage to parents and students to improve local schools.

Some legislators fear that school choice is a cat's paw by which private and parochial schools will prosper at the expense of public institutions.

Maybe.

On the other hand, competition can be seen as a spur to improve public schools—as it is a catalyst in all human endeavor.

But the way the issue has been handled by not handling it face up, assures that only the affluent have real choice when it comes to educating their children.

Indeed, some local school board members like Halifax's Alison Long see the new legislation as a further reduction in local autonomy.

On the up side of this most limited reform package students across the state will be required to meet minimal standards for high school graduation.

Furthermore, the pesky problem of teacher tenure has been addressed with requirements for higher mastery level and competence for teachers as measured against the performance testing of their classes.

The Department of Education helps this by providing more money for advanced education of teachers, enabling them to keep their skills sharp.

While tenure never meant a guaranteed job for life, it was often very difficult to remove incompetent teachers with tenure.

Commonwealth citizens have learned to take what we can get from elected officials, unfortunately, as in this case, it's not enough to help improve public schools—as was intended.

Perhaps our higher expectations should be expressed at the ballot box. Compromising the heart out of a bill because real debate would be too hard for most legislators to deal with, is not acceptable.

Let the mediocrity of the school reform package be a spur to voters who are tired of mediocre representation.

'Class trip' turns into nightmare

To the editor:

What do you do? Your high school student brings home a notice about an end of the year "class trip via school bus" to a Red Sox game. The trip is planned by the class president who happens to be the child of a PSO board member. (Remember that the PSO is the communication link between the parents and school). Even though this is not a "school sponsored" trip you and your child trust the information given that there are to be adult chaperones. The student in charge is an elected leader in the school, so of course we can trust him, can't we?

Your child has gone off in a state of happiness anticipating a pleasant evening with classmates at an all-american pastime. Much to your chagrin your happy child returns home disillusioned and thoroughly disgusted. Their trust has been completely betrayed. There were no adult chaperones provided. Instead of learning camaraderie your child is exposed to the revised ABC's of a growing majority of the Jr./Sr. High population - namely alcohol, beer and cigarettes. These were blatantly consumed by the majority in attendance on the bus and at the ball park. Luckily nothing happened since they were placed in a potentially dangerous situation. What if one of the drunks on the bus bumped the driver and they were involved in an accident? Or, what if, as has happened recently in other Cohasset student alcohol related incidents things were so out of control that police intervention was required?

What is to be done about this? Are we as parents going to turn a blind eye again to this increasing problem that is affecting our children at younger and younger ages? Are we going to yet again ignore our parental responsibilities and neglect our children by condoning this illegal behavior? Can we finally stand up and teach our children in our homes about ethics, honor, respect, responsibility, self-control, and consideration of the health and safety of others? Or are we going to let the "rite of passage" continue with illegal drinking at the beach and other public locations and unchaperoned parties where alcohol is provided?

Remember, it should not be up to the school, the state, our neighbors or the man in the moon to take care of and bring our children up to be caring, moral and responsible adults. We were not forced to have our children and we should not abuse the privilege. Don't our students have the right to grow up in a safe drug and alcohol free environment where they can enjoy a carefree youth and not be coerced by peer and parental pressure to exhibit inappropriate and anti-social behavior?

School officials respond to concerns

Dear Parent or Guardian,

If your son or daughter attended the recent trip to Fenway Park with some members of the Cohasset High School sophomore class, this letter may be of interest to you. There has been some parent concern regarding this trip. The concern seems to be over the alleged use of alcohol and tobacco by some students both on the bus and at the game. Although this was not a school-sponsored event, there seems to be some confusion over whether this was, in some way, sanctioned or condoned by the school. The confusion seems to be a result of the fact that the trip was organized by a member or members of the sophomore class, including a class officer. In addition, the promotional advertisement put out by the student/s contained misleading information. The student "promo" unintentionally misled some students and parents into thinking that this was an official class trip on a Cohasset school bus. Neither was true.

Mr. Ed Leary, sophomore class advisor, upon hearing about the plans for this event sought out the four class officers and made several points very clear:

1) This was not a school sponsored event.

2) The planning of this event should not take place on school time or on school grounds.

3) Cohasset High School and the sophomore class do not support or condone this trip in any way and thus it should not be called a "class trip."

The purpose of this communication is three-fold. One, to notify parents that reliable sources have stated that some students were drinking. Two, to help clear up any confusion over whether this event was school-sponsored or not. And three, to reaffirm our concern for the young people in Cohasset with regard to their use of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

It is a goal of Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School to work cooperatively with parents and community to help promote healthful behaviors for the young people of Cohasset. Accordingly, we have an interest in addressing this issue even when the school is not directly involved. If you are interested in finding out more about this trip, we encourage you to talk to your son/daughter or contact the two 1992 graduates of Cohasset High School who acted as chaperones.

School-sponsored trips require parental permission slips on school stationery signed by the school administration. Further, adequate adult supervision is always provided. Should you have a question about any trips/events in the future please contact the school administration.

Minot's Light replica is beacon for Cohasset

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's Noel Ripley remembers crossing Cunningham Bridge by Sandy Beach as a boy and having a beam of light from Minot's Ledge Lighthouse cross his path.

At that time Ripley had no way of knowing that decades later, he and a small band of volunteers would construct a replica of the famous landmark right on shore.

Without using any taxpayer money, the Cohasset Historical Commission, of which Ripley serves as chairman, has spearheaded the effort that had its roots in the refurbishing of Minot's Light about five years ago.

While the Coast Guard was replacing the stone of the lighthouse, it brought the old granite blocks to Government Island by helicopter.

"Then we had the idea to put it together," Ripley recalls about the stack of Quincy granite.

Although the granite blocks, bell, and the cast-iron rotating mechanism are the only true pieces of the real Minot's Light — all the "new" features being added are exact replicas of the original.

Volunteers have been busy over the past several weeks installing the brass railing and stanchions and glass panels in the lantern room.

Plans are to lobby the Coast Guard for a used Fresnel lens. Ripley explained that the Coast Guard still has lenses from old lighthouses. At one time every lighthouse in the country had a Fresnel lens, which were named after the French physicist A. J. Fresnel. If necessary, the historic commission plans to enlist the help U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds (D-Cohasset) and Sen. Edward Kennedy in locating a lens.

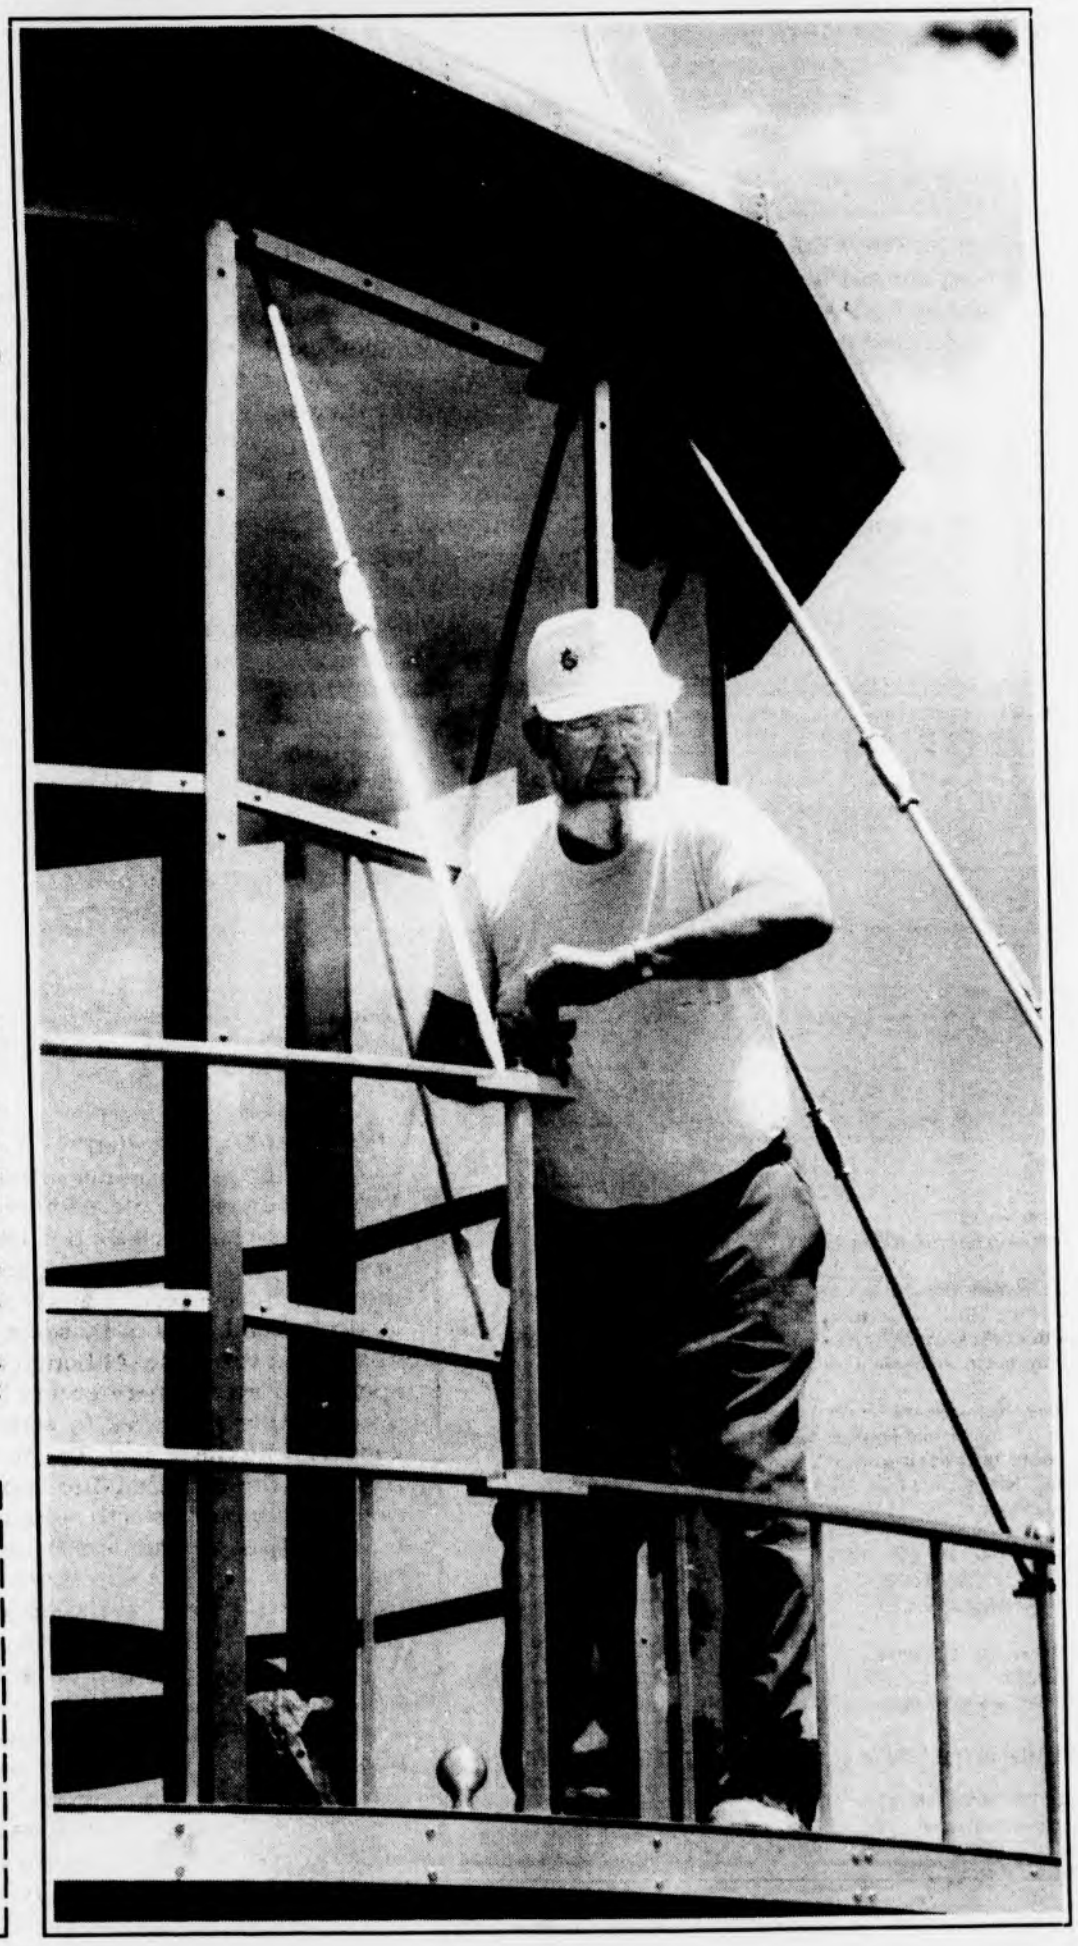
The original bell — which predates the fog horn and now stands near the templates — will eventually be placed on a pedestal on the side of the replica.

Ripley estimates with donated labor, materials and money the project has raised the equivalent of $100,000.

Students in the metal shop at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School have helped out and businesses, like Larry's Glass of Weymouth, provided materials at cost.

Ripley says the project which is close to completion still needs money. Benefactors can "buy" a stanchion for $100 or commemorative prints, tote bags, T-shirts, license plates, and sweatshirts for a range of prices. Donations are tax deductible and checks should be made out to Captain's Walk/Cohasset, and can be sent to Noel Ripley, 179 S. Main St. For information, Ripley can be reached at 383-0234.

Ripley estimates the project needs $10,000 to $15,000 more for completion. He said "lots of little things remain" such as laying bricks inside the watch room; adding a metal staircase; and installing another railing.



Above, John Small screws on a knob on top of the brass railing at the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse replica on Government Island last week. Right, hard at work, Herb Jason is a familiar figure at the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse replica. Jason, along with his brother Ken and grandson John Small have donated hundreds of hours to the project.

To the Editor:

I, Gisley Souza Lima, an A.F.S. exchange student from Brazil, want to thank the town and the people for having given me a unique opportunity for new discoveries. I want you to know the city of Dourados will know what a wonderful part of U.S.A. you really are.

Whoever knows me must be tired of hearing about the high school, most specifically about who works there. They were always very nice and helpful.

I knew different but equally important kinds of work performed by teachers. In a very special way I want to thank the whole administration, my teachers and the friendly secretaries.

I'm lucky to have met people like the ones in the high school. Because of them difficulties were more easily overcome.

political notes

Dems. elect delegates

Cohasset Democrats caucused on Saturday, June 19 and elected the following Democrats to be delegates to the 1993 Massachusetts Democratic Convention: Roseanne McMorris, Donna McGee, Daniel Kearney, and Randall Nash. Elected alternates are John Norris, Arthur O'Leary, Patricia Laugelle, and Karen Corcoran. Democratic State Committeeman Fred Koed and Democratic Town Committee Chairperson Chartis Langmaid will also be delegates.

The 1993 Massachusetts Convention will take place Oct. 16 at the Worcester Centrum. Over 3,500 voting delegates, elected at Party caucuses throughout the state June 19, will be joined by local Democratic Committee Chairpersons, State Committee members, and Democratic Legislators and Constitutional Officers. They will adopt a Party Platform/Political Agenda for Massachusetts and will consider amendments to the "Charter of the Democratic Party of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The Massachusetts Democratic Party Affirmative Action and Outreach Program allows for underrepresented segments of the population to become "Add On Delegates" by sending an application to the Caucus of Minority Democrats, at the headquarters of the Massachusetts Democratic party, 45 Bromfield Street, Boston 02108. Any Cohasset Democrat who is Black, Hispanic, Asian American, Native American, or Cape Verdean; or who is disabled, gay or lesbian, low or moderate income, youth or senior citizen, may apply. The deadline is July 16.

Any registered Democrat in Cohasset may also request to be appointed an election officer by the Selectmen. Please notify Chartis Langmaid at 383-6433 if you which to be included on the list to be submitted. Pay is $5/hour, and you should be available to work the entire election day.

Studds fund-raiser set

More than 100 South Shore supporters of US Rep. Gerry Studds are expected to attend a fund-raising reception in Hingham next weekend to benefit the Congressman's 1994 reelection campaign.

The reception will be held Sunday, June 27 from 4 to 6 p.m. at Caroline and John Stouffer's home at 7 Howard Road in Hingham.

Studds supporters from the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland, Scituate, and Weymouth are welcome.

The reception is informal and contributions to the Congressman's 1994 reelection campaign are encouraged.

Anyone interested in the June 27 event, or in future events in Brockton, Quincy, and on Cape Cod, may call the Studds for Congress headquarters at 617/984-1994.

MWRA reform supported

State Senator Brian J. McDonald says that a bill that he and Representative Ronald Mariano filed which would prevent the MWRA from taking Local Aid funds from communities has taken a major step forward in the uphill battle to become law.

According to McDonald, the bill has been sent to the Taxation Committee as the first step in the legislative process.

McDonald also said that he was encouraged that Senator William Keating (D-Sharon), who is the Senate Chairman of the Taxation Committee, has signed onto the bill.

Estate of FRANCES W. PERKINS AKA: FRANCES JACKSON PERKINS late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that SAMUEL PERKINS of NEWTON in the County of MIDDLESEX and EDWARD M. CONDIT, Jr., of WESTON in the County of MIDDLESEX be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on July 14, 1993.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this first day of June, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-three.

Festival weekend is biggest ever

Saturday's rain came late in a very hot day. And during the parade Sunday it sprinkled but not enough to send people for cover.

Lagrotteria easily put a positive spin on the weather.

"It (rain) chased everyone off the beach," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Martha Gjesteby said she was "dumbfounded" by the number of vendors this year. Booths occupied both sides of the town common for the first time.

"Adding performing arts was a real plus," she said. "And it is great to see so many local groups involved.

"I always love a parade and anything that involves different groups in town, I'm all for," Gjesteby said.

But Gjesteby had her druthers, she'd add one more event to the jam-packed weekend.

"Fireworks. I love fireworks," she said.

Harborfest became a part of the annual arts festival a few years back when the arts festival was losing money and in danger of not being held.

Lagrotteria got the idea for harborfest from a similar event in Palm Beach and then got together with Bob Martin of the Chamber of Commerce to set the wheels in motion for a combined event.

And the rest is history.

At the Chowderfest, dozens waited in line to sample some of the area's finest clam chowders. Local restaurants competed for the coveted 'clam' award.

There was no shortage of opinions on chowder — thick or thin.

"I like the milky chowder — with bellies and all, like my mother used to make it," observed Jane Brown, a transplanted Cohasseter from Florida.

Her husband, Arnie Brown, said they'd sampled the strawberry shortcake at the Second Congregational Church before walking over to the chowderfest.

"That way you know you have room for dessert (if you have it first)," Mr. Brown said laughingly.

And things were hopping at the Second Congregational hot dog/hamburger tent. Late in the day Sunday, the only glitch serving hot dogs in hamburger rolls because the hot dog rolls had run out. But no complaints were heard.

"The only time it slowed down was for 15 minutes during the parade," exclaimed Georgine Butman, a fixture in the tent for three days.

Planning for next year begins almost immediately but not before Lagrotteria savored the success of 1993's event.

"The whole concept is pulling together organizations in the town that ordinarily do their own thing like the Legion, fire department, council on aging...into one big celebration of Cohasset.

"That's what the whole damn thing is about and it's working!"

The services make it the right place to live, but the people make it home.

I love my apartment, and having friends right next door. It's a treat to have someone else cook dinner every night and worry about security and maintenance. River Bay Club feels like home . . . only better.

Jones rebounds in Decathlon

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It's tough to keep a good man down, but it's even tougher to find a wisp of pessimism from Cohasset's Ray Jones. Two days after placing a somewhat disappointing seventh in the triple jump with a leap of 44'10" at the New England Track and Field Championships, the two-time state champ charted unfamiliar territory when he entered the State Decathlon Championships.

Jones, who was recently named to The Boston Globe All-Scholastic Track Team, admits he wasn't anticipating an earth-shattering performance his first time competing in the demanding 10-event competition at Masconomet Regional High School in Boxford.

"I expected to do lousy because I didn't get a chance to practice for all the events," Jones said, after returning from a day-trip to Trinity College where he'll be competing in football and track.

Jones, though, showed he is more than a one-event athlete by placing second to Andover's Steve Shepard with 6,209 points after forging ahead by 300 points during the first day.

To no one's surprise, Jones' best events turned out to be the long and triple jumps. He had the furthest marks in each with leaps of 21'8" and 44'10". Still, Jones didn't foresee victory quite yet. He was disappointed with his 400-meter time of 54 and 101' javelin toss, which Jones considered his worst event of the 10.

"I didn't know until the day after (that he was leading)," Jones said, "but I was still pretty shaky because I knew the throwing events were going to kill me."

Jones said he plans to work on his technique in the throwing events in the future and enjoyed his experience in the decathlon so much, he intends to try it again sometime in the future.

"I did the decathlon for fun," Jones said. "I just went out there to have a good time."

Jones was far more serious at the New England Championships where he was trying to improve on his fourth-place finish of last spring. After setting a personal best of 46' 1-1/4" to win the All-State Meet for the second year in a row, Jones found himself up against some heady opponents from Connecticut and Rhode Island.

"There were some fifty-foot jumpers and some forty-eight," he said. "It was pretty impressive."

Jones had trouble during his run-ups before the competition got underway. He was having a problem finding his proper mark from where he begins his jump and believes it hurt him in the competition. Physically, Jones didn't feel his best either.

"I couldn't get that spring," he said. "I just couldn't find it."

Despite his performance, Jones couldn't be happier with his season. He had a new personal best and the New England Meet proved to be his only defeat. Even on his best day it is unlikely Jones would have come anywhere close to the 50-foot leap that won the title.

"I'm really happy how the state and league meets turned out," he said.

Involved in track and field for just two years, Cohasset head coach Tom O'Neil said he would like to see Jones "make a stab at the Olympics" in '96.

"He has dominated every event he has ever done," O'Neil said.

With the track season behind him, Jones intends to turn his full attention to football. He has planned a heavy regiment of lifting, running and conditioning over the summer. Jones doesn't expect to wrestle this winter, but plans to concentrate on getting in shape for track and concentrating on his studies instead.

He's ready to make the high school/college transition.

"I'm looking forward to college in general," he said. "I'm really happy about it."

That's no surprise when it comes to an optimistic attitude like Jones'.

The high school sports season ended with the close of the spring state tournaments this week.

Now is the time for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association to make a few changes in the way high school athletics is run.

Here are some random suggestions from the Extra Points Crew.

No. 1 — Make all the state tourney baseball games seven innings long. For whatever reason, only Division 1 teams play nine innings in the state tourney after a full regular season of seven-inning games. Keep all games the same number of innings throughout the entire season. We think seven innings is best because of the number of games, the long travel for some away games and the strain on teenage pitching arms. Keep nine innings for the Major Leagues. However, the Red Sox should play only three innings. They would have a better chance to win and you could make it home from Fenway at a reasonable hour.

No. 2 — Have umpires for the tennis matches. Believe it or not, players, not impartial umpires, make the in and out calls during regular season and tourney matches. This frequently leads to controversy and after watching players like John McEnroe on TV, it is obvious that tennis players are not the most stable athletes around. Imagine Roger Clemens calling the balls and strikes? Yikes. There would be 27 K's in every game.

No. 3 — Schedule state tourney hockey games at least in the same area code. We don't know how many times we had to travel to Watertown or North Andover to watch games between South Shore based state tourney teams. There are many top of the line hockey rinks on the South Shore like the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham and the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. Use the local talent whenever possible. If this scheduling keeps up, we will be traveling to Quebec for next year's tourney.

No. 4 — Lose the open tournament in the boys' and girls' basketball season. This is without a doubt THE most ludi-

Busy summer expected at swim center pool

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Saturday was the first day residents could take the plunge into the Cohasset Swim Center's pool, but for co-director Matt Buckley and other staff members, preparation for the June 19 opening began nearly a month ago.

Buckley, 22, who has worked at the center for the past six years — one as co-director — was busy Friday morning putting the finishing touches on ongoing work he has been doing to spruce up the pool and its surrounding area. Along with first-year employee Chris Anderson, 18, who will lifeguard and teach swimming lessons this summer, Buckley cleaned the pool and cleared the adjacent parking lot of any broken glass and debris as temperatures crept into the mid-80s. Add the toiling in the hot sun to the weeding, spreading of mulch, weeding and other maintenance work, and it's easy to see why Buckley already has a deep tan.

Even with the majority of the grunt work out of the way, Buckley didn't expect the job to get any easier once the pool opened for the summer.

But he wasn't complaining.

"You get to deal with people and talk to people," he said during a short, mid-morning break. "It's a good summer job — one of the best you can have."

The center is an indispensable town resource for novice and competitive swimmers alike from the 19th to September 4. Red Cross swimming lessons are available at 10 different levels. Beginner A, the first class, is structured for individuals who never have had lessons, have difficulty floating and are not comfortable in the water.

The most advanced level, lifeguard, requires the individual to swim 500 yards, tread water for a timed period, maintain a survival float and be able to do a front dive. The center's 11 lifeguards, all of whom range in age from 17-22, are certified.

There is also an Infant Swim class and Water Babies lessons. An Adapted Aquatics class designed especially for special needs students is offered as well.

Competitive swimmers needn't have to travel out of town to join a club. The Cohasset Swim Team and diving squad do their workouts at the pool. Try-outs for both rosters will begin shortly and the swim team has a new coach in Kathy Vaughn.

Of course, there are scheduled times for Free Swims, which Buckley says attracts the most people. On a hot day during the week, as many as 100-200 swimmers have been known to seek out the pool. Just as many show up on weekends, although the numbers appear deceivingly low.

"On a hot summer day during the weekend there are a lot of people here too," said Buckley. "But it's a longer day (Free Swim) and they come at different times.

"It's good for families," Buckley went on to say. "Kids seem to enjoy it. There are always people who swim there laps in the morning and at night. It's good because kids can ride their bikes here. It's better than sitting in front of the TV."

Dodgers finish undefeated

Led by retiring pitchers Matt Lewis and Greg Bilton, the blue-shirted Dodgers accomplished a rare feat in Cohasset by completing their season without a loss. Kyle Bunstein pitched well for the stubborn Red Sox, who took the lead early in the game and would not let the Dodgers rest on thei past laurels. Wiley Wakeman, John Pau Laugelle and Justin Golden played exceptionally well in the field for the Sox. Brian Hurley and Sean Chase gave great performances for the Dodgers.

The All-Star game, held last Sunday was described as a wonderful show of baseball and a lot of fun and will be reported in detail in next week's column. Major League Playoffs, known for their surprise endings, began Monday night and will be held at Barnes Field through July 1. Con on down and see your favorite players finish out their season, or in the case of the 12 year olds, who have given us such super performances, finish out their Major League careers. It's last licks for snack-shack hot dogs or nachos and an evening of great entertainment with local talent.

Dodger pitcher Matt Lewis winds up his Major League career in Cohasset Little League next week when the playoffs end.

Welz leads Land Sharks to first win

By John Rolandelli
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Land Sharks took the field for the first time Monday taking a 7-1 bite out of Avon.

Nick Welz hurled all seven innings for the Sharks, striking out 14 of the 24 batters he faced, while yielding just two base hits, one unearned run, and no walks. Welz's fastball painted the corners of the plate and his curveball did the rest.

The Sharks padded Welz with seven runs on 10 hits, beginning on a double by the game's first batter, centerfielder, John Maynard (3-for-5, three runs scored) who was later driven in on a base hit by Peter Fahey. However, the frenzy continued in the third when Maynard led off with a single, catcher Chris Rolandelli walked, and Fahey singled to load the bases for a two RBI single off the bat of Andy Church.

Other notable performances include the defenstve play and pitch calling of catcher Chris Rolandelli, a long double ripped by Ben Berger, which fell inches shy of a home run, and a basehit by David Leahy in his first at bat since Little League.

The Sharks next game is a tentatively scheduled double header versus Canton this weekend at the Shark Tank (Milliken Field).

Twenty sailboats expected in regatta

The 10th Annual Sullivan Regatta will be held June 26 to 27 in Cohasset. More than 20 210-design sailboats, skippered by top captains and crews from Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham, are expected to participate in the five race, eight to 10-mile triangular Gold Cup Olympic Courses.

Sponsored by the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Sullivan Regatta honors Richard A. Sullivan, a Cohasset resident and attorney, who was instrumental in unifying the 210 class, upgrading the competition in both the East Coast and Mid-West regions and establishing the non-profit status of the organization. Mr. Sullivan is a past president of the Association and an "indefatigable worker" for the organization.

crous of the MIAA's high school revisions We know they have an open tournament in Indiana but this is not Indiana. We are in Massachusetts, the home of Thoreau and Hawthorne, not Bird and Buckner. We value and reward hard work and excellence. Having a team qualify for the post-season even if it loses every game goes against the goals of our great Commonwealth. Basketball fans in Massachusetts unite. All you have to lose is your chains.

No. 5 — Resolve this Plymouth High School mess. Should they have one team for each school or one team for the whole town. Maybe they should have three teams, two Turtle Doves and a Partridge in a Pear Tree. Whatever the solution is, find it quick. Lawyers should be eaten by dinosaurs and not be involved in high school sports.

No. 6 — When selecting the league all-star teams have the coaches simply vote for the best players that season. Too many times undeserving players get selected because they are seniors capping off a mediocre career or are the sons or daughters of some ex-coach who all the other coaches used to golf with. This year the second leading soccer scorer in one of the Pilgrim Conference's three leagues was left off the all-star team because it was his first year of varsity player after moving to the area from another country. Politics should not be in factor in choosing all-star teams. Leave politics to experts like Billy Bulger, Ray Flynn and Bill Clinton.

No. 7 — Change the All-State Cross-Country Championship back to one race instead splitting it into two divisions. At no time during the fall do the best runners gather on the same starting line to determine a true state champion. School size has very little to do with how well a team fares in cross-country. Brockton High School is a perfect example. There's little doubt that Cambridge Ringe & Latin's Jesse Cody still would have captured the overall title, but the second through 10th spots could have had some definite surprises.

The Regal Begal may have been a swinging hangout on the TV sitcom Three's Company, but don't expect to find Chrissy Snow in the establishment of the same name in Worcester.

During the fifth inning of Saturday's Division 2 State Championship game between East Bridgewater and Clinton, the announcer in the press box told the fans that cars parked in the nearby restraunt would be towed if they weren't moved.

"How do they know the people are all at the game," one reporter queried.

"Because there's never more than two people inside," said the other scribe, obviously familiar with the restaurant.

Check please.

In the top of the seventh inning, one reporter sensed Clinton would take the game when their turn at bat came.

"They're boarding up the windows in Clinton right now," he said.

Wonder if he caught any of the Stanley Cup Finals?

A cable station that was covering the game said that the surviving members of the 1949 Clinton High School championship squad wanted to wish the '93 team good luck. It just goes to show that deceased players don't bother going out of the way to support their alma mater.

Soccer camp registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer camp, for children ages four to seven years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, age four to seven. ABC Soccer is especially designed for four and five year olds and meets for 8:00 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 19-23. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 19-23, for six and seven year olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School.

Step training programs offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering both introduction and Fat Burner, Power Step Training programs this summer, taught by Ms. Normandie Nigh of Fit for Success. Classes meet at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium as follows:

"Intro to Step" — a 60-minute class appropriate for beginning to intermediate participants, it includes basic stepping, stretching, and toning which can be adapted for all fitness levels. The class is held Monday and Wednesday nights at 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Special pricing is available for monthly sign-ups and drop-ins are welcome.

"Fatburner Workout with Power Step" — If you love step training, but want to take it to the next level, this class is for you! This is a 90-minute workout consisting of a combination of stepping and toning exercises to help you increase strength and burn fat more efficiently. It is taught by Normandie Nigh, Monday and Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Ten sessions are available and drop-ins are welcome.

Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791 for more information, or you may register at class times.

South Shore Art Festival taps the senses

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Raindrops may have fallen on Cohasset village Sunday, but they couldn't put a damper on anybody's parade.

A sea of bumbershoots bobbed about the duck pond and the rest of the common where Harborfest and art festival goers gawked at arts and crafts, bought balloons and gewgaws and consumed fair fare. And in the midst of it all, the art tent anchored all the festivities as it has long before the Harborfest was even the hint of a glimmer to come in Jim Lagrotteria's eye.

Like fingerprints or snowflakes, no two works of art are ever quite the same. The juried art and photography exhibitions displayed more than 250 different ways of thinking about, seeing and expressing the creative act. Some dazzled the eye, some tickled the funny bone and others just left you wondering.

BEST IN SHOW AWARD

The award for Best in Show belonged to Virginia Allen's Broken and Mended. Avery painted a window display where light danced through old pieces of broken and cracked art glass vases, bowls and bottles bringing the jewel-like colors of the glass alive.

Allen's oil, Marsh Snow, was also singled out for an honorable mention. This must have been Allen's glass period, for this time we were treated to a woman with a corolla of fuzzy white hair and cobalt blue eyeglasses peering through a glassware display.

OILS AND ACRYLICS

First prize in the oil and acrylic division went to a work totally unlike Allen's.

Where Allen's work shimmered like light through stained glass, Tony Andrade took a different tack. His Big Still One gave us a Granny Smith apple and two lemons rendered in a flatter, more opaque way. The sort-of green, sort-of yellow palette of the fruit was set off by a dark, almost Prussian blue background.

Andrade seems to favor softer colors and stone-like textures as they showed up again in his oil Distant Blessing Two .

Distant Blessing Two gave us a galaxy of comic-book style satellites. Andrade's honorable mention satellites and the background were rendered in granite grays zapped with luminous crayon-box purples, golden oranges and magentas.

Gene Zupkofska took second prize with the oil, Succumbed with Dignity. Zupkofska showed us a table, pot and shoe trees painted in stark and simple style. If the Shakers had been known for art as they have been for furniture, this is how and what they would taken as their subject matter.

One of the drawbacks of the art festival is you are forever trying to weave your way in and around crowds and other obstacles. M.F. Mangrove's Fish Jug with Fruit must have been there somewhere, but we lost sight of it in the midst of cotton-candy toting kids, friends catching up on old times and art aficionados catching the work from every angle. The judges loved the piece enough to give it a third prize in the oil and acrylic category.

Honorable mentions for oil and acrylic also went to Kimberlee Alemian for her brooding Requiem, Lisa Johnson's warm portrait of Ken Coleman, Lisa Russell's mysterious*#28 Painting*, June Angier's lush and misty landscape, Ireland, and M. McSweeney's Untitled sheep with the knowing smile.

WATERCOLORS

First prize in watercolor went to Chris Morrison for Traveler's Treasures. This was a painting for arm chair sensualists who revel in color and foreign locales. Morrison's collection of souvenirs from exotic locales was rendered in deep blues, lush purples, vivid pinks and warm golds. Morrison showed us a painting within the painting of a Indian miniature of an elephant and a Chinese vase full of flowers.

Carol Carney invited us to The Luncheon and took second prize for her efforts. This painting, too, gave us a feast for the eyes as she set her Victorian tea table with cranberry glass and fed us raspberries presented on lace while deep pink tulips threatened to tumble out of the vase.

On the other hand, Irena Roman took us to*Irving's*, a tiny toy and card shop tucked into an alley way. The little red store slipcased between bigger buildings welcomed the browser and serious buyer to come in and buy. Roman won third prize for her colorful city scene.

Honorable mentions in this category covered a wide spectrum of subject and style. Sergio Roffo focused on an Adirondack porch chair overlooking Cotuit Harbor/ Cape Cod, Laura Bonetsky showed us a proud and beautiful African woman in Study of a Woman, Ellen Hellman opened up Grandma's Cupboard and invited us to pick up tobacco tins and spice boxes rendered in colors usually reserved for old-time circus posters, Betty Archer's artist's eye followed a roly poly woman with a shopping bag Going Home, Dorit Flowers dazzled us with Geraniums, Michael Petringa's brush tip recreated the restful world of World's End-Hingham while Gordon K. Lundberge gave us a less perfect day at the beach in a Still Life in Sand featuring a crumbling sea wall and broken shovel.

DRAWINGS AND PASTELS

Tony Andrade collected a second blue ribbon with Discovery I. This time Andrade focused in on one of his satellites. Discovery I looked like a futuristic, high tech jack-o-lantern rendered in granite gray zapped with luminous cobalt blues, fiery orange gold and violets.

If Andrade gave us something out of a sci-fi vision, Donna Basile moved into the warm sphere of a mother and child for second prize. Basile's crowd-pleasing Joseph and Mommy's Poke-a-dotted Skirttails showed a fair-haired moppet smiling shyly at the viewer while clinging like a barnacle, safe in the harbor of Mom's leg and love.

Third prize went to Katherine Smit for High Fashion Model, a portrait of a no-longer-young woman decked out in a purple ensemble. High cheekbones may fall and crow's feet etch the eyes, but character endures. Such a face!

Another older woman caught the eyes of the judges. Catherine Gillespie took an honorable mention For Grammy. This soft colored pencil drawing convinces us the eyes have it, but then there's the smile. This is a loving portrait of a lovely woman.

Other honorable mentions were deserved by R. Robinson's Liz and Tom Lucas' woman on The Balcony.

GRAPHICS

Graphics tend to demand more time than a festival tent allows. Print makers either give you more to look at or more to think about than is apparent at first glance. The art festival was no exception.

Don Lettis may have gotten his shapes all tangled up in string, but his*Untitled* monoprint took first place. In contrast, E. Mandeville Avery took a cow, stripped it down to the minimum and then went one step farther. This two part etching, Full Circle, showed us a cow skull in the first panel and then took that skull to its essential lines in the second for second prize.

Striper, C. M. Harden's third prize etching, taught a different lesson. Harden showed us precisely what a fish looks like at the top part of his frame and then the bottom section showed us the fishing lures it takes to catch that fish.

Esther Maschio's monoprint was the sort of art work that keeps viewers from wandering off by keeping them wondering. Maschio took a dark cruciform shape and overlaid it with handprints. What were the hands reaching for and did they find it — it remains a mystery in her Mystification. Other honorable mentions were won by E. Mandeville Avery for Dreaming the Moon and Linda Onishi/Dunn's Ice Obi print.

MIXED MEDIA

Jean Fox created papers in soft earth tones and folded, tied and put them together in intricate patterns to create the award-winning Autumn Harvest 1 & 2. Judith Emanuel also created an elaborate birch bark-like backdrop for her pen and ink additions to create a design resonate with Native American elements in Theatre of Intricacy. Emmanuel earned three honorable mentions as well, for Innermost Pique, Paphos and Tideland Flat..

Shawn Robertson captured the whimsy award as well as third prize for Rhinoblade. As you might guess, the subject was, indeed, a rhinoceros on rollerblades sporting a propeller-equipped beanie and clutching books. Robertson's more sedate side was demonstrated in Untitled, a fish skeleton and it mirror image caught in that marvelous kind of deep sea green when strong sunlight filters down through tropical seas.

Honorable mentions also go to Lisa Wald's Midnight Race and N. Connolly's Monument to Motherhood.

SCULPTURE/3-D

Sculpture seems to be the most underrepresented category in all of the South Shore Art Center's exhibits. This exhibit was no exception, with only a handful of entrants.

The largest piece, Motivations I by Wayne Krause, took first prize. This dramatic steel sculpture took big swoops and then reversed back on it self as though aspiring and falling short of the mark, but trying once more to reach some goal.

Ron Mello's Raku Vessel, worked in clay, was another exhibit we couldn't find for the crowds constantly swirling around the tent.

Daisies may or may not tell, but wood only hints at its secrets. Hank Cahill's *Cherry Burl Globe*was a wonderful glossy piece of wood shaped into a rotund bowl with peek-a-boo holes where branches once grew. This piece begged to be touched, rubbed, picked up and examined from every angle. Those who didn't stoop down to peek through the holes missed some wonderful swirls of grain.

Crist N. Filer took an honorable mention for Caviar and Spoon. Filer filled an oyster shell with glossy black marbles, perched it on a block of wood encircled with chains and topped it off with a spoon against the back "wall" of the piece.

Claudia Zimmerman reached into the tempest and brought forth Prospero. Her magician is a wise old concocted out of clay. In addition to his peaked hat and [illegible]k, Prospero can now sport an honorable mention.

PHOTOGRAPHY

If your idea of photography is point, shoot, develop, the photographers represented in the juried photography exhibit had some real surprises for you.

The exhibit was divided into color, black & white and special effects categories. In a new addition, some of the exhibits had notes explaining the rationale of the jurors in selecting the work on display. It was a change that deserves to be kept and expanded.

Like the majority of the photographers on display, Saverio Truglia chose to work in color. But Truglia pushes color beyond its normal hues and overlaps images to create a photograph nature never intended. His first prize photograph, Dad's Denied Condition, is one case in point. Truglia mixed up images of fruit, a claw foot tub and a nude torso with an intensely red palette. Truglia's Untitled, an honorable mention entry, used overlays of Renaissance cherubs and a nude that might have been painted by Maxfield Parish in a lush color palette.

Disparate elements were also at work in Nicolas Nobili's Automatic Dryer, N.Z. The apparently abandoned dryer was bedecked with floral offerings. It created a juncture of technology and ancient totems.

Ronald Wilson took a different approach. Where Truglia created a composite reality and Nobili made a statement about the relativity of reality, Wilson turned his camera on a scene chosen for its beauty alone.

Wilson pushed the Annisquam Light, Gloucester to the back and focused his lens on the sea grass, rocks and tidal pool. The deep greens of the grass and strong lines of the rock are suffused by a light so pure and strong it could break your heart.

Honorable mentions in the color photography category went to Steve Coren for his close up of a Red Sea Anemone, Clare Demarest's flower-bedecked Maienfeld Station, Leslie Kilduff's Autumn Sky so impossibly blue and crackled with bare branches and Nicolas Nobili's Roses Are Red.

BLACK & WHITE

David Murray created art out of design — and created design out of Venus Flytrap flowers and leaves for Venus II. This huge photograph relied on the relationship Murray set up among strong light, shadow and pattern. It is a striking, bold piece of work that leaves the viewer aware he'll never look at the plant in quite the same casual way again.

If Murray took first with a dramatic and contemporary look, Gayle Hilary went back to a softer, more romantic style for her Untitled landscape with its soft focus that invites us in to go wandering. Hilary also won honorable mention for My Grandfather's Tree.

Third prize was won by Jack Foley's Arabesque. The strongly defined muscles of the torso stand in strong contrast to the diaphanous fabric the model holds. The pose shows the ability of both body and mind to strive to defy gravity.

Honorable mention also went to P. Harmel for Through a Screen Door.

SPECIAL EFFECTS

Leslie Kilduff of Autumn Sky fame also took a first prize in special effects for The Orchard. The Orchard is a very small and charming print of two children in a garden setting. The intimacy of the scene draws the viewer into their world.

The most interesting special effect on display won second prize for Sheryl Albano. Albano used a flashlight to create the illusion her subject was being consumed by flames in Under Control.

Third place went to Molly Lynch for Colour Magic, a closeup of a rose transferred onto handmade paper. Lynch's work drew high praise from the judges, but festival goers had no way of knowing how wonderful it was. The photograph was at the art center undergoing repairs.

Honorable mentions for special effects went to Melinda Brown for Outside Jumper, Jack Foley for Tobago Cays and Russell D. Quackenbush for his Untitled flowers that were a play of shape and color, line and curve, light and shadow.

Like the strawberry, the art festival season comes and goes too quickly to truly savor its bounty. If you failed to make tracks to Cohasset village, the only thing left to do is visit the art center in hopes they've harvested some of its fruits.

Logo design contest

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 is holding a logo design contest for Cohasset students in grades 7-12. The prize is a $100 savings bond.

Logo designs for T-shirts for the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund must be submitted by July 31 to the American Legion Post, 93 Summer St. (between the hours of 3 and 10 p.m.) or mailed to PO Box 118, Cohasset 02025.

Christine was a student at Cohasset High who lost her life in an automobile accident in 1987. T-shirts bearing the winning logo will be on sale at the Christine Burke Memorial Fund Clambake Sept. 11 at Sandy Beach. A scholarship in Christine's memory is awarded annually to a student selected by the American Legion post.

The Mariner has Cohasset covered. Call 1-800-649-6661 to subscribe.

Pierson to Person closes season with two segments

There's lots on cable-TV this week. Don't miss the last "live" Pierson to Person of the season at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 3. Pierson's guest for the first segment is Dr. Charles Post, an ophthalmologist, who will discuss eye surgery developments, contact lenses, and sun glasses.

At 8:30 p.m., Pierson hosts two representatives from the FEMA, a federal agency, who will discuss the dune project in Scituate and the federal buy-out of property on Peggotty Beach.

During the summer the "best" of Pierson to Person from the 1992-93 season will be televised.

Wednesday, June 30 on Channel 3, Cohasseters can see Children's Corner at 6:30 p.m. with Bob Detwiler. Detwiler will read "Matreshka," and "Anast Goes Fishing".

On the Detwiler Journal at 7 p.m. that same evening, Detwiler interviews Dr. Robert I. Rudko, president of PLC Systems who will talk about "Transmiocardial Revascularization (TMR)".

Gala to benefit new outreach program at Conservatory

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

How does an elegant evening in a home with spectacular views of Hingham Bay and the Boston skyline sound?

Add music by the Perry Rossi Orchestra and a gourmet dinner by "The Catered Affair" and it's even better.

And to top it off proceeds from the event go for a good cause.

The 1993 "Arts for All" Gala is being sponsored by the South Shore Conservatory to provide seed money for a study to develop an expressive therapy program at the community music school.

The black tie event is Saturday, June 26 at the Jones estate on Merrill Street on Crow Point just a stone's throw from the Hingham Yacht Club.

Conservatory director James Simpson sees expressive therapy — which utilizes the arts in rehabilitation — as a natural extension of the school's mission of providing access to quality education in the arts.

"The key word is access — reaching people," Simpson notes.

"Our plan is to spend a year developing a therapeutic program here," he explains. The conservatory would then like to have an expressive therapist on staff who would also be available to train volunteers and provide outreach services for the elderly, the public schools, local hospitals and visiting nurse associations, he said.

Simpson says all too often therapists are trained to look "clinically" and not "emotionally" at people. He feels that arts can provide the key to that emotional connection.

"Expressive therapy is an area the conservatory should be in. I see a great need," he said.

The South Shore Conservatory, a non-profit organization, was established in 1969 after the New England Conservatory of Music preparatory school in Hingham was in danger of folding for fiscal reasons.

At that time the mission of the school, which had been to prepare students for music college, was changed to the concept of a community music school accessible to all.

The school, whose headquarters are in Hingham at the old Naval Depot off Fort Hill Street, has campuses in Duxbury and Brockton and serves about 2,000 South Shore families.

For more information about the "Arts for All" gala, please call the conservatory at 749-7565.

Some of the organizers of the "Arts for All" gala include (L-R) co-chairs Jane Carr and Vcevold Strekalovsky and committee members Cynthia Wessling and Jim Simpson, who is director of the South Shore Conservatory shown here by the garden at the Jones estate in Hingham.

And a great time was had by all!

The annual South Shore Arts Center Festival/Cohasset Harborfest, June 18 thru 20, was a huge success and a wonderful community effort. 1993 marked the 38th continuous year for the Arts Festival while the Harborfest celebrated its 3rd year of existence.

The pre-planning and final conduct of the various events of both festivals is proof positive of what people can do when they work together in a spirit of cooperation for the benefit of all. Cohasset Savings Bank is proud to have participated in this great community event and we congratulate the South Shore Arts Center and the Cohasset Harborfest Committees on a job well done!

Finally, to Jeremiah Stevenson of Cohasset on winning the $500 Series EE Savings Bond, CONGRATULATIONS!

Viking saga proposed for rocky shores

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

If Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road residents look out their windows this summer and see a Viking ship heading toward the rocky shore, it won't be figment of their imagination.

Cambridge-based Lara Classics, Inc., a film production company, wants to shoot several scenes off the Cohasset coast.

Mark Donadio, the producer of the non-profit company's latest venture about a fictitious Viking and Native American encounter set 1,000 years ago, asked selectmen for permission to film off the shore near Cunningham Bridge and along Jerusalem Road.

Selectmen gave Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon authority to give Donadio the okay once the logistical details and insurance matters are worked out and once the board determines what fee to charge based on the amount of time the company would film in Cohasset.

Historically the town has asked for some compensation from production companies whether they are making a feature film or a commercial.

Also from the photographs of Cohasset Donadio presented Monday, the board could not determine how much private property would be involved in the filming. Donadio would have to get permission from those property owners, selectmen said.

Lincoln named acting fire chief

Captain Roger W. Lincoln will serve as acting fire chief effective July 7.

Citing personal reasons, Fire Chief John Nadeau is resigning July 6 to accept the position of Fire Chief in Salem, New Hampshire.

Selectmen said Monday that Nadeau recommended Lincoln as acting chief. Lincoln is the town's most senior captain, holds an associate degree is fire science, and resides in town.

He will be paid the "chief's rate" while serving as acting chief, selectmen said.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyon explained that the chief's rate is determined by taking the chief's annual salary and dividing it by 52. Nadeau's salary is $48,500.

A subcommittee of two selectmen, Merle Brown and Jane Goedecke, are exploring the possibility of having a joint fire chief with Scituate. The town is also advertising to fill the chief's position in order to weigh the pros and cons of sharing a chief as opposed to the Education 'funding' bill needs a lot of explaining

By Sean P. Sweeney
Mariner correspondent

The Education Reform bill is continuing to spark conversation and confusion throughout Cohasset and most other communities across the state.

The recent meeting of the Cohasset School Committee served as a forum for some very general discussion about some of the bill's major components. But according to School Superintendent Stephen Hart, the complex regulations which accompany it must be completely read and analyzed before the ramifications to the town are understood.

Hart stated that it is his understanding that a local law firm and the Association of School Superintendents will both sponsor forums to discuss the bill and its meaning to communities throughout the state.

One of the most talked about provisions of the bill is the early retirement plan for teachers.

According to Hart, retirement benefits for teachers are determined by multiplying a factor determined by a teacher's age by his or her number of years of service. The product of this multiplication translates to that

Walkway is latest village renaissance

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Thanks to a hearty group of volunteers the walkway that runs from the town parking lot to South Main Street is no longer an eyesore.

The James Brook Walkway was dedicated at a ceremony Saturday morning.

"Now the pavement is strong and smooth, and carefully graded for proper drainage; a lovely privet hedge and flowers have replaced weeds, a new stockade fence and wooden posts have replaced the old fence.

"A beautiful wooden sign welcomes people, and three magnificent cast-iron lamps dignify the walkway and will light it up at night," said Jackie Dormitzer chairman

Cohasset's week

Holiday landfill hours

The Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility will be closed Sunday, July 4 for the holiday, and open Monday, July 5 for the convenience of Cohasset residents.

Three vie for COA seat

Selectmen interviewed three residents for two openings on the Council on Aging.

Margaret Bates, 365 Beechwood St., is a registered nurse who retired 1-1/2 years ago as assistant vice president of nursing at Jordan Hospital.

Bates said she knows a lot of the elders in town and has experience in setting policy which is one of the charges of the board.

Linda McCarthy, 38 Lantern Lane, is a registered nurse who works part-time in the home healthcare field. She said her experience would be an asset to the board and she would work to foster intergenerational programs and activities.

Frances Walton, 8 Forest Ave., owns a small boarding kennel, is active in the Social Service League, drove the senior shuttle for many years, and drives cancer patients.

Walton said she is friends with many of the town's elders and would like to get involved.

"I like the ins and outs of a committee like this," she said.

Selectmen took the appointments under advisement.

Harbor vacancy filled

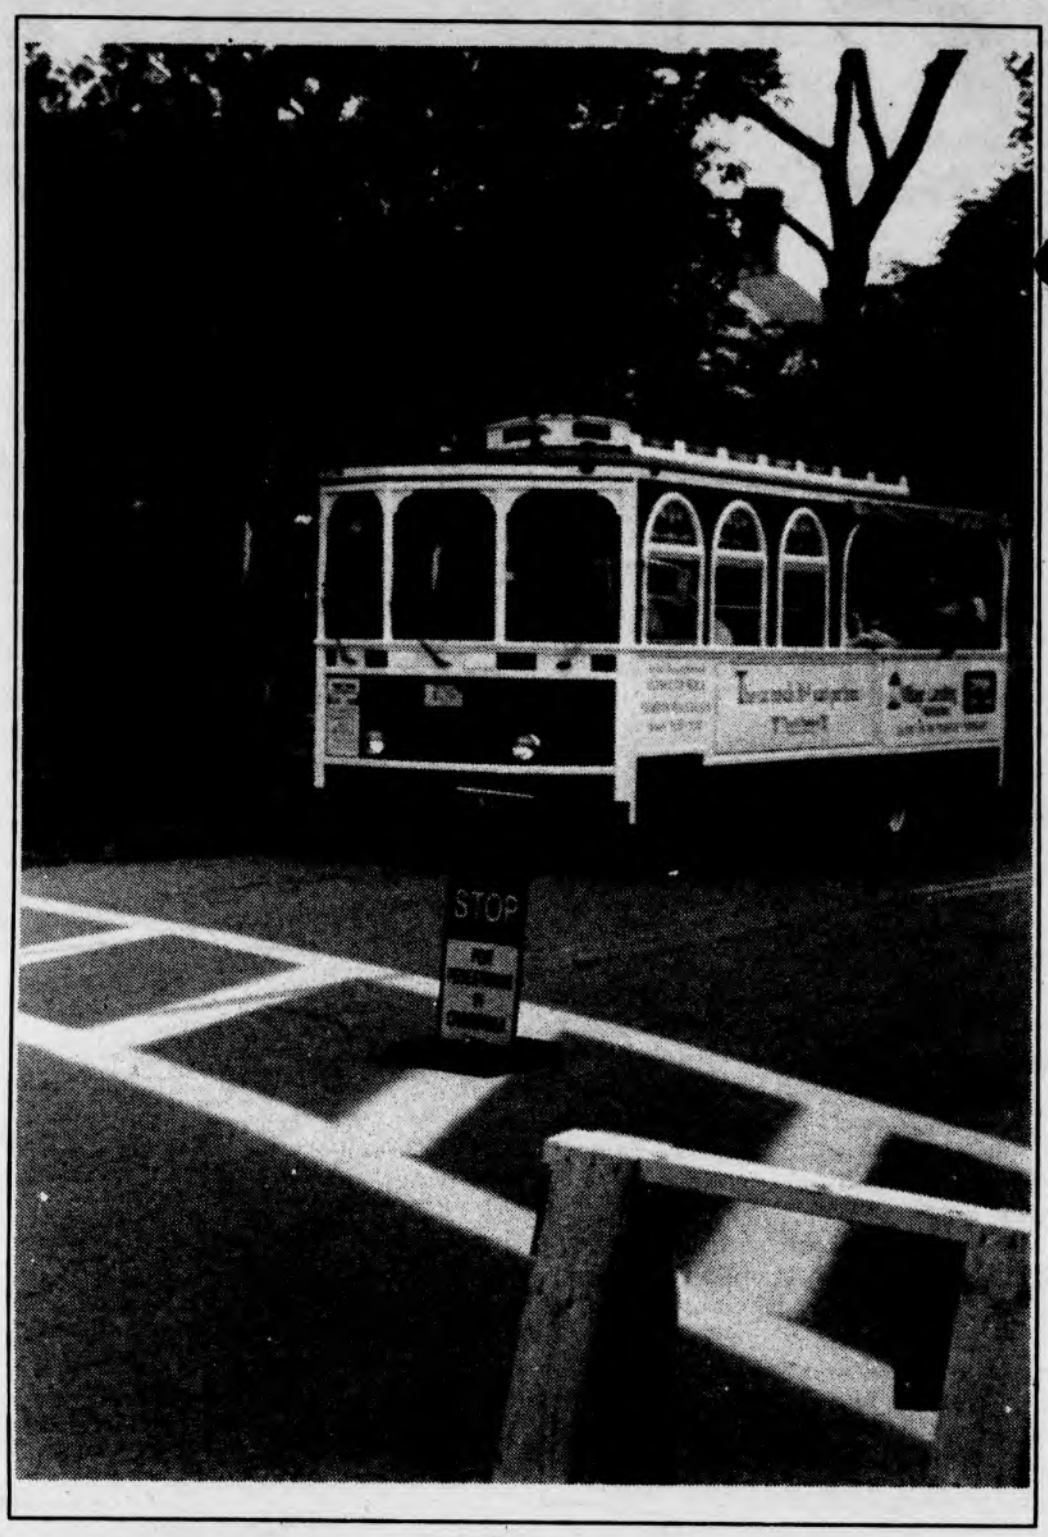
Selectmen unanimously appointed Scott Herzog, 37 Church St., to fill the vacancy on the town's harbor committee reserved for a commercial fisherman.

Fishermen Manuel Salvador, Paul Figueiredo, Herbert Jason, and Matthew Marr also applied to fill the vacancy.

Herzog and Figueiredo were recommended by the harbor committee.

Boards are disbanded

Selectmen voted to disband the Police/Fire Station Renovation Committee, because it had no more work to do; the Miliken/Lillard Field Study Committee because is had been inactive for a long time; and the Solid Waste Committee because its duties have been supplanted by those of the regional solid waste study committee.



The South Shore Art/ Harborfest trolley makes stops on North Main Street during the town-wide event last week. The trolley shuttled some of the estimated 15,000 or so visitors from the Music Circus parking lot to the village and back again.

Cohasset's week

Signs update

Although Selectman Michael H. Sullivan asked the board to table discussion on the pedestrian crossing signs until he could "work the issue" the board did receive letters regarding the signs.

Linda Keller of Cushing Road asked selectmen not to abandon the signs.

"We still need the extra protection from these signs," she wrote. "As a frequent walker, I can testify that there is a huge improvement in crosswalk awareness with the use of the signs. It is a slow process to train drivers in the appropriate behavior and I feel that it is imperative that we continue having the signs in the crosswalk where they are the most visible."

She also said that in the summer months, the signs are more critical than ever because children's use of the crosswalks will increase while school is out. Keller also said that summer traffic includes summer people and college students who have "absolutely no awareness of the locations of our crosswalks or the expected protocol at these crossings."

Jack Worley, recreation department director, asked the board if the recreation department's staff could have three crosswalk signs to use. One for the Ripley Road crosswalk at the Osgood School and one for the Sohier Street crosswalk across from Deer Hill School. The third would be for a proposed new crosswalk on Sohier Street near the Osgood School parking lot.

He said this summer the recreation department is operating two playground sites for seven-weeks.

"Would it be possible to have the Highway Department paint a crosswalk on Sohier Street, west of the entrance to the Osgood School parking lot?" Worley wrote.

"Every half-hour there are groups of young children, aged three-to-seven, whom we must walk to and from swim lessons at the swim center. A crosswalk and crosswalk sign would enhance the safety of both children and staff members," he said.

In a letter to the editor this week Owen O'Malley, 29 Sohier St., requested crosswalks and signs by St. Anthony's Church.

Raise for accountant

In an unanimous vote, selectmen approved a four percent raise for town accountant Michael Buckley, whose current pay is $35,000.

Asst. H'masters ok'd

Selectmen appointed Robert D. Baggs and Howard Hunt as assistant harbormasters for one year. Both men were recommended by Harbormaster Irving Gadow.

Officers appt'ed

Selectmen approved the appointment of the following 12 Democrats as election officers: Ronald Goodwin, Fred Koed, Joan McAuliffe, John McNabb, Ann Leonard, Debby Protulis, Barbara Valovic, Anthony Finegan, John Packard, Ellyn Packard, Patricia Laugelle, and Chartis Langmaid. The names were submitted by Langmaid who is Democratic town committee chair.

Both the Republican and Democratic town committees are asked to submit lists of election officers to the town clerk's office.
